It is a Real Pleasure

To us to hear the many kindly appreciative remarks which come to us daily from wearers of the modern glasses which we are now supplying. They are certainly the finest ever produced, and they recommend themselves by whomsoever used. Mr. Browett, Optical Specialist, makes a most thorough examination of the eyes, and is most careful of the adjustment, so that in every particular they are made to suit the exact needs of each eye, and the facial features of the wearer. In fact these glasses are useless unless the examiner has had sufficent experience in refracting and adapting. Accuracy, Suitability and Best Value are foundation principles upon which our Optical Business grows.

CROSSED CHANNEL TWICE AND DID NOT ALIGHT

Hon. Chas. Stewart Rolls the Hero—Bleriot is Outdone and Britain's Reputation in the Air is Vindicated for Rolls Used Wright Machine.

Dover, Eng., June 3.—The Hon. Charles Stewart Rolls, captain in the London section of the army motor reserve, driving a Wright biplane, vindicated Anglo-Saxon aeronautics by crossing the English Channel twice last evening without alighting.

He made the round trip between Dover and Calais in 90 minutes.

While two Frenchmen, Louis Bleriot and Count de Lesseps, have crossed the channel in an aeroplane, it remained for an Englishman to perform the double feat. The distance across between the two points named is 21 miles, so that his over-water flight of 42 miles without a stop establishes a new record.

Captain Rolls left Dover at 6.30 o'clock. The atmospheric conditions were excellent. He lost no time in manoeuvring, but after describing a circle headed towards the coast of France. In anticipation of the flight torpedo boats steamed at full speed across the straits, but the pace of the aeroplane was swifter.

Captain Rolls sent his machine to a height of 800 feet, and at that altitude he skimmed through the air like a great bird.

The motor worked perfectly. The crowd which watched the start confidently awaited the return, and it was not long before the speck, which those who had telescopes saw disappear on the French coast, reappeared, grower larger with every minute.

When finally the aviator became visible to the naked eye, cheer after cheer arose from the enthusiastic spectators, and as he gracefully soared toward the landing place made famous by Bleriot, he was given an ovation. He alighted at eight o'clock at almost the same spot as Bleriot, showing little signs of the strain of his magnificent flight.

Captain Charles S. Rolls, of the London section of the army motor reserve has successively followed the sports of bicycling, automobiling, ballooning and aeroplaning. At Cambridge University he was the captain of the bicycle team. Later he competed successfully in numerous automobile competitions, and was awarded the gold medal for his performance in the 1,000 miles trial of 1900 in England. He drove as the representative of Great Britain in the Gordon Bennett race of 1905. Several times he broke the world's record for speed.

Captain Rolls has made more than 160 balloon ascensions. Taking up the sport of heavier-than-air machines he made a flight with Wilbur Wright at Lemans in October, 1908. On May 27 last he started to make the cross-channel flight, but he had gone but a few yards when his engine failed him and the attempt was abandoned.

MACKENZIE HOME AGAIN

President of C.N.R. Discusses Railway Plans.

Montreal, June 3.—William Mackenzie, president of the Canadian Northern Railway, who arrived yesterday from London, stated last evening that during the present year the western end of the railway would be well under way, the distance pretty well covered between Edmonton and the Rockies, a good start made on the section around the north shore of Lake Superior, and that he hoped before four years had expired the entire main line would be completed from Montreal and Toronto to the Pacific Ocean.

Mr. Mackenzie made no attempt to hide the fact of his splendid financial success, both in London and Brussels, adding that the King's death was solely the cause of the failure of the public to subscribe for the Dunsmuir coal mine flotation.

The president explained, however, that underwriting was not as it used to be. As it is really an investment, the underwriters of the coal proposition are not by any means apprehensive as to the ultimate absorption of the entire capital by good investors. Mr. Mackenzie wanted it to be understood, however, that the Duluth Railway proposition had since been offered to the public and more than subscribed, explaining that this road is now built from Fort Frances on the main line of the C.N.R., about 100 miles, to a place called Virginia, and that the remaining section of 70 miles to the port of Duluth will be completed by next spring, thus giving the Canadian Northern system an independent line over their own rails from the plans of the great west to Duluth, as well as another route to Fort William.

As for the Brandon coal mining proposition, in which Belgian capitalists have interested themselves, with the Mackenzie and Mann, the president said that these coal deposits were located 140 miles west of Red Deer, and would be connected by a branch 140 miles, to be extended from the Canadian Northern Edmonton and Calgary road. This railway will be started at once and pushed forward to completion.

Mr. Mackenzie announced that the work on the Pacific coast section, if not already started, would be within a very few days and the section west of Edmonton would also be pretty well covered during the present year.

BIGGER STIPENDS NEEDED

Western Report at Assembly Calls For More Help—A Lengthy Discussion.

Halifax, N.S., June 3.—A somewhat lengthy discussion as to procedure followed the request made by Dr. Ratcliffe of St. Catharines to the Presbyterian Assembly yesterday afternoon that the moderator appoint a select committee to advise the standing committee on certain matters to come under the attention of the moral and social reform leaders. No doubt it has reference to the "Aylesworth issue." Dr. Ratcliffe is convener of the committee on bills and overtures.

The moderator ruled that it ought first to go before the committee. "It is an extraordinary document to put into my hands," he said. Judge Forbes of St. John, moved, seconded by Rev. Dr. Pringle, that it go into the committee.

"Because of the moral issues involved a most careful consideration of the subject should be given as a preliminary treatment," said Dr. Patrick.

The assembly then proceeded with augmentation reports. This subject refers to the weak church trying to enjoy the services of a minister. Rev. W. H. Spencer introduced the eastern report. Last year $10,738 was received to aid the cause. There had been four congregations raised to self-support during the year. The fund had had an honorable career in nursing 61 congregations to the self-sustaining stage. These weak churches give an average of $1.07 more per member for stipend than that of the whole synod.

The eastern section committe of the fund recommend, in view of the continuous increase in the cost of living, that steps be taken to raise the minimum stipend to $850 with free house.

The western section reported progress that was most encouraging. Receipts had totalled $43,363.74, sufficient to give a bonus of $12.50 to all augmented ministers. The reserve fund totals $30,698.45.

"The time has come for an advance in stipends all along the line if the church is not to be seriously hampered in her work," said the report.

Two lively issues came as the recommendations were considered. They referred to the rules governing the minimum necessary to be given by each communicant, before the full grant of the committee could be given.

The moderator: "That seems a tax on piety. A revival would ruin the church financially."

KILLED AT CROSSING

Welland, June 3.—An accident happened at Fenwick, near Welland, on Wednesday evening, in which Miss Sarah Freure of Wellandport, aged 31 years, was instantly killed and Miss Thompson of Boyle had a miraculous escape.

The two young ladies were diving in a buggy, and just as they were crossing the T., H. & B. Railway tracks a special train running at a high rate of speed came upon them. The train struck the vehicle. Miss Freure jumped from the rig and was instantly killed. The horse was killed and the buggy wrecked, but Miss Thompson, who remained in the buggy, escaped unhurt.

BAPTISTS IN SESSION

Chatham, June 3.—Fully 300 delegates attended the convention of the Western Association of Baptist Churches in this city yesterday. A. McNee of Windsor gave an instructive talk on western missions, followed by a convention of moral and social reform, conducted by Rev. Dr. Hughson of Windsor. He pointed out that the church is not doing her part in this movement, and he advocated the institution of local option campaigns under the direct charge of the church.

The following were elected new officers: Moderator, M. Houston, Chatham; treasurer, H. Monroe, Wallaceburg; clerk, R. T. Roberts of Cleveland.

FROM BRIDGE TO DEATH

St. Thomas, June 3.—Allie Dallyn, the daughter of Edwin Dallyn, painter, was killed by falling off the Wabash Railway bridge yesterday morning. She was on her way up town when a yard engine met her on the structure, and in order to avoid being struck, sat down on the ties. She undoubtedly lost her balance and fell to the ground, a distance of about 80 feet, dying almost instantly. Miss Dallyn was an artist of much promise. The accident happened within a few feet of the place where Richard Rock's body was found two weeks ago. Miss Dallyn frequently crossed the bridge.

THE LONDON CONFERENCE

[illegible] two hours of balloting Rev. Reuben Millyard of Goderich was elected president of the London Methodist Conference at the first general session yesterday afternoon. The new president has spent forty years in the London Conference. In accepting the new position he referred in a feeling manner to his bereavement of the past year, the death of his wife, regretting that she was not present to witness the honor which he appreciated so highly.

R. H. Barnby was overwhelmingly elected secretary.

Earl Grey Off to England.

Ottawa, June 3.—Earl Grey will leave for England next week, and it is anticipated that he will return to Canada by the Canadian warship Niobe, which will arrive at Halifax early in July.

The occasion of the arrival of the Niobe will be somewhat of national demonstration. Hon. L. P. Brodeur and Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux will be present as representing the Government.

DEED OF A CRAZY MAN

St. Paul Minn., June 3.—P. J. Gibbons, a live stock commission man, who shot and killed his wife at their home and then went to the residence of Father E. J. Walsh and killed him on his doorstep, is out of his mind. For three days he had been confined to a drinking cure sanitarium and he left it despite the protests of the doctors. There had been several estrangements between Gibbons and his wife, and Father Walsh had each time successfully intervened as peacemaker.

Warned Chinese Legations.

Peking, June 3.—There was a stir in the diplomatic quarters yesterday following the receipt at each of the foreign legations of an anonymous circular letter in which the writer declared that an anti-dynastic revolution was about to occur, and warned the diplomats not to take side with the Manchus. The Chinese imperial family is of Manchu origin, the dynasty dating from 1644.

They Were Surprised

On Sunday Fish Inspector Ed. Fleming visited below the dam, near where some boys were catching suckers with their hands, and on examining the bushes close by discovered a fine ten pound 'lunge wrapped up in a newspaper. The boys did not appear to know that there was a real fish so close, and seemed surprised.—Hastings Star.

THIS WILL BE A FINE TRIP; A COMMISSION IS NAMED

Prominent Canadians to go on a Tour to Foreign Countries in Search of Knowledge Regarding Technical Education—The Names of the Commissioners and History.

Ottawa, June 3.—The following have been appointed members of the royal commission on industrial training and technical education:

James W. Robertson, LL.D., of Montreal, chairman.

Hon. John N. Armstrong, of North Sydney, N.S.

Dr. George Bryce of Winnipeg.

M. Gaspard Deserres of Montreal.

Gilbert M. Murray of Toronto.

David Forsythe of Berlin, Ont.

James Simpson of Toronto.

The secretary and reporter to the commission will be Thomas Bengough of Toronto.

The commissioners are empowered to pursue the investigations at such localities as may appear necessary in the Dominion of Canada, in Great Britain, the United States, France, Germany and, subject to the Minister of Labor, elsewhere on the Continent of Europe.

It is stated by the Department of [illegible] bodies which have been most active in urging upon the Government the necessity of appointing a commission on technical education are the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, and in appointing Dr. Murray and Mr. Simpson, the Government felt that it had given to these important bodies virtually their own nominee. Mr. Simpson is regarded here as having a wider knowledge of technical education than any other labor representative in the Dominion.

It is expected that the commission will enter upon its labors early in July. A start will be made by making a tour of the Dominion from the Atlantic to the Pacific, after which the commission will visit the United States, Great Britain, Germany, France, and any other countries thought necessary. It is expected that at least a year will be required for this work. The commissioners will give their undivided time and attention to the work of the commission.

Prof. J. W. Robertson, C.M.G., is a Scotchman, 53 years of age, who came to Canada in 1875; was professor of dairying at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, 1886-90, when he was appointed dairy commissioner for Canada, while from 1895 till 1904 he was commissioner of agriculture and dairying. He has been in receipt of numerous honorary degrees and appointments.

Prof. Bryce is the founder of Manitoba College. He is 66 years of age, a native of Mount Pleasant, Ont., and a graduate of Toronto University and Knox College. Gilbert M. Murray is secretary of the Toronto branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

Ex-Ald. Gaspard Deserres is a wealthy citizen of Montreal, who is one of the directors of the technical school there.

Prohibit Telegraph Franks.

Washington, June 3.—A number of important amendments to the railroad bill were adopted by the Senate yesterday. The provision including the telegraph companies within the scope of the interstate commerce law was modified so as to prohibit the granting of telegraph franks and permitting special rates on press despatches.

THIS WILL BE A BIG AFFAIR

Montreal, June 3.—That the Montreal aviation meet, which will take place from June 28 to July 4, will be the biggest thing of the kind ever held on this side of the Atlantic is the promise of the manager, E. M. Wilcox. The sum of $50,000 is to be offered in prizes, and the Wright Brothers intend making a trial for the greater part of it, as they have, through their manager, Roy Knabenshue, entered five machines in the different contests.

An agent is [illegible] contracts with noted French aviators, and their entries are expected before the end of the week. Mr. Wilcox is also interested in a meet to be held in Toronto later in the month of July.

BURGLARS AT OAKVILLE

Oakville, June 3.—On Monday night or early Tuesday morning, burglars entered the houses of ex-Mayor Helley, Rev. T. W. B. Broughall, W. S. Wood, Herbert Heaven and W. T. Fleury. Several articles were stolen, but nothing taken was of great value. An attempt was also made to get into H. L. Read's house, but they were frightened away before they effected an entrance. It is suspected that it was the same gang that robbed all the houses, but the chief of police has not yet any clue to their identity.

BORDEN ON RECIPROCITY

"We ought not to place ourselves in any position by any negotiations which would hamper our future fiscal action with regard to any country in the world.

"Especially we ought not to enter any negotiations as will prevent the consummation of that great idea which Mr. Chamberlain presented to the people of the British Isles and to the people of the empire some few years ago, and which I hope may have its consummation and realization before many years are passed. I think it would be a fatal mistake for the Government of this country, whatever party might be in power, to embark upon any such negotiations as would hamper or prevent the consummation of that great deal.

"I desire as much as any man may desire the extension of the trade of this country, but I desire also the maintenance of our own industries in this country, the maintenance of our own fiscal autonomy, the maintenance of our own industries in this country, agricultural, industrial, and of every other description.

THE DOCTOR AND THE NURSE

The Canadian Medical Association is in session in Toronto. This association is composed of doctors from all over the Dominion. Members are present who ride in their automobiles or have their coachmen drive them as they make their calls.

And then we have the country doctor. he was there, that real hero of whom little is said, or who seldom is known outside his little area of practice.

Is it raining, the rain makes no difference. Is it dark and the drive long and the roads heavy? He does not hesitate. Is it in the dead of winter, is the hour late, and has he just fallen asleep? There is a ring at the bell. Some one needs him at once. So he dresses and drives perhaps with the glass at zero, or many degrees below. The patient may be poor and never pay him. The distressed one may not be so very ill after all, but he goes just the same out from his bed, out into the night.

He has no one to hitch his horse for him. He has no one to stable him again on his return. He is coachman and stableman combined, this country doctor.

The profession is a noble one even if it does veil itself in words too hard for the layman to understand, and clothe itself, a close corporation, closer and tighter than any trade union ever could hope to be.

And hand in hand in the work of healing, is that good angel of God, the trained nurse, who with soft step and gentle touch, soothes the sick, and who in league with the physician, fights death and endeavors to bring back the bloom of health again. To the nurse is often the weary waiting of the night and the hoping for the change in the morning.

HATS

He sat in church last Sunday and looked towards the preacher. But the preacher could not be seen. There were hats in front. However, after much effort he saw the clergyman's right ear and by persistent moving his head to and fro, he caught a glimpse of the minister's full face. But it was only for a minute and all was blotted out save a vision of the parson's nose. Now how can a man enjoy a sermon with only a glimpse of an ear and nose, no matter how eloquent the preacher.

He, the indignant subscriber, who faithfully pays his mite every Sunday is mad and declares he will go fishing unless he can see.

But the task is a hopeless one, boys will be boys and ladies will wear hats answering fashion's imperious decree no matter how wide they may be, how high, or how many bows or ribbons they carry.

The subscriber being a single man does not understand human nature. Is it unkind to say that the attraction that takes many of the gentle sex to church is to see what her friends are wearing. Some heartless husbands say so.

A clergyman in the United States was confronted by the hat problem and placarded the front of the church with requests for the ladies to "kindly remove their hats." But the [illegible] them on and to-day this clergyman is preaching to as fine an array of millinery as one would wish to see, while the men are having glimpses of an ear and nose and once in a while the vision of the full face of the speaker.

AN INCIDENT

An event which depended much on publicity took place a few days ago, and in the showers of thanks not a single drop fell upon the press of Peterborough. However, newspapers are not fed by thanks, nor paid by words. Yet, had the press not given lavish attention to this affair it would have been a splendid example of failure. The public generally do not appreciate the offices of the newspaper.

CLEAN UP

Don't let that fence fall down. Straighten it up, and put on a coat of paint. Those shutters, too, would look better if they were painted. There are weeds in your back yard, sir, and that boulevard is a disgrace. There is nothing makes a town look better than front yards tidy, and nothing makes a home healthier than back yards clean. The neighbors admire the man who has ambition to keep his place tidy, and the flies—the winged angels of death and sickness—fly on to the first spot where there is a welcome waiting them, some garbage barrel uncovered, some choice smell. The mosquitos, too, are fond of sloppy back yards. It gives them an appetite. They, too, breed in sloppy places.

THE FASCINATION OF THE FALLS

The season for suicide at Niagara Falls has commenced. It usually opens with the ball games, and stops at the close of navigation. Three bodies have been recovered from beneath the rapids within a very brief time. If one is determined to die nothing beats the Falls. It is sure and sudden. Carbolic acid is painful, rough on rats and Paris green are agonizing, and hanging is slow work. So the people visit the Falls to snuff out their little candle, to have their battered remains pulled out and the news of the finding wired broadcast.

There is something romantic in standing by the Falls and listening to their booming and watching the spray as it scatters. There is an hypnotism, a fascination that often suggests to the sanest mind to jump.

From all parts of the world come these suicides. Many the notes have been left on the banks telling their farewell story. Disappointments in love, unhappily married, the victims of financial loss, drink or incurable disease, it is from these ranks that they come. The rich and the poor, the youth, middle and old age take the step forgetting that just as likely as not, had they only waited, their sun would shine again.

THE POINT OF VIEW
Extraordinary, Varied, Vivid
(Witness.)

The world grows more extraordinarily vivid and varied and interesting every day. There never was such a present and future. Mr. Edison tells us that electricity is as yet a mere puling infant, and that it is going to do hundreds and thousands of things as it grows up that will require names we have at present no conception of.

Get Busy

Royal Birthdays
(Winnipeg Tribune.)

If we hear much more about royal and semi-royal birthday celebrations we are afraid that we shall have to ask the royal house to hold a conference and bunch the holidays. Royal birthdays are all right if regulated and kept within reasonable bounds; but when busy men are obliged to remember and "celebrate" the birthdays of loyal and overworked wives and of dutiful children, it is apt to produce that "tired feeling" that the doctors speak of, to be called upon too frequently to celebrate royal birthdays.

Growing in Toleration
(Globe.)

Britain's King will no longer be expected to make an offensive declaration against the religious faith of any of his subjects, which shows that the Empire is growing in toleration as well as in wealth and power.

"I always put a card addressed to myself among 'em. If I don't get it the next day, I know. And it only costs a cent."

For the Liberals Eye
(Financial American.)

The National Fireproofing Co. announces the formation of the National Fireproofing Co., of Canada, Ltd., incorporated at $1,000,000. The greater part of the capital will be expended immediately in the erection of a plant at Hamilton, Ont., where 125 acres of land have been acquired. The manufacture of fireproof tile for large buildings will be begun when the new works are completed, next January. It is given out that the Canadian duty on the products of the company—25 per cent.—is so great that the factories on this side of the line cannot sell at a profit across the border. Freight rates also were a factor in the decision to establish a plant across the line to handle all Canadian orders.

The FREE COUPON Buys Your Family Dessert

Take the Coupon below to your grocer and get a package of our latest and greatest creation—Mooney's Sugar Wafers—Canada's finest delicacy—absolutely free. We will pay your grocer the full retail price of this delicious dessert.

So confident are we that you will be delighted with our latest confection—Mooney's Sugar Wafers—that we are willing to pay for the first package. When you taste them once, you'll buy them often. Never before has such a delicious dessert graced your table—never before has such an appetizing and toothsome delicacy been offered you. Mooney's Sugar Wafers are the last word—the best word in the bakers' art. Years of experiment—of unexcelled reputation—are back of this biscuit. Yet they cost no more than common kinds.

Mooney's Sugar Wafers are created by Canada's master-bakers—of the finest and costliest materials—in an airy, sunlit, sanitary factory.

Your Meal is Incomplete Without Mooney's Sugar Wafers

It's interesting work—this Mooney Method of biscuit making. In making Mooney Sugar Wafers we use flour that is a special blend of hard spring wheat for nourishment and soft winter wheat for flavor. The most reliable dairymen in Western Ontario supply us with the purest and sweetest butter and cream daily. We get their best, because we pay top prices. We could pay a third less for these ingredients, but we couldn't keep the Mooney high quality standard intact. This would be poor economy—you know this.

When you get your first package of Mooney's Sugar Wafers you'll observe how crispy and flaky the double layers are—how snappy and enticing the exquisite cream between the layers is. Each wafer is a delicious sweetmeat sandwich that fairly melts in your mouth.

Mooney's Sugar Wafers are made in the largest and brightest bakery in Canada. Here we have over 200 trained employees—640 windows—3 miles of floor space. The single special equipment for producing Mooney's Sugar Wafers cost us over $20,000. We even ship our products in our own specially built private cars, so they are of even temperature in transit. When you open the dainty, dust and damp-proof package, the biscuits are fresh, crisp and appetizing—just as they come from the ovens. No other biscuit manufacturer in the country goes to this trouble and expense—but it's part of the Mooney Method of biscuit making. When you taste Mooney's Sugar Wafers for the first time you will know how delicious they really are. The luscious cream centers are made in many flavors—from real fruits.

Try The Taste Test On Mooney's Sugar Wafers

Today at luncheon or dinner, instead of serving the usual dessert, try Mooney's Sugar Wafers. Let their exquisite taste today, decide your desserts of the future. As an adjunct to the social hour; as a delightful accompaniment to ices or beverages—no other dessert confection will prove so charming as Mooney's Sugar Wafers.

It is no longer necessary to spend much money and hours of time making desserts that "might be good," when you can spend little money and no time for a dessert that's always good—Mooney's Sugar Wafers.

MOONEY'S SUGAR WAFERS

The Dessert Your Guests Will Like

Six years ago we gave to the Dominion a better Soda Cracker—better flavored—better made. Today Mooney's Perfection Cream Sodas are the standard. Millions of good Canadians from coast to coast eat them. You have heard of biscuits—read of biscuits—eaten biscuits—but until you try Mooney's Perfection Cream Sodas you don't know biscuits. They are everything that the ideal biscuit should be. Mooney on a soda cracker means "goodness."

Every year, since we started business in 1903, we have had to enlarge our factory to meet the increasing demand for Mooney's Perfection Cream Sodas. A little better flour—a little richer butter—a little finer bakery—a little more care in baking—all these are details of the Mooney Method of biscuit making.

It's with this record of perfection in biscuit production that we offer what we believe is our greatest creation—Mooney's Sugar Wafers. The coupon entitles you to a package FREE. All we ask is that you purchase a 25 cent package of Mooney's Perfection Cream Sodas from your grocer. This is to insure our new dessert reaching responsible people, like yourself, who are undoubtedly already acquainted with the high standard of quality maintained by us. The first package of Mooney's Sugar Wafers is "our treat." TRY THEM TODAY.

OFFICERS MUST BE PROTECTED

Said Magistrate Edmison in Sentencing Harvey Windover to Three Months in Jail

In sentencing Harvey Windover to one month in jail for the assault which he committed upon the wife of Nelson Windover, of Cavendish, by pointing a loaded rifle and threatening to shoot her, Magistrate Edmison said that he did not feel disposed to inflict any severe penalty. The woman had shown herself to be anything but a proper woman.

While the offence which he committed was a serious one, the circumstances in connection with the whole affair were such that he did not think that the prisoner should be severely dealt with.

In passing judgment of a sentence of three months in jail for his assault on County Constable Dickson, His Worship held that there was no good excuse for the prisoner's conduct. Officers in the discharge of their duty must be protected.

The sentences will run consecutively.

G. N. Gordon, who was present in the interests of the prisoner asked that the sentence date from May 13th, Windover having been in jail since that time, but His Worship did not consent.

Windover was also bound over to keep the peace for a period of twelve months.

HOME FROM THE WEST

Mr and Mrs. Fred Roy have returned from a three months' visit to the west.

In their trip they visited all the larger western cities and towns, including St. Paul, Chicago, Minneapolis and Seattle.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy left here on the 14th February, and spent a few days at each of the numerous places they visited, thus avoiding the inconvenience of continuous travelling.

In speaking of Vancouver Mr. Roy was very enthusiastic and was surprised at the extraordinary boom in real estate that is taking place in that city.

Victoria also came in for great praise, and Mr. Roy was so much impressed with the afflunce and prosperity in that city that he referred to it as a City of Aristocrats. The beauty of this city is almost unsurpassable.

Former Peterborough citizens who are now living in the west all appear to be doing well, and at once place Mr. Roy met betwen forty and fifty. In company with some former Peterborough ladies and gentlemen Mr. Roy and Mrs. Roy enjoyed the privilege of going over the steamer Empress of Japan, and he secured a good snapshot of the group he was with.

Mr. Roy reports that labor conditions in British Columbia are in a satisfactory condition.

Mr. C. B. McAllister, formerly of this city, travels for the Alberta Milling Co., and is very succesfsul. He is also interested in some large fruit farms. Altogether Mr. and Mrs. Roy are highly delighted with the west and their trip through it.

The E. Culver Co. of Pittsburg, sued the Buffalo Cold Storage Co., to recover $2,300, paid on a carload of eggs, which were putrid, and were awarded $1,800.

ST. JOHN'S TOWER SUITABLE FOR PROPOSED CHIMES

"The tower will stand anything you can put in it," was the statement of Mr. F. P. Lotz, secretary of the firm of Meneely & Co., of Wateroliet, N.Y., U.S.A., and manufacturers of church bells, peals and chimes, to Rev. Canon Davidson and reporters of the evening papers, who were gathered in the tower of St. John's church this morning.

Mr. Lotz is here in the interests of the firm and he imparted considerable information in regard to the proposed undertaking to install chimes at the church. Some alterations will have to be made to the tower at a cost not exceeding $150. The present floor will have to be lowered some distance.

The proposed chimes, consisting of eleven bells, will begin at 2,500 pounds and vary down to 270 pounds.

They would be operated by means of ropes reaching to the second floor and the system by means of which the different notes are struck is simple, each rope having a number to correspond with a note. Such a man as Mr. Butcher, the present sexton, would ring the chimes with no trouble whatever.

The manufacturers use a bronze hammer, believing that the tone is improved.

Chimes vary in tone according to weight and their composition and Mr. Lotz claims that the chimes as manufactured by his firm and as proposed for Peterborough, would be entirely satisfactory.

ST. JOHN'S OLD CLOCK

Still Remains in the Tower But Has Not Moved for Seventy Years

How many people in Peterborough remember the old clock at St. John's church. It is only a matter of looking back about seventy-five years. Mr. Butcher, the sexton, remembers the clock. It was in operation for about twelve years, having been placed in position when the church was built. The mechanism of the timepiece, entirely of wood, is still in the tower. It had but one dial.

The present bell began its duty in 1873 and was recast in 1892.

Frosts Hurt Fruit Trees

There is a possibility of a fruit famine in Michigan this season. At least, such was the report of Mr. Thomas Harrison, who has returned from visiting his brother who is proprietor of an extensive fruit farm in Michigan, U. S.

Very late frosts have been prevalent in the State of Michigan this season, and as a result the trees and buds were so badly nipped as to check their growth, and many were completely destroyed.

Mr. Harrison's brother also stated that the price of peaches, plums and other fruits as a result, would also be much higher than in previous years.

His brother also ships large quantities of fruit to all the large cities and towns of the United States and Canada.

WILL TESTIFY AS TO TRAIN'S SPEED

The only evidence to be given at the Feeley inquest at the city Council Chamber to-night at 8 o'clock will be that of four witnesses who live in the vicinity of the accident by which the little girl met her death.

A VIEW FROM ST. JOHN'S

The sun shone out from a cloud just as the representative of the Review looked out from St. John's tower this morning, shone out and went under again. In the distance sparkled Little Lake, a small silver sea set in a trimming of trees, and near by rose the towers, the shafts from God's Acre, the silent City of the Dead. Beneath the city lay, a moving, pulsing city of 18,000 souls.

In the distance was the farm land green, with here and there the trees, the woodland, the home of the birds. But down beneath was Peterborough, the home of industry, and from the Canadian General Electric factories and from other factories the chimneys rose, telling the story of industry by their pall of smoke.

CONDITIONS CITY IMPOSES ARE NOT SATISFACTORY

To Quaker Oats Company in Connection With the Construction of Their Railway Siding—Engineer and Council on Visit of Inspection to Scene of Proposed Line.

The committee of the whole council last night expressed its approval of the formation of the committee of three on Tuesday to co-operate with municipalities interested in the early completion of the Trent Canal.

The agreement under which the C. G.E. is to acquire for twenty years the use of the waterworks dam, was approved of by the committee.

Mr. W. H. Denham, superintendent of the Quaker Oats mills, wrote the committee, stating the agreement prepared by the city solicitor and by which the Quaker Oats Company were to be granted the right to build a C. P.R. siding across Murray street and along the waterfront, was not satisfactory to the company.

The opinion was expressed in the discussion that the company had not been prompt enough in signing papers of arrangement left with them by the city.

Ald. Duffus thought the company should be asked to build a safe and adequate walk across the new dam at London street.

The question of the spur line was left with the city engineer, who will report on frogs and switches, and who accompanied by the council, visited the scene of the construction this morning at 10.30.

On motion of Ald. Turner and Ald. Morgan it was decided to ask the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Company and the Peterborough Light and Power Company to sign, at an early date, their contracts with the city.

LEASH CLAUSE WITHDRAWN FROM THE DOG BY-LAW

Dogs Will Have to be Accompanied by "Competent" Person—Dog Pound Will be Secured—Increase in License Fees.

After a long respite the dog by-law again came up before the committee of the whole council last night. The clause over which there was so much discussion, the leash clause, was struck out of the by-law, as City Solicitor E. H. D. Hall thought it would be wise to have this clause revoked. He didn't think it was law and cited a case of its being declared illegal recently by a Hamilton judge.

Dogs must be accompanied, the by-law now reads, by a competent person and dogs running after horses, bicycles, buggies and other vehicles classed as nuisances and their owners are liable to be fine for maintaining a nuisance, on complaint being made to a justice of the peace or a magistrate.

Commencing July 1st the license for dogs will be $3 and for bitches $5.

On motion of Ald. Turner and Duffus, it was decided that the Property Committee should get a suitable dog pound and that the police be instructed to enforce the by-law as amended.

G.T.R. ENGINEER KEMP KILLED AT BELLVILLE THIS MORNING

G.T.R. Engineer Kemp was instantly killed at Belleville this morning.

While standing beside his engine, which was attached to a freight train just ready to pull out with a load of merchandise, No. 5 passenger train rushed in and, before Kemp could avoid it, he was struck by the cylinder at the side of the engine and instantly killed.

The late Engineer Kemp was a comparatively young man, and was only married a couple of years ago.

He was a bright, capable engineer, and well liked by his fellow railway men. He leaves a wife and two small children to mourn his loss.

PIGEONS LATE IN ARRIVING

Will Not Reach Here Until Next Friday—Will be be Liberated on Following Sunday

The homing pigeons, which were to have been liberated at Armour's hill Sunday morning, will not arrive here until June 10th, and will be set free on the following Sunday. The pigeons have just passed through a hard race, in which storms were encountered, and the owner, Chas. H. Sherin, of New Bedford, Mass., has decided to give them a short rest.

The pigeons will be expressed here to Mr. F. Skitch, of the Canadian Express Company, and will be sent on their long journey on Sunday morning, June 12th.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

The Auburn Dam

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir.—The Review says that Mr. Larmonth chief engineer for the Peterborough Light & Power Co., informs the people of Peterborough that the company has bought the Auburn dam. This dam was offered to the city at the same price, I am told, but the city would not look at it at any price. If it had bought it the city would have been able to control lighting (domestic and city) and power for small users. This would have been too good a snap for the people altogether, so Mayor Morrow's administration let it go to the capitalists. That is always the way. When the city very properly let its surplus power at the waterworks go for the ultimate benefit and employment of the people employed in the C. G.E. and those dependent on them, it should have acquired some other power if it could be got cheap enough, but it never made an effort. Mayor Morrow's administration has let the whole remaining water power of the river disappear into private hands. All public utilities here are now at the mercy of private owners. The silly talk about power from down the Trent being cheap enough did not seem to impress the Peterborough Light and Power Company that way, did it? Besides, as a matter of fact, a great big trust has all powers along the Trent in a tight grip. The idea that the Government can control the rates will surprise people when it works out. We have lost the chance of reducing our home and street lighting to a low figure, and the same remark applies to the transportation of our workpeople, viz., the street railway. Small power users will also have to step up. When will the people wake up?

Yours, &c.,

SPORTING NEWS

SPORTING COMMENT

The organizing of the junior and senior series of a city school baseball league in this city was a good move on the part of those in charge of the respective schools, and no doubt the pupils appreciate the efforts being put forth by those under whose supervision they are being educated for the game in life, which all must play.

Sports are a side issue, but an important department, and in trying to beat the other fellow the pupil should be taught that in taking an unfair advantage or getting the better of his rival by underhand methods is not the act of a true sportsman.

Many people prefer to witness a game of baseball because they feel that they can enjoy the sport without being called upon to see a player injured, perhaps severely, by an opponent.

While baseball players are not, to any great extent, subject to being "split open" or possibly maimed for life, there are many tricks of the game by which players so inclined can get away with a "rough deal."

Presumably the pupils of the schools have been instructed to play the game fairly and squarely. If they follow such instructions it means much for clean sport.

Last evening two teams of juniors played a league game. In one innings a player reached first base and proceeded to "lead off." The opposing first baseman stood on his bag, ready to take a throw. The ball came straight for the baseman and the runner ran back to the base, put out both hands, and deliberately pushed the baseman, not gently, but with such force that he was thrown down and the ball went on its way and through a wire fence into a field. For the interference the umpire called the runner out, and this decision brought the remark, "We won't play" from the leader of the team. The decision held, however, and after a short delay the game was resumed.

The contention is that the example was not a good one to put before the players.

KING EDWARDS HAVE LEAD OF 4

Defeated St. Peter's by 10-6 in First of Home and Home Games for District Honors

There was nothing lazy about the junior school league baseball game at King Edward school grounds yesterday afternoon, when the King Edwards defeated the team from St Peter's by a 10—6 score. It was the first of the home and home games to decide the championship of district No. 1. When long hits and beautiful looking misplays were not being contributed the umpire was kept dodging bouquets, and thus the game was made quite interesting. Nothing suited the losers but the players of the home team, when the victims of a decision abided accordingly without making any further comment.

Both teams took kindly to the shoots of the pitchers and singles and doubles were numerous. O'Brien, for St. Peter's, had a three bagger.

The teams were:—

St. Peter's—Murty, c; Johnston, p; Wolff, 1b; Clancy, 3b; Conroy, rf; Lynch, c; Eano, 2b; O'Brien, ss; Moher, ls.

Score by innings—

King Edwards	0203113	—10
St. Peters	1103100	— 6

Pullman Berth Prices Changed.

Montreal, June 3.—Upper berths $1.50, lower berths $2.50.

Such is the policy of the railway and Pullman officials for declaration before the Railway Commission on the 15th. When the question of sleeping berth rates comes up the officials will acquiesce in the lowering of the tariff for upper berths from two dollars to one dollar and a half for the all-night trip, but will insist upon the raising of the lower berths to $2.50, thus maintaining the revenue for the section at the same figure as now.

Backed Over Bank.

Kingston, June 3.—A thrilling incident occurred at Gananoque, in the rear of the market, when a team of horses attached to a wagon, driven by Wm. Giffin, backed over the high bluff and were precipitated to a sand bank some forty feet below. Giffin had just time to drop the reins and jump as the wagon tottered on the brink. One horse had its hind leg broken and had to be shot. The other animal escaped uninjured.

MEMORY IN FISH.

Striking Results Shown In a Test With Gray Perch.

Even the fishes of the sea have pictures on memory's wall. Experiments have been made with several fishes as to their faculties for remembering, but the most striking results have been obtained with the gray perch, which lives chiefly on small silvery hued sardines. Some of these were taken and colored red and were then put into the tank where the perch was with several silver colored sardines. Of course the normal sardines were at once seized and eaten, but it was not until hungry that the perch made a tentative meal of one of the red colored victims.

On recognizing the sardine flavor, however, he promptly demolished the remainder. Later the perch devoured the sardines irrespective of color, thus showing not only traces of a memory, but also the power to differentiate color.

Subsequently sardines colored red and blue were placed in the tank together with the silver ones. The same scene was repeated, the blue sardines not being attacked until the others were eaten and hunger compelled investigation of the newcomers. After this introduction the perch ate the sardines of all three types without any difficulty.

Some spines of the sea nettle were then fastened to the blue sardines. These were at once avoided by the perch, which promptly got out of the way of the newcomers. This showed traces of memory, as the results of contact with the sea nettle were shown and recognized.—Chicago Tribune.

A. He studied in the office of the late Hon. A. C. Blair in St. John for a time, and later took the degree of B.C.L. at King's College, Windsor. Mr. Mitchell then practiced law with Hon. L. J. VIGOROUS PROTEST AGAINST IMMORAL LITERATURE

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir.—What is becoming one of the greatest evils of the age, and which is doing untold harm, is the circulation of indecent books, post cards, and other literature. The extent to which this is being carried on in Canada does not seem to be realized, otherwise there would be more fundamental measures taken to stop them, such as is now being done in England, where all forms of immoral books, post cards, etc., which have a tendency to demoralize, are being confiscated. As of late so many forms of publications have gone beyond all bounds of decency, this has been gradually creeping in, and has been glossed over as being the correct thing. This has gone so far in England that even some writers with the highest reputation in the past, have veered to the immoral side of life in their late publications. This came to light through a lady who had purchased the late book called "Ann Veronica," written by H. G. Wells, to send to her daughter in South Africa, and after doing so was surprised to receive a letter from her, stating what a funny book she had sent her, and on reading it, found her confidence in the writer had been betrayed, as the book was found to be a very indecent one, and since that the book has been suppressed in England. Now in Canada there seems to be no restriction to the class of book that has been circulated. We have noticed one or two arrests having been made of those who have been caught selling the very obscene French books, which probably have been smuggled into the country. But as to the numerous forms of other books published in England and the United States, that have come to light of late, and which have been suppressed in other countries have been allowed to circulate in Canada without any investigation, as to their moral character. The only thing that seems necessary is for a book to have a catchy title and become known as that of a spicy nature, then its success is assured. Some amongst the class of books which has been largely sought after and circulated through Canada with great success are the ones known as "The Yoke" and "Three Weeks." The latter has also been dramatised, and the play produced through Canada unmolested, until it reached Winnipeg, where the proprietor was arrested, but, through a lenient judge and technicalities, he was set free. It also might be mentioned that the numbers of indecent plays which have been appearing of late can be placed to the writers of such books. They have become more numerous since Bernard Shaw introduced his "Mrs. Warren's Profession," which play was also prohibited in New York. Now, what may account for the increase of immoral books and plays is the demand for them. The writers find them profitable, as seemingly there is a mania or a curiosity for people to read them, therefore, it is evident that they cannot be gotten rid of by public sentiment. What is needed is the strictest censureship and the enforcement of the law. It is not only the immoral feature of the book at the present time, but many of them are filled with coarse and profane language. To these books might be placed the increase of profanity on the stage that has become so prominent.

I had my attention called to two books that were obtained from a library, the title of one was "Teddy From Oxford," written by a woman, and the language was just about the same as what you will hear amongst people in the lowest slums. This one book was withdrawn from the library, but still if there was an investigation made, there can be numbers of worse ones found there. The sellers of books may not be altogether to blame, as seemingly so many of them are tainted, and if they quit selling they may go out of business, but they can do much good by investigating the standard of the books and refusing to sell them. There are numbers of these forms of books also circulated through Canada, by canvassers, some go under the title of "Useful Knowledge," which are simply inspiring and causing the downfall of so many people. There are some of our newspapers who deserve great credit for the stand which they have taken against the immoral books and also the post cards, which have been so boldly circulated throughout the country. What is needed is to form committees such as has been done in England, who have made a thorough investigation where there are libraries, and all places where books are sold.

From the standpoint of classical music the feature number of the band's programme at the first park concert of the season this evening will be Rossini's beautiful overture, "Semeramide." The instrumentation for this selection is magnificent and there are many striking passages for the reeds and brass.

To the older music lovers the "Songs of 1863" will appeal strongly, while the devotees of up-to-the-minute classics will find lots of encouragement to whistle in Arthur Pryor's contagious rag, "Frozen Bill."

The Roman Senate.

The Roman senate had for many centuries but 300 members, selected from the patricians, or aristocrats. The office of senator was for life. The body was practically supreme in matters of legislation and administration. The majority of votes decided a question, and the order in which the voting took place was invariably determined by rank, beginning with the president and ending with the quastors. The senators wore on their tunics a broad purple stripe—a badge of distinction, like a modern decoration—and they had the exclusive right of precedence at theaters, the amphitheater and all other public gatherings.

What She Wanted.

"Are you fond of etchings?" asked the young man who had taken the hostess' pretty niece down to supper.

"As a general thing, yes," she answered, looking up into his eyes with an engaging frankness that threatened havoc to his heart, "but," she added hastily as he started to say something pretty, "not any tonight, thank you; it is rather late. A small piece of cake will be sufficient."

Prima Facie Evidence.

"If," he said to the jury, "you saw a man coming out of a public house wiping his mouth, that would be prima facie evidence that he had been having a drink."

Friendship.

False friendship, like the ivy, decays and ruins the walls it embraces, but true friendship gives new life and animation to the object it supports.

A Sure Market Barred.

"Just think," complained she to a friend, "lately I have written some poems which papa says are very good, but he won't accept them because he doesn't want any one to think he is partial to a contributor from his own family!"

"[illegible] worry? Don't you know there are many other magazines to which you can send them?"

"I know, but papa is such a cinch!"—Woman's Home Companion.

"Always Good to Theatricals."

Mme. Tetrazzini tells an amusing story of her younger days, when she and her sister, also a great and famous singer, were touring and sharing rather humble rooms. After thanking a landlady who had been more kind and considerate than most, the good lady astonished them by looking up from her wash-tub and saying, with benign condescension, "That's all right, my dears. I'm always good to theatricals, for I never know what my own children may come to."

Innocent Girl.

Sarcastic Father—Julia, that young man Smily has been here three nights in succession, and it has been nearly midnight when he left. Hadn't you better invite him to bring his trunk and make his home with us?

Innocent Daughter—Oh, papa! May I? It was just what he wanted, but he was too bashful to ask you. He'll be delighted when I tell him this evening.

At Spokane, Wash., Emma Goldman was thrown from her auto by the impact of a train, and badly bruised.

COMING TO CANADA

Advent of the Olivers an Argument Against Reciprocity

One of the strongest arguments against reciprocity with the United States is furnished by a well-knonw American writer, Elbert Hubbard, who instances the case of the Olivers, of South Bend, Indiana, in the presentation of his contention. This firm of plough manufacturers has recently bought a large tract of land at Hamilton, Ontario, for factory purposes—the first investment for land, dockage, buildings and machinery being over $1,000000. This is only a mere beginning, for before the shipping of ploughs commences the investments for materials, etc., will increase, according to the writer, about twenty-five fold. This means that the firm will build up and maintain a population equal to a city of 25,000 people. The tendency of trade is towards decentralization, he claims, and as a big factory gets so big, when it is enlarged, it must be enlarged as a unit—that is, an entire new plant must be built, duplicating the first. The Olivers had to duplicate their South Bend plant, and while its location would naturally be at their home town, where they control an immense water power and own 1,000 acres of land adjoining their present site, Mr. Hubbard points out that, for eminently sound and safe reasons, a site in Canada is chosen instead. These are that while Canada has only one-tenth of the population of the United States, its available agricultural area is fully as large as that of the Republic. Canada needs ploughs, and has the money to buy them. But she can't buy the South Bend make, on account of the prohibitive tariff.

While the Olivers never before catered to Canadian trade, because they could not, they had a very large business from South America, Europe and the Orient. The Canadian manufacturer, Mr. Hubbard says, is very much better situated to take care of a foreign trade than the American manufacturer for two reasons: First, the United States has no merchant marine, and, second—to quote Mr. Hubbard's words—"We have barred the products of the world in a good many instances, [illegible] bar us.' This the writer defines as commercial reciprocity. It is contended that Russia, for instance, is, in Canadian custom house parlance, "'a favored nation," and that goods made in Canada enter Russia free, but that a high Russian tariff bars United States goods.

The writer also points out that in the making of ploughs six ingredients enter: wood, iron, paint, labor, enterprise and capital; that the United States is getting short of wood, of which Canada has plenty and that the Canadian lumber, which is needed across the line, is kept out by the American tariff. Canada, too, it is held, has large iron beds, practically untouched, and the coal to smelt it. Foodstuffs, too, are cheaper in Canada than in the United States, and this is a cheapening factor in the labor market. Mr. Hubbard finds that the hard-headed business men who are coming here with capital and enterprise are not dreamers or theorists and are simply following the American invasion of our fertile agricultural regions, and he reaches the conclusion that—

"Your capitalist and man of enterprise knows what he is doing. He figures that with the tariff between Canada and the States, as it is the natural resources of Canada practically untapped. Canadian investments are eminently wise and safe.

"Next, in case of any disturbance or change in tariff relations either up or down, or wiped out entirely, with free trade between the countries, he is still safe.

"The Olivers are not politicians, lobbyists or lawmakers. They are financiers and manufacturers,

"They accept things as they are and they adapt themselves to them.

"And the fact is, the Olivers could hold their own against the world. When Andrew Carnegie said that American iron interests did not require protection, he invited a laugh and the obvious statement, 'you didn't say that until after you sold out.' But Andy is right, just the same.

"And what do you say about American tariff laws that drive capital and enterprises out of our country?"

CAVENDISH MAN WAS ARRESTED ON THEFT CHARGE

Horse and Buggy Alleged to Have Been Stolen by Samuel Ennis — More Serious Charge to be Laid — Remanded For One Week.

Samuel Ennis, of Cavandish, was arrested yesterday by County Constable Montgomery, of Buckhorn, and brought to this city this morning.

The prisoner is charged with the theft of a hors and buggy, and a set of harness from John Connors, also of Cavandish.

The theft is alleged to have taken place on May 1st, from the home of the defendant, Connors.

Ennis was remanded to jail for one week by Magistrate Edmison this morning.

Considerable trouble was experienced in making the arrest, as Ennis took to the woods.

The Review learns that a more serious charge will be laid against the prisoner.

TOKIO IN TURMOIL

Special to the Review.

Tokio, June 3.—Wholesale arrests have been made to frustrate a revolutionary plot which has for its chief aim the assassination of Premier Katsura.

Though the authorities are making every endeavor to prevent the plot from becoming known to the public and the newspapers have been warned not to print a line of it, the Premier, and other high officials as well, are known to be under close guard today. Two women are among the prisoners.

The plot is widespread, and the entire nation will be found affected if all its ramifications are bared, it is declared.

The plot is said to have included other members of the Japanese Cabinet. Those involved are supposed to have been furnished with bombs made by Socialist agitators who, under the guise of being laborers, obtained employment in the government factory at Matzummoto.

CANADA LAGGING BEHIND; NEW DEFENCE LEAGUE

Lieut.-Col. Merritt Declares at Organization Meeting That the Citizens of Canada Are Indifferent and do Not Realize the Necessity for a United Effort at Defending Their Country.

Toronto, June 4.—To awaken the public mind to the serious importance of national defence, and to aid in bringing about the adoption of the most effective and economical system to that end.

To carry on a non-political, educational campaign looking to the adoption of the principle of patriotic, unpaid, or universal naval or military training, in the belief that such training conduces to the industrial, physical and moral elevation of the whole people, and is essential to national safety.

To co-operate with the various provincial educational authorities, the Department of Militia and Defence and the trustees of the Strathcona fund, in introducing physical and military training into all schools in Canada.

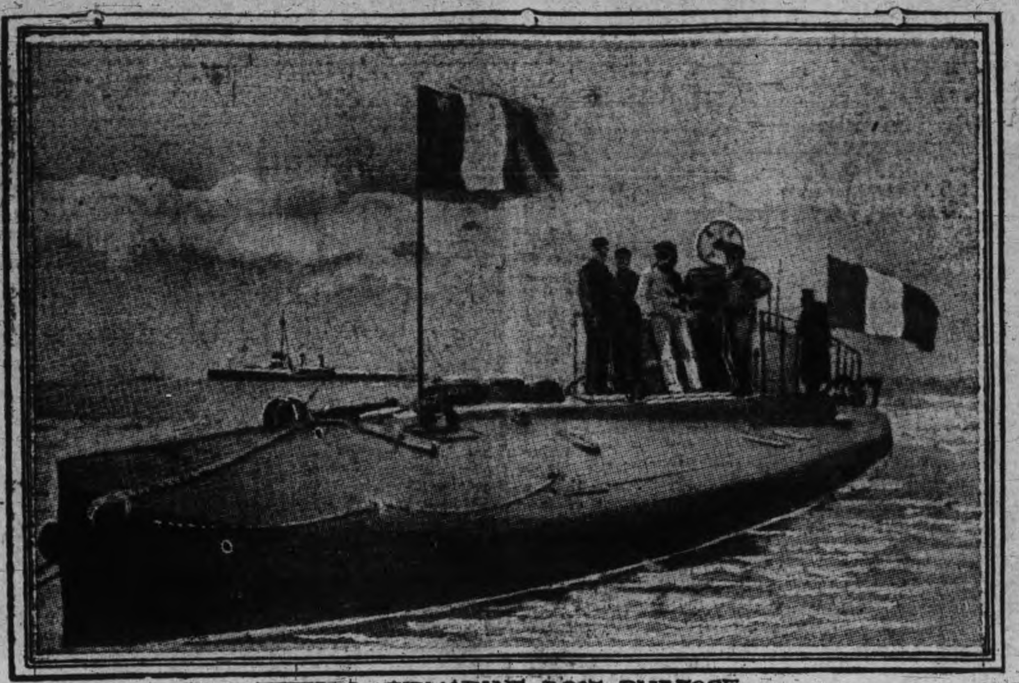
To aid in securing the systematic physical and military training of all youths between the ages of 14 and 18.

These are the objects of the Canadian Defence League, the Ontario branch of which was duly organized at a slimly attended meeting in St. George's Hall last evening. Lieut.-Col. Wm. H. Merritt, while expressing disappointment at the poor turnout, said that things were not as bad as they looked, as the league had already enrolled 200 members in Toronto.

"We will some day need to defend ourselves against some raid or invasion, which has for its object the taking of our country," he said. "It is necessary for us to rear up a strong, healthy boyhood to manhood. Australia and New Zealand have wakened up to the importance of the object for which this meeting was called."

The officers are: President, Hon. Featherston Osler; vice-presidents, Rev. Dr. Carman, Maj. Wm. Hendrie, Hamilton; R. E. Kingsford; secretary, E. A. MacDougall; treasurer, Wm. H. Merritt; executive, Mrs. Wm. Mackenzie, Mrs. E. H. Keating, Miss Constance Boulton, Rev. Dr. Wm. H. Hincks, Commander F. C. Law; Dr. Charles Hastings, Prof. Alfred Baker, Enoch Thompson, Col. James Ryerson, J. P. Murray, A. H. Lee, F. Sewell.

G. T. Blackstock was not present to give his promised address.



THE FRENCH SUBMARINE BOAT. PLUVIOSE.

The French submarine boat, Pluvoise, which is being raised from thirty fathoms of water in the English Channel, with all her officers and crew aboard. She was sent to the bottom by the cross-channel steamer Pas de Calais, which, crowded with passengers bound for Dover, struck the partly submerged Pluvoise when about two miles from the harbor.

STOCK MARKET IS ALMOST COMPLETELY DEMORALIZED

Heavy Selling of Shorts Causes a Panicky Drop in Industrials of all Sorts and Many Phenomenal Slumps Are Recorded.

New York, June 4.—They had an almost hysterical time on the New York Stock Exchange yesterday and there were periods when the market bordered on complete demoralization. With few exceptions, lowest prices of the year were recorded, and trading for the day was in excess of 1,500,000 shares, the largest day's business in months.

Included in the heavy selling of securities were many specialties offered at marked recessions, while at times standard issues seemed to be thrown over for what they would bring.

The movement was precipitated by enormous enough liquidation aided by persistent short selling. Rallies were out of all proportion to the decline and the absence of substantial support in such issues as Union Pacific, St. Paul and United States Steel was perhaps the most disquieting feature of the situation.

Wall Street was alive with rumors and reports, ranging from gossip of the political situation at Washington, to all sorts of forebodings regarding the country's state of trade and commerce.

Railroad heads here and in the west were quoted in gloomy terms as predicting sharp retrenchment and rigid economy in view of the administration's attitude toward increased rates.

Crop prospects are considered highly satisfactory, and money at this centre remains easy, but the financial district, nevertheless, is inclined to take a rather pessimistic view of general business conditions. It is also argued by many that the steel and iron industry shows signs of arrested development.

Yesterday's heaviest losses in the active issues were: Union Pacific, 5 3-4; Southern Pacific, 3 1-2; Reading, 4; Louisvile & Nashville, 3 3-4; St. Paul, 3 3-4; Northern Pacific, 3 3-8; U. S. Steel, 3 1-8; Amalgamated Copper, 3 1-4; Consolidated Gas, 5; American Loco., 4, and American Car & Foundry, 4 1-2. Elsewhere in the railroad and industrial groups, losses of 2 to 3 points were general.

London was a heavy buyer here during the early session, but was reported to have reversed its position later, selling heavily of the Harriman issues and U. S. Steel.

In sympathy with the stock, the bond market fell off throughout the list.

GREAT UNREST IN NANKING

Chinese Promise to Start Revolution To-morrow.

Pekin, June 4.—The consuls at Nanking report that native disturbers in that city have assumed openly an insulting attitude towards foreigners, and have defiled the walls of the American consulate in a disgusting manner.

Placards have been posted in the streets calling upon the people to rise and slaughter the foreigners and destroy their property.

Threats that a revolution will be launched on June 5, the date set for the opening of the Nanking Exposition, are causing Chinese merchants to flee with their treasures to the country districts where they are burying their wealth.

The authorities at Nanking have removed the bolts from the rifles of the soldiers. The situation is considered to depend entirely upon the attitude of the military in the city, which up to the present has not manifested symptoms of disloyalty.

German, Japanese and United States men-of-war are lying off the town, and it is believed that these vessels will be adequate to protect all foreigners in the event of an outbreak. The commanders of these warships have conferred and agreed upon a plan for concerted action if necessary.

All the diplomats at Pekin think that an outbreak in the provinces south of the Yangtsei-Kiang River, is likely to occur. They believe, however, that it is extremely improbable that the trouble will reach this city.

Honan Still a Danger Spot.

Toronto, June 4.—At the China Inland Mission it was stated last night that there were, so far as the mission was aware, no missionaries at Nanking, but that letters received from missionaries in China recently, said trouble was feared when the crowds assembled for the opening of the exposition at Nanking.

Missionaries were withdrawn from Honan some weeks ago because of the rice riots, and the British consul there, while consenting to the return of the male missionaries in July, advised against the women missionaries returning to Honan before next fall.

DEFENCE OF SOUTH AFRICA

Cape Town, June 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Lord Methuen's article in connection with Gen. Ashton's forthcoming work upon the defence of United South Africa, is exciting a great amount of interest here among the English and Dutch. Methuen emphatically urges the advantages of compulsory service, observing that the youth of South Africa already are expert shots and horsemen and only needed training in discipline.

MORE CASH FOR KAISER

Berlin, June 4.—The civil list of Emperor William as King of Prussia is soon to be increased, probably to about $5,000,000. This was agreed upon yesterday by the leaders of the Conservative, National-Liberal and Radical parties of the Prussian Parliament, and a bill will be introduced by the Government soon.

Emperor William receives nothing from the Empire and has had trouble in late years in meeting the demands on his allowance from the Prussian kingdom, which now amount to $3,925,000, an increase of $875,000 having been made in 1889.

The cost of restoring or repairing numerous castles is said to be in part responsible for the royal need. But beyond these expenditures the Emperor is a generous supporter of the opera and of the royal theatres of Berlin and Wiesbaden Castle, having for some years made up an annual deficit in the houses totalling some $750,000. He also maintains fifty-two town and country residences, some of which he has not visited since the beginning of his reign.

PRESBYTERIAN ASSEMBLY

Halifax, N.S., June 4.—At the morning session of the general assembly Principal Patrick reported that the Manitoba College Board has appointed N. W. Clark, B.A., to succeed Dr. Hart as professor of classics. There is an increase in the number of students, and this has made an increase in the staff necessary. It now numbers 12.

Principal Gandier described Knox as one of the older daughters who has done a lot of work for the church and has sent out nearly 900 students annually. The increasing deficit is a cause of anxiety to the board. The endowment fund now amounts to over $315,000 and produces a revenue of thirteen and a half thousand dollars. There is a discouraging decrease in this year's class.

Dr. John McMillan of Halifax introduced the report of Pine Hill College, Halifax. He said: "She is ninety years old, yet in no sense dying or decrepit. She is stronger than ever. We have 433 graduates, 200 now on the roll of our synod, with eighteen in the foreign field."

Montreal College report was then presented by Walter Paul. "Montreal College is the only institution we have that is making any attempt to solve the 'Problem of Quebec'."

"It stands at the centre of that great French province, and the people feel a life of freedom of which they covet, said Rev. A. L. Susch.

TECUMSEH'S BONES FOUND

Chatham, June 4.—Tecumseh's grave, which has been the subject of considerable speculation of recent years, has at last been located on St. Anne's Island, near Mitchell's Bay.

Dr. Mitchell, Harry Smith and Charles Chubb of Wallaceburg, hearing of the location of the grave went to the island, and were successful in digging up the bones of the great Indian warrior. The Indians raised serious protest against the removal of the remains, but were finally pacified. The bones were removed to Wallaceburg, and are now lying in Dr. Mitchell's office.

The doctor, who is conducting a severe examination of the remains, says they are the bones of a very big man.

The remains were located at St. Anne's Island through a story told by one Fisher of Wallaceburg, who received his facts from his grandfather. He was in close association with an old Indian chief who claimed, after the battle of Moraviantown in 1812, Tecumseh, who fell in that fight, was buried at Moraviantown. After the war a number of Indians, including Fisher's Indian friend, took up the remains and transferred them to St. Anne's Island.

The General Explosive Co. of Montreal has donated $13,000 to the relief of the families of the eleven victims of the explosion in Hull on May 8.

The mayor and aldermen of St. John, N.B., have decided to give one-tenth of their official salaries to pay for band music in the public squares.

Charles Crandall of Toronto, the 15-year-old boy who disappeared from his home last week, has been located working on a farm in Brockside, near Cobourg.

A meeting will be held at Niagara Falls, N.Y., June 16, to consider a celebration, probably in 1914, of the centenary of peace between the United States and Canada.

Walter D. Oliver, one of the leading real estate brokers of Chicago, is dead. At the age of 18, it is said, he was receiving a salary of $10,000 a year from a board of trade firm.

A coroner's jury in Chicago has fixed responsibility for a fatal collision between a street car and an auto on the traction company that fixes the running time for a distance of four miles at only thirty minutes.

For two days Mrs. La Mondin of Byng Inlet, had a pin stuck in her throat, and after several unsuccessful attempts had been made to recover it at the Toronto General Hospital, Dr. Gilbert Royce succeeded in reaching it yesterday.

British territory in Europe in 1909 took $182,000,000 of U. S. manufactures, Canada $97,000,000, British Asia $13,000,000, and even British Africa took $7,000,000. Great Britain buys forty per cent. of all United States manufactures sent to Europe.

John McLean, aged 60 years, a tramp, claiming to be from Welland, was arrested at St. Thomas for destroying $30 worth of school books, which he put in the stove and burned up to keep himself warm while stopping over night in the Yarmouth Heights school, just outside of the city.

LONDON LAYMEN FAVOR BIGGER SALARIES TO MINISTERS

Methodists in Session Pass a Resolution Asking General Conference to Raise the Minimum for Preachers —Circuits Needs Money.

Chatham, June 4.—The progress which has been made by the Home Mission Society of the Methodist Church of Ontario during the past four years was detailed to the London Conference yesterday by Rev. Mr. Allen, the Toronto secretary. In 1907 there were in Ontario 102 young men as summer supplies, at a cost to the church of $7,000. In 1908 there were 132 at a cost of $10,000, and in 1909 147 at a cost of $16,200. There has also been an increase in the salaries paid to these mission workers, until in 1910 the basis of payment is $725 for married ordained men and $550 for single, and $500 for married and $425 for unmarried unordained men. The conference of Toronto has been specially good in supporting mission workers.

In the afternoon the laymen passed a resolution calling attention, "with shame and sorrow, to the low standard of financial provision made for our ministers," and declaring that "neglect of justice on the part of the laity toward ministers with the manifold responsibilities they are expected to maintain towards the community, the congregation, their families and themselves, cannot be allowed to continue"; and asking conference to memoralize the general conference to require the raising of minimum salaries of ordained married men to $900, single ordained men to $700, and probationers to $500, with provision additional for parsonage in the case of married men.

The resolution was introduced as a result of the report that last year sixty-three superintendents of circuits had suffered deficiencies in salaries to the average of $117, that eleven young men colleagues had experienced deficiencies of an average of $76. The average salary received last year by superintendents of circuits was $761.

Ontario Soon to Go Dry.

Brockville, June 4.—This was the opening day of the session of clergy and laymen of the Montreal Methodist Conference. Rev. C. S. Deeprose of Sherbrooke, Que., was elected president on the first ballot, by a huge majority, and Rev. H. E. Warren of Inkerman was elected secretary.

Dr. Carman featured the morning session with an address on church union and an appeal to ministers to be careful of the doctrine they promulgated. He did not commit himself, leaving the matter to the guidance of the will of God. He did express what he termed his "jealousy" for the Methodist itineracy.

It was proposed to bring on a vote for total prohibition in Newfoundland. In Nova Scotia workers were in measurable distance of total prohibition. In New Brunswick nine out of fourteen counties are dry. In Ontario half the municipalities are without licenses and it was a hopeful sign that larger places were undertaking local option campaigns. The time was not far distant when a total prohibition vote in Ontario would have to be considered. He characterized the three-fifths clause as a handicap, having worked under it. In the western provinces the temperance movement was gaining ground.

More Funds Needed.

Trenton, June 4.—The state of work in the Sunday School and Young People's societies of the Methodist Church is not satisfactory. Not only does the general secretary, Rev. Mr. Bartlett, so state, but of 133 chairmen of districts whose opinion he sought in Canada, Bermuda and Newfoundland, only 25 say it is satisfactory to them. His committee appears only on paper, for there is not at present sufficient money to pay the expenses of the members to the central office.

"You put a western secretary in the great west, covering territory from Port Arthur to Victoria, and expect him to do satisfactory work," he told the Bay of Quinte Conference yesterday. "As well put a man with a toothpick in a ten-acre field and ask him to plow it. Our methods must change. Our treasury must be more adequately filled."

To Investigate Circuits.

Guelph, June 4.—A remedy for the problem of ministerial support was proposed at yesterday afternoon's session of the Hamilton Conference, in the report of the Laymen's Association, which was read by Prof. J. B. Reynolds, of the O.A.C. They proposed that a standing committee be appointed to investigate conditions on circuits and to report deficiencies and state whether, in their opinion, the circuits should be supplied by single or married men, and whether boundaries should be extended or circuits absorbed, getting the information by a canvass of the members on the ground.

Samuel J. Carter of Guelph, vice-president of the association, declared: "We ought to be men big enough to clean this up. We should not have it said of the Hamilton Conference, that we take a cent for missions in this age of missions when the money is needed elsewhere."

MISS GERTRUDE SHELDON

New York, May 3.—Mr. and Mrs. George R. Sheldon, of No. 24, East Thirty-eighth street, New York, have announced the engagement of their youngest daughter, Miss Gertrude Sheldon, to Mr. Samuel Stevens Sands, of this city. The engagement had not even been rumored.

Miss Sheldon is a great favorite in society, both here and at Oyster Bay, where her parents have a country place. Her father is one of the prominent bankers of New York.

Her mother is a daughter of the late George I. Seney, a leading merchant in New York in his day. He was the founder of the Seney Hospital in and had one of the most noted art galleries in this country. Miss Sheldon is a fine horsewoman and has ridden and driven at the Piping Rock horse shows.

Mr. Sands is a son of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt by a former marriage. His father, Samuel Steven Sands, Jr., died about twenty-eight years ago from the effects of a fall in the hunting field.

WANT TOXIN LABORATORY

Toronto, June 4.—One of the mo important resolutions approved of by the Canadian Medical Association at its closing session last night was that of the executive council to petition the Dominion Government for the establishment of a fully-equipped laboratory for the manufacture of anti-toxin and other sera, so that they can be distributed through Canada at the cost of production.

The resolution explains that by the use of anti-toxin the death rate of diphtheria has been reduced from 35 to 10 per cent., and a still further reduction could be brought about if larger doses are used. At present the cost of large doses is almost prohibitive to poorer people. The anti-toxin now used in Canada comes largely from foreign countries and is frequently shipped long distances under unknown circumstances.

LABOR ATTACK ON ROOSEVELT

London, June 4.—The chief topic in political circles yesterday is the charge made by The Labor Leader that the Roosevelt speech was inspired.

Calling the address "worse than an impertinence," the paper outlines its allegation thus: "It is known that in financial circles there is a movement on foot to secure the recall of Sir Eldom Gorst, consul-general of Egypt, who, being a man of honor, as well as a great administrator, is seeking to enlist the active support of the educated classes in Egypt in carrying on the Government in that country in fulfilment of pledges of the most solemn kind.

"For this he has incurred the displeasure and the active hostility of the Stock Exchange and reactionary foes generally, and the thinly veiled attack made by Mr. Roosevelt upon Sir Eldom Gorst's administration must have been inspired by these vampires."

MURDERED AND ROOM FIRED

Chicago, June 4.—Directly across the street from the Chicago Board of Trade, John Larsen, janitor of the Kent building on Sherman street, was murdered early yesterday in his sleeping apartments. His charred body was found following a fire which did considerable damage to the structure. Circumstances indicated that Larsen was beaten until he was helpless and that his assailant then set fire to the room.

From an adjoining building a short time previous Larsen had been heard in an angry quarrel with an unknown man who had demanded money.

RUSSIAN AVIATOR FATALLY INJURED

St. Petersburg, June 4.—M. Poptof, instructor of aviation in the army, was probably fatally injured in an aeroplane accident at Gatchin yesterday. He was manoeuvring for the Minister of War and had flown successfully for a quarter of an hour. In descending, the aeroplane struck an elevation on the ground and was wrecked.

The aviator was thrown out in the crash and suffered a broken breast and thigh bones, and severe injuries about the head.

M. Poptof is the pioneer of aviation in Russia.

MRS. BARRON DIES SUDDENLY

Stratford, June 4.—Mrs. Barron, wife of County Judge John A. Barron, died suddenly yesterday afternoon.

While stooping to pick a flower for a visitor walking with her in the garden, she was seized with a fainting spell and passed away shortly afterward without regaining consciousness.

Besides the judge, two daughters and one son survive. Miss Ruby is at present on the Pacific Coast; Miss Alice at home, and Master John is a naval cadet on S. S. Canada at Halifax.

800 MEN STRIKE FOR PROMPT PAY

Montreal, June 4.—Eight hundred employes of the Canada Car & Foundry Co., Ltd., walked out on strike yesterday morning as the result of a difference. The company pays on the fifth and last day of every month. The men are paid Saturday when Saturday is nearest to the end of the month, as this week. The company claim that it cannot get the lists ready in time and they propose to pay next Saturday, June 11. This the men object to.

MAY EXPORT MUCH POWER

The Fort Frances Case Settled in Toronto -- Statement Issued by Hon. Frank Cochrane.

Toronto, June 4.—The controversy over the export of electrical power at Fort Frances was settled at the Parliament buildings yesterday, by the passage of an order-in-council permitting the Minnesota & Ontario Power Co. to export 6,000 horse-power generated on the Canadian side to the American side, safeguarding to the town of Fort Frances, however, the right to use such power should the occasion arise at any time, also keeping 1,000 horse-power available at any time for the town's use.

Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, issued a statement, which gives a review of the entire matter, last night. A summary of the decision reads:

"To sum up—one-half the full power developed at the falls is to be available on the Canadian side if required, but there is always to be, whether required or not, at least 1,000 horse-power retained and available, and in the event of a demand arising for more than 1,000 horse-power, it is to be immediately provided up to the maximum quantity, viz., one-half of the full power developed at the falls, and at a price to the Canadian consumer to be in every case fixed by the Hydro-Electric Commission.

"The company gives a guarantee bond forfeiting $50,000, as liquidated damages, if any, such order is not obeyed, and in addition incurs a penalty of $100 for every day's delay in returning the power to the Canadian side. Further, and as an absolute remedy, in the event of the company not complying promptly, the Government has the right to place the sheriff or other officer in charge of the company's premises and cut the connection so as to forcibly put a stop to the exportation of power.

"Hon. Mr. Cochrane added that any or all the documents relating to this matter were available for inspection at any time."

MORE GOING TO GUELPH

Accommodation for 250 Prisoners —Board Inspecting Work.

Guelph, June 4.—The reformatory board, including Hon. W. J. Hanna, Jos. P. Downey, Warden Gilmore, and two or three others are inspecting the work done at the prison here and arranging for the accommodation of 250 prisoners, who will be brought here on Monday. The temparary buildings are about completed. A number of cottages are to be built along the York road for the guards, officers etc., and it is likely these will be gone ahead with at once.

ADOLPHUS

The Dominion Government is going to send a number of representative citizens to foreign lands to spy out the land and get pointers on technical education.

To-day Dolphus goes to school young and hopeful. He quickly passes from the public school to the collegiate. He passes from the collegiate and suddenly becomes Adolphus. Then he visits the university and passes and once more his opinion of his value in the world rises. He is Mr. Adolphus. He graduates. He is a B.A. The earth is his. But alas and alack the cold old world doesn't care for knowledge by book alone. It doesn't care for a head full of Homer, political economy, and dead languages. It wants the strong right arm. And thus Mr. Adolphus is deceived. He can master problems on paper, and talk with a brilliant polish and can give you a theory of the origin of the earth, but he can't set type, he can't work a hammer and plane, he can't make a tool, he can't make a mould, he can't mount a stove, he can't write a sign, he can't paint a buggy or a barn, he can, however, tell you when the prize fight for the championship of the world is coming off, and can give you his opinion of who will be the winner.

And the lovely girl graduate. Surely she's a winner for she can tickle the piano, and talk "lawge," play "cawds," and "dawnce." But poor girl, she wants a husband, and a husband wants a mate with a sensible soul. He wants a mate who can cook tasty things for a hungry stomach, and keep house for a sensible man and make baby clothes, if necessary.

So Mr. Adolphus with his B. A., and the lovely girl graduates are too often frosts.

But it is not these two that the commission will have so much in mind as the 90 per cent. who never receive more than a public school education.

Sometimes we Canadians think that our educational system generally is immense. It isn't, it's very much behind the time.

Technical education is the modern method. So to the United States and to Europe they will go and come back stored and founded in knowledge. Then we may hope to turn out at some future day young men and young women who know something outside of book knowledge, that is really worth while.

THE CRIMINAL

Madame Schuman-Heink, who possesses one of the sweetest voices in the world to-day, sang to the prisoners in Marquette penitentiary. As she sang it was not some impassioned classic in French or Italian, but in simple song. It reached for the hearts of those men, and many wept like children. They will remember Schuman-Heink. They are human, although watched and barred.

In the outskirts of Guelph men are working who are from Toronto's Central prison. They are trusties who are helping build the corrective establishment that the Ontario Government is building there, to take the place of that dingy old pile, with the four men with rifles standing in towers at each corner, lest anyone inside should get outside and breathe the air of freedom. These trusties have no uniform, and proud of the fact that they are trusted, the men are working with a will. They have taken heart again.

The New York Telegraph once said that the first step to reform a drunkard was to get him a new suit of clothes so that he could view himself in the glass without being ashamed. Prisoners are prisoners no matter where and what bound by, and, to wear a conspicuous garment only tends to make a man morose and bitter of heart.

Locked in at an early hour, almost ere the chickens have gone to roost, the ceaseless round, that narrow cell and iron bars, is that the way we would train a dog to be kind or a horse to be gentle.

But then they are only prisoners, old offenders many of them, made so because the world turned its back on them when they came out, often filled with hope and new resolutions.

"Do you think you could fill the position.'

"Where were you last."

Then the employer turns his back, and from firm to firm this ex-convict trudges. What else can he do but return to crime when society shuns him, and looks the other way when he approaches.

AN AUTOMATIC STORE

The Toronto Saturday Night says: "The very latest evolution from the fertile brain of the Wizard of Menlo Park will interest shop-keepers and shoppers alike. This is nothing more or less than an "automatic store," in which there will be no clerks, scales, counters, waiting for change, or any other of the incidentals or paraphernalia of the business establishment as we know it. If such a store does come to pass—and Mr. Edison assures us that it will—it will work an evolution in shopping methods." Undoubtedly it will, but no more of a revolution than has been worked in the memory of many older readers.

Once it was candle light, then the lamp, then gas, and now electricity. The slow sailing vessel has given place to the palatial steamer which laughs at wind and wave on the journey across the ocean. The stage coach is no more for general traffic. We entrain at Peterborough, sleep and awake in Montreal, New York or Pittsburg. Our forefathers knew the tin type. We have the moving picture. They knew the log on the hearth, the tripod and kettle. We may cook with electricity if we will. We treasure the voice of the phonograph or graphaphone, and the dead speak to us. We mount the air as a bird and dive as fish with the submarine. We skim the ground in our automobiles. Can a department store without clerks surprise us? It might for a while, but just for a while, that's all. This age is prepared for anything.

LAURIER'S COMPANIONS

Sir Wilfrid Laurier will be accompanied on his western tour by Mr. E. M. Macdonald and Mr. F. F. Pardee, Mr. Macdonald will tell audiences how the facts as to the excessive cost of the Transcontinental were smothered; and Mr. Pardee will give a lecture on the St. Lawrence Power Transmission Company, and how the Long Sault power was secured for the Americans. The Premier has chosen two especially good representatives of the New Liberals to take with him.

FADS

The Ancient Order of Foresters will parade to St. John's church on Sunday night, while the Canadian Order will go to the Murray street Baptist. The season for parades is here. Many take rest and recreation from society connections. They go through all the chairs. It is a fad with them.

Fads are splendid relaxers, they may be cultivated. And not everyone can have the automobile fad, but we can all go fishing. Few of us can afford horseback riding, but we can take long trips on shank's mare, eat better, sleep better and rise more refreshed because we do.

There are a countless number of fads in the world, with some it is keeping a garden and seeing who can grow the finest flowers. The fellow next door may take his annual recreation with the hound and gun.

THE POINT OF VIEW

THE LITTLE BOY.
Found Floating.

Mr John D. Rockefeller, jr., at a dinner in New York, admitted that he was not a gourmet, says The Utica Globe. "These fat, red-faced men," he said, "only amuse me. They know all the vintage years of champagne, Bordeaux and Bourgogne. They differentiate learnedly between California peach-fed and southern hominy-fed hog. They compare the flavors of the teal, the mallard and the canvasback. I smile when I hear them. It all reminds me so vitally of two little boys in the country. These two little boys were smoking, when one was taken suddenly and violently ill. The other said: "It's queer that this tobacco hurts you. It's made of very good corn silk.' 'But, you see,' groaned the other, 'I'm used to nothin' but fine grape leaves.'"

A LAMENT.
(Powles Corners Cor. Lindsay Post)

Eligible young men are quite insufficient in our neighborhood, so some young ladies would have us believe. Your correspondent recently heard the following song from one of our younger spinsters:

My heart leaps when I behold,
A man upon the road,
So was it when my life began,
So it is now, send me a man.

HOW TO WATER A LAWN.
(Suburban Life.)

There is only one way to water a lawn—that is to soak it so that the soil will be moistened for a foot or more deep, and watering will not be needed for a week. Most people water a lawn every day whether the grounds need it or not, but they give only enough water to wet the surface. This practice results in the plants producing their roots near the surface, and when the family goes away for the customary two weeks' vacation in the summer the lawn burns up brown.—Suburban Life for June.

A GREAT PARASITE,
(National Monthly.)

One of Washington's wealthiest women is another Mrs. Malaprop, and her acquaintances tell many a weird story of her manipulation of the King's English. Once a friend said to her: "Mrs. Blank, how well and strong your daughter looks."

"Yes," was the answer. "Mary is so well, in fact, I think she is the most indelicate girl in Washington."

Another time some one said in reference to Mary's return from abroad, "Where is Mary Now?" The mother Malaprop answered: "She is at Paris and she would spend all of her time there if she could. She is the greatest Parasite I have ever known."

She also informed some one that her husband's costume at a masked ball was very effective, that "he went in the garbage of a monk."

ONCE MORE FROM THE GREAT WEST

Comes Evidence of the Great Work Dodd's Kidney Pills Are Doing

Cyrille Maginel Cured of His Rheumatism and Diabetes by the old Reliable Kidney Remedy.

Findlay, Man., June 3.—(Special).—Cyrille Maginel, a well known farmer living near here, furnishes further evidence of the great work Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing in the west.

"I suffered from Rheumatism and Diabetes," Mr. Maginel says, in telling the story of his cure. "My sleep was broken and unrefreshing, and a was tired and nervous all the time. I was treated by a doctor but he failed to cure me. Reading that Dodd's Kidney Pills were good for brick sediment in the urine, led me to try them, and after using twelve boxes I am as well as I can possibly be. Dodd's Kidney Pills have made a new man of me and I am thankful."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are no cure-all. They cure sick kidneys and that is all that is claimed of them. But sick kidneys are the root of numerous dis[illegible] impure blood. For you can't have pure blood with sick kidneys. It is the work of the kidneys to strain the impurities out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure Diabetes because it is a kidney disease; they cure Rheumatism because it is caused by sick kidneys failing to strain the uric acid out of the blood.

JEWS IN PALESTINE.

They Favor Agricultural Labor and Have Splendid Schools.

According to David Wolffsohn, a Cologne banker and one of the leaders of the Zionist movement, many Jews are being repatriated from the United States to Palestine. Herr Wolffsohn said recently that Zionism is growing with tremendous strides; that the society has a membership exceeding 250,000, and that financially the condition of the society is more than encouraging.

"We have now abandoned mere theory, and are devoting our attention to work," he said. "We have had gratifying results. For instance, we have worked hard at the schools in Jerusalem, and the modern young Palestine Jew has a splendid technical and general education.

"Our first care was to make the poorer Jews self-supporting. There were far too many content to rely upon the generosity of devoted pilgrims. Now the state of things is altogether different. Instead of applying for money to the Chaluhah, as we call the central relief fund, they ask for work.

"Palestine Jews favor agricultural labor. It is really wonderful to see how they will toil upon their little plot of land and how fruitful they will make the most barren spots.

"Palestine is already becoming a favorite colony for Jews. There are any number of London Jews among the colonists and even Jews from prosperous New York also abandon the commerce of the west for Jerusalem.

"Religious Jews endeavor in their old age to make a pilgrimage to Palestine, so that they may be buried in the Holy Land. The modern Jews, however, do not go to Palestine to die, but to live.

"Our adherents may be divided into two classes, the professional Jew and the very poor man. It is to the young man and woman at the university that we appeal. At Oxford, Cambridge and London Universities we have Zionist societies and their members are enthusiastic.

"We have now got $1,500,000 together and every day convinces me that the Jew is as passionately enthusiastic about Palestine as his home as ever."

Farm and Garden

A GOOD STRAWBERRY.

The Buster Considered One of the Best Varieties of This Valuable Fruit.

According to W. T. Macoun, horticulturist of the central experiment farm of the Canadian department of agriculture, the rapid extension of strawberry growing has resulted in the production of very large crops of this valuable fruit, especially in the eastern provinces of the Dominion, where strawberries have come into very general use. The ease with which new varieties of this fruit are produced from seed has resulted in the introduction during the past few years of a large number of new sorts.

The Buster, originated by C. C. Stone of Moline, Ill., is called one of the best varieties. It is roundish, large, bright rather pale red, with not prominent seeds. The flesh is bright red, juicy, briskly subacid, moderately firm, of medium to above in quality. The season is medium late to late, plant vigorous, with medium number of runners; foliage good, but rusts considerably. It keeps its size well.

FARMERS' BOYS AND GIRLS.

Within recent years a new method of agricultural education has been devised in the form of boys and girls' clubs. Such clubs have various objects, but usually they provide for prize contests among the members. Corn growing contests are probably the most common among the boys, [illegible] have been tried, while the girls compete in breadmaking or sewing or even test their skill against that of the boys in gardening.

The United States department of agriculture has information of 395 counties in twenty-eight states in which such clubs are organized, with a total membership of about 144,000. New York has about 75,000 members, Nebraska 25,000 and other states smaller numbers. One county in Pennsylvania has 2,000 members. In most cases these clubs are organized under the auspices of some state authority, but in many cases the county superintendent takes the initiative, while in many other cases the rural teachers arrange contests among their own pupils.

The United States department of agriculture also gives assistance through the office of experiment stations by furnishing advice and suggestions. A new farmers' bulletin on boys and girls' agricultural clubs tells how to organize the clubs, how to conduct the contests and what publications will be useful to the boys and girls.

How to Spray Trees.

Assuming that the fruit grower is properly equipped with apparatus and material and ready to apply the spray to the trees, the next question is how to do it. If the day is calm spraying can be done in any direction most convenient. If the wind is light spray so that the wind blows nearly as possible across or at right angles to the rows to be treated. By so doing and working from windward the trees are easily and wholly covered when sprayed on opposite sides.

It should be noted that it is impossible to spray a tree of any size effectively and completely from one side only. In a brisk wind the same rule applies except that only one side of the trees is sprayed, and then watch opportunity and with a changed wind spray the opposite side. By this method the spray will not fall on men or animals, but will be blown through the trees. By the exercise of a little thought and foresight the wind can be made a serviceable ally in spraying. It is quite essential that every part of the tree, trunk, branches, twigs and leaves (if tree is in foliage), should be covered with the solution or mixture.

HEADING AN APPLE TREE.

Advice on Best Way to Get High Heads Reduced to Low Down Tops.

How to get the old, high headed apple trees reduced to low down tops is a matter of considerable interest. In case of a severe infestation of San Jose scale practically the whole top of the tree down to stubs, six or seven feet from the main trunk, has been cut off, although it is preferable to leave some branches if possible. Many small water sprouts will start, and these should be thinned out judiciously the following summer. Those left will ultimately form the new head.

It is practically impossible to destroy a severe infestation of the scale where the branches of the tree are left high up. In ordinary cases, however, where there is little scale, such severe treatment is not advisable, but two or three years should be taken to accomplish this heading in. The first year only one-third to one-half of the main branches should be cut severely—that is, from six to twelve feet from where they fork. The rest of the top should be cut back to a limited extent. Water sprouts will grow on the large branches near where they fork from the trunk, and the best of these should be allowed to grow, the balance being thinned out the following summer. The next year this same process should be repeated, and so on until an entirely new top can be constructed ready for business. This will be from two to five years, according to the condition of the tree. Where such severe cutting back is practiced great care must be exercised in the treatment of the wounds by painting or tarring for the first few years; otherwise canker may set in and the branches decay. The above directions are for constructing a new top without any attempt to change the variety. Should one wish to graft the top to a new variety conditions would have to be somewhat modified.

Home Course In Poultry Keeping

IV.—The Modern Science of Incubation.

By MILO M. HASTINGS.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

ARTIFICIAL incubation has been practiced in Egypt and by the Chinese for several thousand years, but has been developed in this country only within the memory of the present generation.

Because of the great extent to which incubators have been advertised, the large circulation of poultry books put out by incubator manufacturers and the favorable views of the poultry papers, which get their chief support from incubator advertisements, the general impression is that artificial incubation is a greater improvement over the natural method of hatching than is in reality the case.

Hens or Incubators.

One of the chief claims of the artificial incubation is that by this means chicks can be produced at any season of the year, whereas hens brood only in the spring and summer. This advantage is not great, however, as most inexperienced people believe, for chickens hatched in the winter are difficult to rear, and because of the evening up of prices due to cold storage, as referred to in a previous lesson, the use

The second important advantage claimed for incubators is that of saving labor, or, in other words, they enable one person to hatch a much larger number of chicks than would be possible with the use of hens. This claim is worthy of consideration. It is, in fact, the chief reason why incubators have gained their present standing.

As to the percentage of hatching and the vitality of the chicks, the average incubator, especially in the hands of the novice, will hardly equal the natural methods. The writer made an extensive study of the results obtained with incubators by Kansas farmers. The results showed that about as many farmers failed with incubators as succeeded with them.

The percentage of eggs that hatch either in incubators or with hens is commonly overestimated. The extraordinary hatches at poultry shows are usually arranged by setting two incubators and testing out the live eggs just before hatching and putting them in the one machine. A 60 per cent hatch of all eggs set for the season is good enough. Many very large and successful poultry farms have lower averages. The advisability of purchasing an incubator will depend upon many circumstances. All those who breed Leghorns will require incubators. With the Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes or Rhode Island Reds I should favor hatching with hens until the poultry work grows to such size that this becomes impractical.

Eggs For Hatching.

There are many superstitious notions prevalent regarding the relation of the shape of an egg to its vitality and the sex of the forthcoming chicken. Such notions have no ground in fact. Eggs having weak shells that might become broken in the nest or unusually small eggs should be discarded. If there are more eggs available than we wish for a sitting it will be better to select the fresher eggs than to be overparticular about shape and appearance. The eggs for hatching should be stored in a cool, dry location and shifted or rolled about occasionally.

Eggs exposed to freezing temperature if not actually frozen may still retain their vitality, but it is generally considered best to keep them at a temperature between 40 and 70 degrees. If kept too warm eggs dry out rapidly and will not hold their vitality. A good rule is not to set eggs over two weeks old. The idea that jarring, as by thunder, will injure the hatching of eggs is without foundation; likewise the advice to let eggs rest after shipping has been proved to be groundless.

Accommodations For Sitting Hens.

The convenience of the arrangement for sitting hens has a great deal to do with the success of the hatching. By all means I should advise that a place be provided for the sitting hens away from the general poultry house. This may be in a separate room or building, where tiers of boxes are used for the nests and feed, water and dust wallow provided in the room. The nest boxes are open on the top, not on the side, and a board is laid loosely across them to confine the hen. The hens are set in groups, so that those sitting on eggs which are to hatch the same time may be given their liberty at once. The attendant has only to remove the board from the nest, lift off the hens and return in a hour to see that there is a hen on each nest.

Another scheme for the easy handling of sitting hens, the plans for which have been largely sold, consists in constructing a series of outdoor nests and runways made by setting foot wide boards on edge about one foot apart. The runways are covered with laths or netting except the one in which the nest is constructed, this being protected from the weather by another wide board to form a roof. Each hen thus has her individual nest and a runway, in which the hen may exercise and dust herself to get rid of lice. Old fruit cans are used to provide food and water.

Such an arrangement for sitting hens reduces the work of caring for them to a minimum, and if the nests are well protected from the weather and the ground where the nests are located thrown up so that the water will not run in the results are usually better than with hens set indoors. The nests should be arranged so that hens may be shut on them when the eggs begin to hatch, or the restless hen will frequently leave the nest with the first few chicks and allow the others to die in the shell.

In the case of artificial incubation we have a number of points to look after that do not concern us when hatching hens. The first to be observed is uniform temperature—103 for all eggs in the machine at all times. The second consideration and one that causes much more trouble in practice is to provide just sufficient circulation of air of just sufficient dryness to cause the eggs to lose water by evaporation at the normal rate; otherwise the body of the chick will contain too much water or not enough and die in the shell or shortly after hatching. The novice can do no better, as far as this and other points of incubation are concerned, than to follow the directions of the maker of his machine.

The following discussion of the points of a good incubator are given to help the poultryman in selecting a machine or in deciding whether he is capable of handling the problem of artificial incubation successfully rather than for the purpose of teaching him to run any particular incubator:

The case of the incubator should be built double or triple wall to withstand variation in the outside temperature. The door should fit neatly and should be made of double glass. The lamp, both bowl and chimney, should be made of heavy metal material and should have a wick sufficiently wide to maintain the temperature of the incubator with a low blaze. The lamp is generally placed at the end of the machine, though there are some good incubators now made with the lamp placed underneath the machine. The heat is got from the lamp to the eggs by means of a circulation of hot air or a tank of hot water. The hot air machines seem to have proved most successful in practice, and the majority of well known makes are now of that type. It is easier, however, to make a cheap hot water machine that will retain the heat than it is to make a hot air machine. This is because the tank of hot water holds the heat against sudden changes in outside temperature.

Regulators composed of two metals, as aluminium and steel, are best. Wafers filled with ether are more sensitive, but weaker in action. Hard rubber bars are frequently used. The incubator needs no arrangement for turning eggs, as this is not as important a part of the operation as is frequently stated, and the eggs can be rolled around readily with the hand at the time the trays are taken out to be turned end to end, a precaution necessary to equalize any effects due to different temperatures in the various parts of the machine. Cooling the eggs, upon which many incubator manufacturers lay considerable stress, has never been proved to be of benefit. A good thermometer is essential in running an incubator and is best laid face downward on top of the eggs. Thermometers hung in a fixed position above the eggs frequently fail to register the temperature of the eggs themselves.

The best location for an incubator is in the cellar. The more even in temperature this cellar is kept the better. The cellar should not be so damp as to warp the incubator, but, on the other hand, should not be entirely dry. If there is a furnace in the cellar or it is in any way heated open water should be exposed in a warm place. The ventilation of the cellar is not as important as is ordinarily imagined, for chicks need very little oxygen. The increased evaporation induced by too much ventilation is a greater evil than lack of fresh air.

ROBBED OF WATCH CHAIN AND MONEY

Norwood Man the Victim of a Rough Deal — Was Found in Gully in North End of City by School Children Two Strangers Offered to Help Him Find a Certain House.

G. H. Graham, of Norwood, spent yesterday in the city, and as a result of that visit is a loser to the extent of $15, a gold watch and two chains.

Yesterday morning Graham left the Munro house, where he was boarding, and took a walk to the north end of the city to find a party whom he wished to see, but he met two men.

After that his mind was a blank till late in the afternoon when he was found by school children lying in the gully, which is between the Normal school and the Margaret Cox Home for Girls.

Two boys, Harold Yelland and Chas. Simpson, assisted Graham and put him in the right direction for the Munro House. He told the boys he had lost his gold watch and chains and $15 and wept bitterly because of the loss of the watch, which had been left him by his brother, now dead.

He arrived at the Munro house alright and left for his home last night.

THE CHIMES FOR ST. JOHN'S TOWER WILL COST $5,300

And $300 Will be Given for Old Bell by Supplying Company—The Tone of the Bells Will be Sweet and Musical—An Excellent Site.

After reporting on the safety of the tower and stating that all that would be needed was a new floor, Mr. Lotz offered on behalf of the company to put in a first class No 3 set of chimes such as supplied J. J. Endlehart, of Petrolia, costing $5,575 for $5,300 and to further allow $300 for the present bell, reducing the cost to $5,000.

He wished for an early signature of contract.

Even in that event delivery could only be made by Easter in case the order was sent in not later than the 25th inst.

The tone was to be absolutely pure, and the bells in tune and satisfactory to the purchasers.

They will be guaranteed for 15 years, but last practically for all time.

The company's representative explained that it was not loudness, but purety, sweetness and mellowness of tone they aimed at.

The site was a splendid one and the notes would be heard all over the city and throughout the surrounding district, the strength in any particular quarter being subject, of course, to wind conditions.

The tower windows were excellent for outlet of sound.

Subscriptions are still coming in, Rev. W. M. Loucks, M.A., of Ottawa, and formerly of Peterborough, being among the recent contributers. He is heartily in sympathy with the enterprise.

A former resident in Toronto also writes assuring the committee of interest and support in the work.

NEW POLICE CHIEF WAS APPOINTED

Daniel Thompson, Chief of Woodstock Force Chosen as Head of the Peterborough Department —Has Splendid Credentials—Takes Office July 1st.

Daniel Thompson, chief of the Woodstock police force, has been chosen to fill the same office on the Peterborough force in succession to the late George I. Roszel.

The appointment was made at a meeting of the Police Commission at the city hall this morning.

Chief Thompson, who is 37 years of age, has been chief at Woodstock for over four years, and before his appointment in Woodstock was 12 years on the London (Can.) force.

His credentials are excellent and he made a favorable impression with the police board when he appeared before the commission as an applicant.

He commenced his duties July 1st. The salary will be $1,200 a year.

VERDICT REMOVES BLAME FROM THE TRAIN'S CREW

Jury's Finding in Inquest Into Death of Mamie Feeley, Killed by G.T.R. Express at Westcott and Park Street Crossing---Recommends Employment of Gates or Flagmen at All City Crossings.

The coroner's jury exonerated Engineer Minns and the train crew of the G.T.R. Port Hope express of any blame in connection with the death of little Mamie Feeley by the verdict they returned at last night's session of the inquest into the death of the child, who was killed last Saturday at noon at Park and Wescott streets crossing of the railway.

THE VERDICT.

The formal wording of the verdict was:—

"We find that Mamie Feeley came to her death by being struck by an engine on the Grand Trunk railway at the corner of Park and Wescott streets. We consider that no blame can be attached to the train hands. We would, however, recommend that gates or a flagman should be placed at every street in the city where the railway crosses, particularly at the above noted corner, as many school children pass there daily. We think any expense involved in the adoption of our suggestions should be borne by the railway officials."

AS TO SPEED OF TRAIN.

Witnesses were again called last night to testify as to the speed of the train.

He didn't see the train on the day of the accident. He hadn't seen it since, so he couldn't tell if its speed had been reduced since the fatality.

John Sullivan also thought the train ran pretty fast within the city limits. When asked to give the speed it made in his estimation, he said fourteen or fifteen miles an hour.

"Do you think you would be able to board it?" asked the coroner.

"I don't."

"Probably you could when you were younger," ventured Mr. Foster, the company's solicitor.

He noticed the train coming along the curve before the crossing was reached, and thought it was going about as fast as a good horse would travel. The train slowed up before the crossing was reached.

The speed of the train was uniform daily, he thought, except when it was late.

All the cars were over Park street before the train was brought to a stop at the time of the accident.

MADE MEASUREMENTS.

Mr. Foster suggested that the train would not be across the crossing before it was brought to a stop, but that it was moved on to clear the crossing.

He said the point from where the child was struck to where it was taken out from under the car was fifty-seven feet, according to his measurements. He was assisted in making them by Miss Mattie Hales, an eye witness to the accident.

He didn't see the accident himself.

The G.T.R. solicitor and Mr. Nicholls when reviewing the occurrence, disagreed as to whether the sidewalk on the north side of the track ran right up to the rails. The witness was positive it did, but after further consideration he admitted that Mr. Foster was right.

DRIVER MODIFIES EVIDENCE.

Mr. Foster stated that Engine Driver Mimms would like another opportunity to make further explanations in regard to the application of the air brakes.

Mr. Mimms said he visited the scene of the accident Friday afternoon. The last time he gave too long a distance as to how far he was from the crossing when he applied the emergency brake.

"It was a [illegible] lengths," he said, "about one hundred and eighteen feet before I struck the child when I applied the brakes. I ran altogether, after I applied the brake, about 240 or 250 feet."

"This was a good stop under the conditions. My brakes were in good working order. It is a couple of seconds or so before the brakes begin to operate.

"The other night when I was here, and when I was asked how far the train would go when travelling at fifteen miles an hour I said one hundred yards. I should have stated that I could have brought the train to a stop if it were travelling at that rate one hundred yards further on than I did when the child was struck."

The coroner questioned the engineer about the length of his run, and about the time in which he had to make it.

It was thirty-one miles between Peterborough and Port Hope, and the distance, including eight stops, had to be made in an hour and ten minutes.

It was eight miles from here to Fraserville, and that had to be made in fifteen minutes.

The engineer was examined in detail by the coroner concerning the speed the train would have to be run at to make the connections in scheduled time.

"You're an honest man," said the coroner, "and would kill no one purposely."

TRAIN CREW NOT TO BLAME

He stated he didn't want to find fault with the train crew, as, to use his own expression, they "had to make good time over heavy grades on an obselete road." He thought the train company made the train crews work at the highest pressure.

LIMIT TEN MILES AN HOUR

The coroner then addressed the jury along these same lines, and County Crown Attorney Wood explained that the maximum limit trains were allowed to run in the city was ten miles an hour.

When the jury was out a few minutes the foreman sent P.C. Meagher into the court room to ascertain if the little girl had been deaf. The child's father, Mr. Frederick Feeley, of 271 Romaine street, was in the room and states that the child had been able to hear distinctly.

The verdict was arrived at in a short time.

To us to hear the many kindly appreciative remarks which come to us daily from wearers of the modern glasses which we are now supplying. They are certainly the finest ever produced, and they recommend themselves by whomsoever used. Mr. Browett, Optical Specialist, makes a most thorough examination of the eyes, and is most careful of the adjustment, so that in every particular they are made to suit the exact needs of each eye, and the facial features of the wearer. In fact these glasses are useless unless the examiner has had sufficent experience in refracting and adapting. Accuracy, Suitability and Best Value are foundation principles upon which our Optical Business grows.

DAME FORTUNE IS NO FRIEND OF THE HARD HEADED DANE

Battling Nelson, former lightweight champion of the world, has finished a theatrical tour which is to be recorded as the most successful ever attempted by any champion who has lost his laurels. The manner in which the public has patronized the "Durable Dane" since his battle with Wolgast speaks in glowing terms for a man who has always been on the level, both in and out of the ring, and is in itself an appreciation of a fighter who has taken his medicine gamely after a setback which to many would have been fatal.

At the same time Nelson thinks the joke is on himself. Out of the twelve weeks Nelson has worked since the Wolgast battle, eleven have been under a contract with the Columbia Amusement Company. The fighter bears the unique distinction of being the only glove artist who has boxed in Washington for the past fifteen years, and is also the first professional boxer to grace the boards of the new Columbia Theatre.

But even with these distinctions, Nelson still thinks that fate has been rather cruel to him. He has been trying to pick winners in the various cities, and in every instance, with the exception of the past week, he has failed to be on the right road.

AND HE IS UNLUCKY.

Nelson fought Wolgast on February 22, and on the next day started for Chicago, where he was to work with Sam Howe's Rialto Rounders for two weeks. Howe offered him $1,300 for the first week, and $1,250 for the second, and also gave Nelson an option on 25 per cent. of the gross receipts. Nelson took the salary for the first week and received the flat sum of $1,300 for his services. The house record of the Alhambra Theatre, where Nelson played, had been $5,400, this record being the biggest in the twenty five years' history of the theatre. It was made by Terry McGovern when Terry was in his prime. Nelson, however, played to $5,000, and thereby lost $175 he would have gained had he taken a percentage, instead of the straight salary. The following week Nelson took the percentage, and played to $4,800, losing fifty dollars on the deal.

Then Nelson was assigned to Phil Sheridan's Marathon show, and went to Milwaukee. Here he took percentage and ran $70 behind the salary he might have received. The following week, in Minneapolis, Nelson went back to the $1,200 salary, and played to $6,200, again losing $350. He next went to Pittsburg with Howe, and took $1,200 for the week. His business was $7,400, again breaking the house record. From Pittsburg he went to Philadelphia, and while he again broke the house record at the Gayety, he again picked wrongly, taking a salary, and thereby dropping $50. His next two weeks were with Gus Hill's Vanity Fair show in Brooklyn and Nelson took $0,500 for the two weeks. His business in the two houses ran up to $13,000, Nelson being a heavy loser.

TOO BAD, TOO BAD.

In Boston he took a percentage and again picked wrongly, this time dropping $50 below the $1,200 mark. In Newark he took a salary and again broke all house records, dropping an even hundred. In Baltimore he took percentage, and played to $4,500 in hot weather, another house record. This cost the Battler several dollars more, so in Washington he switched back again to salary, and again dropped money, inasmuch as he shattered house records again. Ending last night Nelson has played to a grand week at the Columbia, and for the first time has picked a winner. He took percentage, and it is said he equaled the $1,500 mark for himself. During the tour Nelson has shattered seven house records in twelve attempts, which is without doubt a record for any star.

"I certainly want to thank the Eastern Wheel people for the way they have treated me," said Nelson last night. "They have extended every courtesy to both myself and my representative in every city, and have made life a pleasure for us. I am going out to New Mexico now, where I own a ranch at O-Bar, and take a good three months' rest, before attempting to regain my lightweight title from Wolgast. And I sincerely believe that when I return to New York again it will be as I was here last fall, the undisputed lightweight champion of the world."—New York Telegraph.

BENEFITS AND CONDITIONS OF OLD AGE PENSION FUND

Interesting Address by Field Secretary of the Movement—Adopted by Twelve Countries—Women Live Longer Than Men.

Many Peterborough ladies availed themselves of the opportunity of listening to the splendid lecture last night in the Y.W.C.A. gymnasium, delivered by Mrs. Willoughby Cummings, Field Secretary of the Women's Department of the Old Age Pension movement.

The meeting was open to both ladies and gentlemen.

In a brief opening address Canon Davidson introduced Mrs. Cummings as the speaker of the evening, and gave a short outline of the work in which she was engaged in, and in the interests of which she was to address the meeting.

The subject of Mrs. Cumming's address was "How You May Make Your Old Age Comfortable at Small Cost."

The lecturer commenced at the very beginning of the organization of philanthropic societies and showed her audience the gradual development of such societies up to the high standard on which they are now conducted.

INTRODUCED IN 1889.

In 1889 Charles Booth introduced the first pension system in Great Britain by which any person, providing he was eligible under certain conditions, could draw a pension from the Government out of a certain part of his savings he had placed with it for safekeeping.

ADOPTED BY 12 NATIONS.

Eleven other nations have adopted the plan and it has been growing rapidly. Before the scheme had been thoroughly developed this pension fund cost the Government large sums to maintain, but the adoption of more systematic plans had placed the scheme to a successful financial working basis.

ENDORSED BY GOVERNMENT.

Canada has only had this plan of providing for old age in force for two years. When it was first brought before the Government it was passed unanimously by the Senate and the House of Commons.

Mrs. Cummings was asked by the Government to tour Canada, presenting the scheme to the women of every city.

CONDITIONS OF FUND.

The speaker also dwelt at some length on what is called the Canadian Government annuity fund. These annuities may be contracted for on two plans, "A" and "B."

Under plan "A" in the event of death before the first payment of annuity falls due, the total amount which the annuitant has paid in, with 3 per cent compound interest, will be refunded to his or her legal representatives.

Under plan "B" by which the same annuity is obtainable for smaller payments there will be no return in the event of death before the annuity becomes due.

WOMEN LIVE LONGER.

An interesting fact brought out by Mrs. Cummings in regard to this plan was the fact that women lived longer than men.

At the close of the lecture little leaflets and folders were distributed to those present, with the hope that the earnest study of them would encourage interest in this "Old Age Pension Fund."

Maxine Elliott's Protege—Newsboy Whom She Will Educate.

MAXINE ELLIOTT AND HER PROTOGE.

"Rusty" McGillan, a New York newsboy, is going to have all he wants to eat, wear good clothes and receive an expensive education, all because he worships Maxine Elliott.

When Miss Elliott was playing at her own theater in Thirty-ninth street, New York city, last season her carriage door was opened every night when she arrived at the theater by a well mannered little fellow, who doffed his ragged cap politely and tendered her all the evening papers, neatly folded. He refused persistently to take payment for the papers, and Miss Elliott would reward his gallantry with a nod and a smile.

The night Miss Elliott opened her theatrical season last fall she was met by the same boy with his armful of papers, who acted as though it was the most natural thing in the world that he should be at his post. Such quiet and dignified courtesy on the part of a ragged little newsboy touched Miss Elliott's heart, and she has made arrangements for his schooling at the Shattuck Military academy at Faribault, Minn. She picked this institution because of its excellence and for the further reason that the boy has an aunt living in St. Paul, near enough to Faribault so that she can look after him.

The favored lad is thirteen years of age and is called "Rusty" by his newsboy comrades because of his dark red locks. He was born in Boston and came to New York city two years ago upon the death of his mother.

Preventing Colds In Spring.

Many a severe cold could be avoided, says Margaret Mixture, at this season if on coming indoors a woman would drink a cup of hot milk.

The object in drinking this is to start the blood circulating after it has become sluggish from the cold. Warm food will draw the blood to the stomach and send it later through its proper channels if digestion is what it should be. Milk is nourishing and at the same time soothing to nerves which have been overstimulated by cold. If a little salt is added the drink may be less unpalatable for those who do not care for milk.

To think that any kind of food may be eaten when one is cold is a mistake, for the digestive organs are not in normal condition at such a time and will not do their work properly. Therefore discretion should be exercised, and if milk is not taken soup is an excellent substitute. The object is to take food that is easy to assimilate and warm.

Few persons realize that when the body is cold vitality is lowered and that only those who are very strong should rely wholly upon reaction for warmth. Any one who is not strong is weakened by such reaction, and it is to reduce this strain that immediate action should be taken to restore warmth.

Colds which make one feel ill are likely to be caught when a person is fatigued, as vitality is then too low to throw off the chill and illness may result. Indigestion is another cause of cold, and it is always well to resort to a good cathartic when the first symptoms of cold are noticed.

Such attacks as the ones mentioned are caused by germs, as a rule, and if the liver is made to perform its functions there is a good chance of the germs being thrown off. The dose should be taken at night, and if possible the patient should stay in bed on the following day. This is a luxury many cannot take, and to these extra precautions, such as eating simple food and protecting the feet from dampness and cold, should be taken.

Visiting Dressmaker.

When the visiting dressmaker comes to you remember that she is not a machine, capable of grinding out work with no wear upon her being. Insist upon the worker taking a rest two or three times a day. Take up to the sewing room a plate of fruit during a short intermission. Ask her to leave the scene of hostilities and walk with you to the end of the garden or street.

Make life worth living for this woman, whose lot is not the easiest. Why, the fact that you hire her to come implies that you cannot stand the pressure and strain of a sewing siege. The visiting dressmaker has feelings and is entitled to a respectable and civil consideration of them. It is an evidence of a lack of good breeding to disregard the rights of a woman who is giving you the full value of her monetary compensation.

FORCING YOURSELF TO TAKE FOOD

The Tortures of Indigestion Banished by the Tonic Powers of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Victims of indigestion have small choice between two evils—on the one hand a starvation diet, which means great weakness and depression of spirits, and on the other hand forcing themselves to take nourishment in spite of the astute suffering inflicted by each meal.

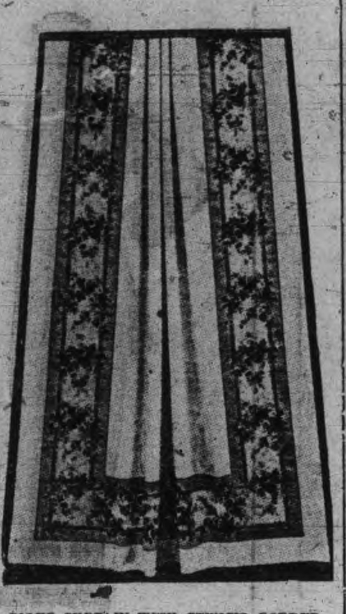
In the search for a cure they find common medicines upselt the stomach and render the food more difficult to digest. Laxatives are violent and weakening, and so-called "pre-digest-foods" merely evade the cause of the trouble and the stomach steadily grows weaker.

The common sense way of curing indigestion is the Dr. Williams way—the making of new, rich blood by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that gives tone to the weakened system and invigorates the distressed organs. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured thousands of the worst cases of indigestion through their simple tonic treatment, and one excellent example of these cures is the case of Miss M. Y. C. Roberge, Sorel, Que., who says: "For upwards of nine years I suffered almost continually the tortures of indigestion. At times I had no appetite; at others there was a craving for food, but whatever I took caused me the greatest pangs. As the result of the trouble I suffered from violent headaches, and I grew pale and weak. I tried many different medicines; some gave me a little relief, but none gave me any permanent benefit until I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had only taken these a few weeks when I found such help as I had not found before. The pains after eating gradually disappeared, my appetite grew better, and after using the Pills for a couple of months I found myself completely cured, and have not since had a twinge of the trouble. I gratefully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all who suffer from any form of indigestion."

Through their action on the blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure such troubles as anaemia, indigestion, sick headaches, rheumatsim and all forms of nervous troubles, such as neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, and partial paralysis. These Pills are especially valuable to growing girls and women and cure the headaches, sideaches and other pains known only to them. Sold by all medicine dealers, or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BEDROOM FIXINGS.

Pique's the Material Used This Season.



PIQUE CURTAIN WITH STENCIL BORDER.

There are fascinating fixings for the guest room of the summer cottage this season, and pique is the fabric that is fashioning the smartest and most inexpensive of them. For bureau covers, pincushions, couch pillows, curtains and bedspreads pique is being extensively used.

A not too heavy corded pique is chosen in white, and upon its surface is painted a design in cornflowers, wild roses or chrysanthemums. The illustration shows a charming hanging of white pique with a border of pink roses. But, to come back to the design, the colors used are supposed to be laundry proof and may be applied with a brush after the design is stamped or drawn delicately upon the pique.

Both oil colors mixed with turpentine and stencil dye will wash with ordinary care in a weak lather of white soap and lukewarm water. The added caution necessary in the "doing up" of pique is "don't wring." This material is stretched straight upon the line and allowed to drip dry.

Making a Paper Hat.

In these days of fancy paper costumes a girl should know how to make an effective hat. Tear crape paper into two inch strips the length of the sheet. Take three strands and plait closely into a smooth and even braid.

Cover a wire frame with these braids and face under part of brim with plain crape paper or mull to match. Make a bunch of paper flowers—roses, poppies or carnations—and arrange them on the hat with a band of dull green, brown or black glazed paper to represent velvet.

To Whiten Kerchiefs.

Handkerchiefs which have become discolored through careless washing may be whitened by dissolving some pipe clay in warm water and leaving them to soak in the solution all night. Next day wash and boil the handkerchiefs in the usual manner, and they will be wonderfully improved in appearance.

For the Home Dressmaker.

Skirts made by the amateur dressmaker have an unpleasant trick of drooping at the back after being worn a little time. This can be remedied by stitching a piece of tape down the back seam before wearing the skirt.

The Useful Tea Wagon.

The tea wagon illustration is a recent importation from England. It is a useful little vehicle that lightens the labor of serving 5 o'clock tea, a function that in the well regulated English household is never omitted. It wheels quite noiselessly on rubber tires, and the top is formed of a glass lift-off tray. Convenient shelves for holding cakes, bread and butter are also provided.

The average American housewife has little use for a tea wagon, for the "5 o'clock" is not an everyday function, as it is in the mother country. But a less expensive wagon built along the same lines as the handsome mahogany vehicle pictured would be very useful to her in clearing away the remains of the daily meals. Imagine how many steps to and from the kitchen might be saved if she had a little wagon to wheel about and pile the dishes upon! A single wagon load for breakfast, for instance, in many households would be all that was required.

UNDERGROUND NEW YORK.

Quicksands That Make Trouble In Building Operations.

The rock surface of Manhattan Island slopes from north to south and passes below the tide level at about Tenth street. From this point south and below the water level the island consists of a great blanket of sand and silt deposits, built up on the underlying rock by the tides and currents of recent geologic times. Beds of clay and sand vary in thickness, and in some places the clay does not appear at all. The sands vary to a considerable degree, from the coarsest gravel to the most treacherous quicksands.

To give an idea of the fineness of this sand some samples were passed through sieves with meshes of various sizes and finally through a 200 mesh sieve, the openings of which are about .035 of an inch in width. From 20 to 37 per cent passed through the 200 mesh sieve. Little may we wonder, then, that such fine material when saturated with water should flow as readily as water itself, passing through every crevice and seeking its level just like any liquid. Herein lies the reason for the difficulties encountered in excavating in quicksands, for should pumping be resorted to in order to drain a pit of water this fine material will invariably be pumped with the water and if the pumping be continued will finally be drawn from under adjoining structures, eventually undermining them.

What is probably the oldest piece of wood in existence was found overlying the bedrock at a depth of about forty feet below the street level on the site of the United States Express building in Greenwich street and was covered by a stratum of hardpan about eleven feet thick, above which was a layer of quicksand and muck about thirty feet thick. The specimen of wood is slightly brown in color and is believed to have belonged to a now extinct species of cedar. As there was no way in which the wood could have been brought into this niche in the bedrock after the hardpan stratum had been deposited by the glaciers it is evident that the tree of which this specimen formed a part had been growing before the glacial epoch.—Harper's Weekly.

Electrically Cured Meat.

A Cleveland packer explained a new process of curing meat recently to a convention of packers. With electricity, he said, he could do in from three to twenty-five days what under the old salt pickle system takes from 25 to 105 days. The discovery came about in this way: About ten years ago a man was testing an electric motor, using a vat of salt and water as a makeshift rheostat. One of the electrodes in the vat was weighted down with a brick, which after the test crumbled in the hand like dry cake. The electricity had driven the salt particles into and through the brick. As he was interested in the packing business, the experimenter wondered if electricity couldn't drive salt into meat. He tried it, and a great meat curing plant has been erected in Cleveland.—Collier's.

A Taxicab Economy.

"I'm pinning on my braid," said the young woman who had been called to the telephone. "Oh, about twenty minutes, I guess."

"That is a trick," she said, "that came in with taxicabs. A man going anywhere with a woman in an old fashioned cab would have squandered half a week's salary before he would telephone to her about the stage of her toilet. But with taxicabs it is different. They eat up money faster than the old cabs, and it is nothing unusual now for an escort to ask how much longer it will take to get ready. Within fifteen or twenty minutes of the time set he calls a taxi and gets here just as you are going downstairs. Not very romantic, no, but it's sensible and saves money."—New York Sun.

Umbrella Sails.

Experiments have been made in England with a new kind of sail for boats. The sail when spread resembles a large umbrella. The mast, occupying a position similar to that of the stick in an umbrella, turns upon a pivot at the bottom. It is usually inclined about forty-five degrees to the horizon, but the inclination can be adjusted to suit the force of the wind. The inventors claim that with this sail "heeling of the boat" can be avoided, while at the same time the sail tends to lift the boat and thus enables it more easily to mount the waves.—Harper's Weekly.

Doesn't Sigh For Youth.

A person who would stand before you and advise you to get the most out of youth—that it is the happiest season of your life—is not telling you the truth. You grow happier as you get older. As I stand before you young folks I don't envy any one of you your youth. I had as fine a time as you when I was young, but I would not go back to my youth for anything. I'm much happier now. I really believe that by the time I'm eighty I'll be having the time of my life.—Professor William Lyon Phelps of Yale.

The Housefly.

Concerning his experience while studying the life and habits of the housefly, Henry Hill, a lecturer, states: "I wish I could explain why a fly never walks down, but always up, a clean window pane and why, on the other hand, it will walk down the slanting glass front of a picture. It is also a mystery to me why a fly always rests head downward on a wall. These are habits of the housefly which offer a field for interesting study."

"I WILLINGLY GIVE THIS TESTIMONIAL

In Favor of "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

FOR THE BENEFIT OF OTHER SUFFERERS"

Spoken like a man! Mr. Paul Jones of Sarnia is proud to acknowledge the great debt he owes to this wonderful fruit medicine. He wants every sufferer in Canada to know what "Fruit-a-tives" did for him. His reward comes in the gratitude of those who take his advice, use "Fruit-a-tives", and cure themselves.

SARNIA, ONT., Feb. 5th. 1910.

"I have been a sufferer for the past 25 years with Constipation, Indigestion and Catarrh of the Stomach. I tried many remedies and many doctors, but derived no benefit whatever. Finally, I read an advertisement of "Fruit-a-tives", in which Hon. John Costigan stated that he had been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". I decided to give "Fruit-a-tives" a trial and found they did exactly what was claimed for them. I have now taken them for some time and find they are the only remedy that does me good. I have recommended "Fruit-a-tives" to a great many of my friends and I cannot praise these fruit tablets too highly, as they have done me good.

I claim "Fruit-a-tives" are invaluable in every respect, and I willingly give this testimonial for the benefit of other sufferers."

PAUL J. JONES.

Mr. Jones is favorably known all over the district of Sarnia. He was in business there for years, and is now enjoying the fruits of a long and successful mercantile career. Every reader of this paper is at liberty to write Mr. Jones and find out for themselves that the above letter is genuine and was written to "Fruit-a-tives" voluntarily and solely with the idea of helping the sick.

The financial and social standing of those who have written letters in favor of "Fruit-a-tives" is the best guarantee that this famous fruit medicine is all that is claimed for it.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only true liver stimulant in the world because it is the only medicine made of fruit juices. By its use, the amount of bile is increased while the muscles are made stronger and more capable of emptying the bowels naturally. Salts of every kind, senna and cheap purgative pills have no action on the liver. They do not increase the secretion of bile by the liver, but their action is entirely due to irritating the delicate lining of the bowels. "Fruit-a-tives"—and "Fruit-a-tives" alone—can and will positively cure Constipation, Biliousness and Torpid Liver. In the case of Mr. Jones, the long standing Constipation had affected his digestion, causing catarrh of the stomach. As his bowels became more regular, the digestion improved. When the Constipation was cured the Indigestion, which was caused by the Constipation, was cured also.

"Fruit-a-tives" has proved its value and has made its way solely on merit. "Fruit-a-tives" is probably the best known, and most highly appreciated medicine in Canada. The sales of "Fruit-a-tives" are enormous and are increasing every day. The people realize that at last they have one remedy that will positively do all that is claimed for it—and they show their appreciation of this honest, reliable fruit medicine by using it themselves and recommending it to their friends.

"Fruit-a-tives" is one of the few medicines that may be taken day after day with only benefit to the health. If necessary, "Fruit-a-tives" could be taken for twenty years, because it contains only fruit juices and tonics—nature's natural remedies for all Stomach, Liver, Bowel, Kidney and Skin Troubles. "Fruit-a-tives" is especially suited to women and children because of the pleasant taste and mild, gentle action of the fruit tablets.

If you are suffering as Mr. Jones did, take his advice and try "Fruit-a-tives". 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50. or trial box, 25c. At all dealers or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa

Some War Expenses.

The Napoleonic wars cost England $4,320,000,000. The war of 1870 between France and Germany cost $3,300,000,000, and the civil war in the United States exacted a toll from both sides of over $6,600,000,000. The Boer war cost England over $1,000,000,000, and the struggle between Russia and Japan cost more than twice that sum.

A Proverb Reversed.

Board of Works Dealt With Many Items Before the Meeting—A Possibility of Old Dickson Bridge Being Re-opened for Pedestrians.

The Board of Works met last night and transacted considerable business. There were present the chairman, Ald. Hicks, Mayor Morrow, Aldermen Metheral, Duncan, Duffus, Gillespie, Graham and Phelan.

WHAT WAS DONE.

A sidewalk and drain, with a 12 inch pipe will be built on the west side of Park street, between Lake and Romaine streets.

The engineer will make a report as a result of a request for the grading of Aberdeen Ave.

Mr. Walter Scott, Park street, asked for a short length of sidewalk. It will be built.

Boliver street, from Park street to John street will be improved.

W. H. Hamilton, Rubidge street, wrote re a crossing to his residence. —Granted.

The sidewalk on Lansdowne street will be laid in a manner to give the full width to the street. Any obstructions will be removed.

Mr. Arch. Hall asked that a wooden supporting pole for a telephone pole at the corner of Aylmer and Simcoe be removed and an iron guide post be placed there instead. The telephone company will be asked to make the alteration.

Wm. Green owns property at the corner of Charlotte and Water streets. There is some dispute about the [illegible] reserve and W. Green's property is affected. Last year's committee investigated last year. The city solicitor will make a report at the next meeting.

The engineer will make a report on the old Dickson bridge re the cost of repairing and make it possible to be used for foot passengers only.

Ald. Duffus opined that a sidewalk at the cereal dam would be a more satisfactory step. The engineer will find out how the prospects are for such a proceeding.

There are some poles on George street which it is thought might just as well be removed.

They may be.

Ald. Duncan suggested a water main for Auburn, now that the Electric Light Co. is about to build a new dam. Another suggestion was a foot bridge.

The plans of the new Smith street bridge allow for a water main, but the matter will be looked into.

The engineer wrote re the practice of throwing refuse on the street.—Referred to Police Commissioners.

How far east does London street extend? Does the small bridge at the east end belong to the city?

The city solicitor will report. If the city does not own the bridge there will be no repairs.

The chairman will prepare a by-law authorizing the laying of sewers on streets regarding which notice has [illegible] been petitioned against.

The chairman was authorized to have Mr. Chipman, C.E., prepare the plans and specifications of the new pumping station and sewers, and to see that tenders be advertised for the construction of these works.

SOLDIER MASONS CONFER DEGREE

Officers and Men of Peterboro' Garrison Confer 1st Degree

An interesting communication of Peterborough Lodge, A.F. & A.M., was held last evening at the Masonic Hall, when members of the fraternity attached to the Peterborough Garrison (in uniform) put on the work of the evening, viz., the conferring of the first degree. The 57th Peterborough Rangers, the Prince of Wales' Dragoons and the Canadian Field Artillery were represented, and the bright uniform added much interest to the event. In command of Wor. Bro. Lieut.-Col. Stevenson, the Bro. Masonic officers and men of the Peterborough Garrison took possession of Peterborough Lodge, A.F. & A.M., a complete surrender having apparently been decided upon. It proved from from the moment of entry to be a very friendly invasion, and the incident will bring about no serious complication, but serve rather to deepen and extend fraternal relations. A large gathering witnessed the invasion and were much interested and impressed by the ceremony which followed. The work was performed with that military precision and exactness which was to be expected of Wor. Bro. Lieut.-Col. A. Stevenson and his able assistants, and many of the brethren expressed the hope that this new feature would become an annual event. The following brethren acted as the officers of the evening during the exemplification of the degree:—

Immediate Past Master
Rt. Wor. Bro. Capt. D. Walker, 57th Regiment.
Worshipful Master
Wor. Bro. Lieut.-Col. A. Stevenson. 57th Regiment.
Senior Warden
Wor. Bro. Capt. A. H. McLean, 57th Regiment.
Junior Warden
Wor. Bro. Capt. R. P. Watt, 57th Regiment.
Chaplain
Wor. Bro. Lieut. Dr. J. H. Eastwod, 57th Regiment.
Secretary
Bro. Capt. V. Eastwood, 57th Regiment.
Director of Ceremonies
Bro. Lieut.-Col. Dr. J. T. I. Halliday, 57th Regiment.
Senior Deacon
Bro. Lieut. S. T. Medd (3rd Prince of Wales) Dragoons.
Junior Deacon
Bro. Lieut. W. R. G. Higgins, 57th Regiment.
Senior Steward
Bro. Lieut. G. K. Rackham, 57th Regiment.
Junior Steward
Bro. Capt. W. C. Ackerman, 10th Brigade, Canadian Field Artillery.
Inner Guard
Bro. M. Comstock, 57th Regiment.
Tyler
Bro. Capt. E. S. Clarry, 3rd (Prince of Wales) Dragoons.

It was expected that the D.D.G.M. of the district, Rt. Wor. Bro. Dr. Ford, of Norwood, would have attended the meeting, but he was no doubt unable to do so owing to professional duties. Wor. Bro. Lieut. Dr. G. S. Cameron, of the 57th Rangers, was to have occupied the Senior Warden's chair, but was called out of town.

After the closing of the lodge the brethren assembled in the spacious dining hall, where a pleasant hour was spent, a short toast list being offered, interspersed with songs and recitations. Those contributing to the programme were Wor. Bros. H R. H. Kenner and J. Crane, Bros. W F. McIlroy, D. Moore, H. Morphet and E. V. Moore.

The company dispersed with the Junior Warden's toast and the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

CHURCH UNION DENOUNCED BASIS IS FRAUDULENT

Rev. Dr. Griffin Denounces it—Doesn't Want it Between Presbyterians and Methodists on the Basis as Arranged—Speech Heartily Applauded.

Chatham, June 6.—Ministers and laymen joined in hearty sympathy with Rev. Dr. Griffin of Toronto at the London conference Saturday afternoon in a strong denunciation of the basis upon which it is proposed to form a church union between the Presbyterians and Methodists.

Dr. Griffin, who is the secretary of the superannuation fund of the Methodist Church, presented his annual report. This year they will have a reserve of $100,000. The expense of managing the department is only three-quarters of one per cent. It is the intention to resume the scale for the payment of annuities of 1902, which had of recent years been reduced. This will grant $10 a year for every year of service and over given by the beneficiaries.

Dr. Griffin was asked what he thought of the arrangements regarding the superannuation fund, as laid down in the provisions for the proposed church union.

"I am your man, if you want to go into that," replied the doctor with some show of spirit. "I think it is absolutely wrong. I am not opposed to the principle of the union, but I am opposed to the basis of the union and the clauses which relate to the superannuation of ministers. It would be most unfair to the ministers of the Methodist Church, who have been paying into that fund for years, in full confidence that the obligations of the men at its head would be definitely carried out.

"Such a deal would be illegal in commercial business, and it should be so viewed in church business as well. If men would propose such an arrangement in the business world, they would be arrested for fraud, and if they carried through such a deal, they would be placed in the penitentiary. If the proposed arrangement were carried through, the raising of the money for the fund would be left to the ministers of the churches and to the moods of the congregations. The present ministers are not paying into the fund and do not expect to benefit from it, and therefore, they would be inclined to be half-hearted in their appeals to their congregations for contributions.

"The present proposal of church union would wreck the superannuation fund, and when you do that you cut off the very vital part of our whole church system. These broken down ministers have to be cared for. If they are not, there is not much chance of getting young men to enter our ministry. The ministers have paid $400,000 into this fund, and it is our duty to see that their interests are guarded and protected. The Presbyterian ministers would not be affected by this clause of the union, as they have other sources of assistance and other means for doing the same work. The men in high offices who are talking church union have no use for the superannuation fund."

One of the laymen asked if it were the intention of increasing the assessments for the fund. He was confident the people would object to increased amounts. Dr. Griffin replied that if the people really understood the situation, they would not object to the assessment.

NOW NEARING COMPLETION

Six Weeks Will See Ontario Power in Working Order.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 6.—Notwithstanding all the difficulties and delays which have confronted the Hydro-Electric Power Commission in providing cheap power for Ontario, the scheme will come into actual realization in six or seven weeks time, when power from the Ontario Power Co.'s plant here will be delivered through the Hydro-Electric transformer station to those municipalities in Ontario that are ready to accept delivery.

On Saturday a party of Toronto newspaper representatives went over the Hydro-Electric transmission line from Dundas to Niagara Falls, viewing the course of the entire right of way, the transformer station at the Falls and the plan and equipment of the power company.

The party was met at Niagara Falls by Hon. Adam Beck, chairman, and P. W. Sothman, chief engineer of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, and P. W. Ellis, Toronto, vice-chairman of the Niagara Falls Park Commission.

One feature of the line of transmission towers stretching across the peninsula, was the care that has been taken to avoid breaking up farms. With few exceptions the towers have been placed next the fences along the roadside, few trees have been destroyed, and the farmer is working his land without danger.

The transformer station is situated on the hill above the park. Power is now being received for testing purposes. All the equipment has been specially designed to take care of the 110,000 volt current. Equipment had not been built for the treatment of electricity at this high voltage before. This station is practically ready to do business.

CANCEL BAPTIST RESTRICTIONS

Providence, R.I., June 6.—The elimination of all sectarian restrictions from the charter of Brown University, is overwhelmingly favored by the alumni, as shown by the poll of the graduates, the result of which was announced yesterday. The vote in favor of dropping the restrictions was 2,008 to 223. The matter will probably go now to the trustees for final action.

The present restrictions require a majority of the university's fellows and trustees to be Baptists and its president to be a Baptist clergyman.

WANTS ESTATE OF ABSALOM SHADE

Galt, June 6.—Recollections of the late Absalom Shade, founder of the Galt Pioneers, storekeeper and extensive owner, and the most prominent man in the district when the settlement was known as Shade's Mills, has been revived by the receipt of a letter from Miss Mary Ulman of Sharon Springs, Penna., addressed to the mayor of Galt, and claiming a large interest in the Shade estate, in behalf of certain nephews and nieces in the States. The writer asks the mayor to investigate and report as to the disposition of the estate, failing which she will engage a lawyer.

If there is anything substantial back of the claim it would involve the title to Galt property held for over half a century.

15 YEAR OLD LAD DROWNED IN CAMP

Owen Sound, June 6.—That not one of nine men who came to assist in the unsuccessful attempt to rescue George Kirkland from drowning Saturday afternoon could swim was the curious fact that developed at Sucker Creek, a large stream that runs into Owen Sound Bay through North Sydenham. The lad was 15 years of age, a ward of the Children's Aid Society of this town, and had been placed out to live with D. A. McGregor of Balaclava. He was around helping while some sheep belonging to James A. Lemon were being washed, and, without being noticed, slipped into the water at a point where there was a hole about ten feet deep, and was going down for the last time when Mr. Lemon noticed him. Dan Stewart jumped in to save him, but he was rescued with difficulty. An hour later the body of the boy was recovered.

THIRTY THOUSAND JEWS EXPELLED

Berlin, June 6.—The expulsion of Jews in Russia is increasing day by day, according to the despatches received by the Jewish Aid Society here. Up to the present more than 30,000 Jews throughout the country have been expelled from the forbidden cities, and not less than 7,000 of these resided in Kiev. In most of the cases no notice was given to the people, who were compelled to leave the cities immediately abandoning their houses.

Dr. Bernard Kahn, secretary of the society, who is in constant communication with Russia, says that small tradesmen and artizans form the majority of those expelled, and it is they who are placed in the most direct straits. No details have been received of any acts of brutality towards the Jews, however. Streams of emigrants are proceeding to Canada, the United States, and the Argentine Republic, and, indeed, wherever they have relatives, but most of them, under the guidance of rabbis are turning to Oriental Turkey, where the Jewish leaders are arranging to establish colonies.

MISHAP WAS DANGEROUS

Newark, N.J., June 6.—Fred L. Owen, narrowly escaped electrocution Saturday when the dirigible balloon, in which he was sailing, alighted directly on two trolley wires and hung there. Owen could do nothing to aid himself for fear of contact with the deadly wires, and had to cling to the machine until traction employes could clear it.

A leak in the gas bag forced Owen to descend suddenly without being able to select a suitable place to alight. After being rescued from the wires, he was able to resume his flight.

NO WEDDING BELLS FOR HER

St. Catharines, June 6.—Port Dalhousie was to have been the scene of a wedding to-day, but the ceremony has been called off. For some time one of the charming and popular young ladies of the village has been preparing for the event; invitations had been sent out and a large number of presents had been received at the house.

A few days ago, however, the intended bridegroom called at the house and made a confession. It was that he had changed his mind and was enamored of another. He is a prominent real estate agent of St. Catharines.

MRS. HETTY GREEN LEAVING COURT PHOTO BY PAUL THOMPSON

MRS. HETTY GREEN (SKETCHED IN COURT.)

When Mrs. Hetty Green, reputed to be the world's wealthiest woman, heard a verdict returned against her in the City Court in New York recently, she changed her opinion of juries, asking if there was no justice for wealthy women as emphatically as she had just previously declared:—"The jury is satisfactory. Juries have always been good to me. I have never lost a case."

Her quick change of view caused her to cry "Outrage!" when the jurors brought in a verdity for the Safe Deposit Company of New York, which sued Mrs. Green for $569.25 for unpaid rent of eleven safe deposit boxes in their vaults. Judge Joseph I Green presided at the suit against the famous woman of the same surname.

When the jury returned a verdict after twelve minutes' deliberation Mrs. Green, who had herself been on the stand and said something about "black mail" in her testimony, showed much agitation.

"Outrage Outrage!" she cried when the foreman announced that she had lost the suit. "Isn't there any justice for a woman who has money?"

INDIANS UNHEALTY

Washington, June 6.—Alarming health conditions on the White Earth Indian Reservation in Minnesota have aroused the commissioner of Indian affairs to strenuous action in an effort to stamp out disease and correct evils believed to contribute to the serious results.

A corps of physicians have submitted a report showing that of 568 Indians examined thus far, 195 were suffering with trachoma, 85 had tuberculosis in some form, with the glandular form predominating, and 75 were suffering from other diseases. The report showed that of the 150 Indian homes visited 90 were unsanitary, 40 only fairly clean, and only 20 in good sanitary condition. On the reservation there are approximately 5,000 Indians.

Aims to Surpass Curtiss.

New York, June 6.—C. K. Hamilton will attempt to fly from York to Philadelphia and return, probably next Saturday. The New York Times and The Philadelphia Public Ledger have arranged with Hamilton to make the flight.

The distance comprised in the proposed flight will be about 100 miles each way, 200 miles in all, and surpassing in distance the flight of Curtiss from Albany to New York, and Paulhan's flight from London to Manchester.

SOCIALISM THE ISSUE SO SAYS PRESIDENT U.S.

Not so Much Abolition of Private Ownership, But the Wiping Out of Abuses Connected With it Next Campaign Cry May Be.

Jackson, Mich., June 6.—President Taft in his speech here Saturday proclaimed socialism to be the great problem that confronts the American people, an issue that is soon to come and that must be skillfully met.

By its history, the President declared, the Republican party had shown itself capable of dealing with the great questions effectively and wisely, and he predicted that the American people would soon have to determine whether it should trust the same party with the solution of "that problem than which we have had no greater in the history of the country."

His reference to socialism came at the conclusion of a brief history of what the Republican party had done. He said:

"For the future I shall say nothing because you would say I was making a political speech. All I can say is that the issue that is being framed as it seems to me is the issue with respect to the institution of private property. There are those who charge to that institution the corporate abuses, the greed and the corruption that grew out of these abuses, the unequal distribution of property, the poverty of some and the undue wealth of others, and therefore say: 'We will have none of it, and we must have a new rule of distinction that for want of a better name we shall call socialism.'

"On the other hand, it is contended that it is not the institution of private property that should be abolished, but only that the time has come in which it is necessary to lay down certain rules restricting and regulating the use of that private property which shall not deprive the world of individual effort, but which shall still keep the law and the opportunity to use private property under such control that these abuses may be wiped out and the boon of individual effort be left to us.

"Now, my friends, that presents a great and difficult problem that I am quite willing to admit we have not yet solved, and the question which the country will have to determine, after all, is which party it is which has heretofore shown sufficient skill and effectiveness in dealing with great issues, which party can be trusted to solve that problem than which we have had no greater in the history of the country."

Mr. Taft's speech was delivered in the open air at Keeley Park at a grand stand filled with a crowd which gave him a demonstrative welcome. He spoke with great earnestness, and his remarks, coming as a reiteration of a brief reference to socialism in his speech at Ada, Ohio, Friday, seemed to impress his hearers deeply. By many his words were taken as framing an issue for the coming campaign.

It became known yesterday that the President came near to spending Saturday night in traveling through Canada. When the itinerary of the trip was made up by the railroad officials it called for handling the President's car from Jackson to Buffalo over the Michigan Central Railroad, which runs through Canada from Detroit to Buffalo. When this came to the attention of the White House officials there was a hurried change of arrangements, and Mr. Taft did not leave the confines of his own country.

A NOTED AUTHOR DEAD

New York, June 6.—Stephen Van Rensselaer Ford, author, editor, composer and critic, died yesterday morning at his home here. He was 74 years old, and had been in ill-health for five years.

Mr. Ford was for many years connected with the Methodist book concerned in an editorial capacity, and had been assistant editor of The Methodist Review. He composed several battle hymns which were sung by the union armies.

HALF A TOWN WAS BURNED

Lexington, Ky., June 6.—A special from Hyden, Ky., says that over half of the houses in that town were destroyed by fire, believed of incendiary origin, Friday night. The loss is estimated at $75,000. Hyden Academy was burned about a month ago, it is believed, by the same persons.

Hyden is the scene of a feud warfare of many years between the French and Eversole factions. It is far from a railroad and in an almost inaccessible region.

KING GEORGE CALLS THE LEADERS TO DISCUSS POLITICS

Asquith and Balfour Will Attend Confab Out of Which His Majesty Hopes to Secure a Compromise With Regard to the Lords' Veto.

King George has taken a hand in the political struggle which has stirred Great Britain for months.

He has called a conference of the leaders of all the political parties in an effort to obtain a compromise in the fight over the curbing of the veto power of the House of Lords.

Mr. Balfour pledged himself some time ago to give the present King every help he could give in his difficult position. This pledges Mr. Balfour to the conference, and Mr. Balfour's acceptance compels Premier Asquith's.

Whether the conference will end in any compromise is impossible to anticipate. The difficulties appear now to be unsurmountable, but the overwhelming desire for peace among the masses, the Tory dread of fighting on such an unpopular issue as the House of Lords, the Liberal dread of affronting popular sentiment, and the Englishman's racial love of a compromise may perform miracles.

It is quite possible that the Government will not be sorry to postpone the election till January; but a September election must still be counted among the possibilities.

The Tribune's London correspondent cables: The Prime Minister's return is awaited by the advanced men of the Liberal party with languid interest. They assert that David Lloyd-George has made a fresh compact with John Redmond, by which the armistice can be safely prolonged for several months. A stringent revision of the royal declaration so that it will contain nothing wantonly offensive to Britain's Catholic subjects is the price which the Ministers are willing to pay for the postponement of the veto question. It has been accepted by the Nationalist leader as a concession which the Irish Catholics will highly appreciate, and it will be a fresh proof of Mr. Redmond's success in obtaining what he wants.

EVANGELICALS ARE INCENSED

Berlin, June 6.—The encyclical recently issued by the Pope on the occasion of the third centenary of the canonization of Saint Charles Borromeo, is attracting much attention in Germany. The newspapers of all shades of opinion are carrying on a lively discussion of the subject, and the Conservatives and National Liberals introduced interpellations with reference to the encyclical in the Diet yesterday, which are expected to lead to a warm debate this week.

In this encyclical the Pope, in extolling Borromeo as the champion of Catholicism against the Protestant reformation, said that he established at the time of the council of Trent that the principles of Catholicism had been undermined by Martin Luther.

The Conservative interpellation asks the Government what it proposes to do in order to meet "such insults to the evangelical church that the Prussian legation to the Vatican be abolished.

SECOND TERM FOR EARL GREY?

Ottawa, June 6.—Great pressure is being brought to bear to get His Excellency the Governor-General to remain for another term of four years as the King's representative in Canada, and, from hints that have been dropped in official circles, it is considered that this extension is not an impossibility, though there are practically no precedents where the Governor-General has exceeded the term of five years.

It was pointed out Saturday that His Excellency leaves on Tuesday next for England, and until a few days ago there was no word of his going back so soon. Therefore, the outcome of His Excellency's visit to England will be watched with much interest.

HARD HIT BY JACK FROST

Malone, N.Y., June 6.—Reports from all sections of northern New York show that the severe frost of Friday night was widespread, and many thousand dollars' damage was done to vegetable gardens, corn, clover, potatoes, hops, and especially to small fruits just budding or blossoming. The ground in some sections was frozen hard. Ice formed on all still pools of water, and in the woods it was not melted by the sun until nearly noon.

Shot by Companion.

Brantford, June 6.—The fourteen-year-old son of Wm. Creighton, butcher of Burford, was shot in the abdomen by a bullet from a 32-calibre rifle in the hands of a boy named Saunders; and died yesterday. The boys had a ground hog in a trap and Saunders evidently intended to shoot the animal. Creighton held the trap and received the shot.

WILL BUILD A MONSTER LINER

London, June 6.—In line with its policy to operate the largest craft afloat, the Cunard Company has announced its intention to invite bids for building a liner of 50,000 tons gross register. The purpose this time will be comfort in travel rather than speed. With this in view, a combination of reciprocating turbine engines will be installed. Special attention will also be paid to providing ample cargo accommodation.

Kings Confer.

Rome, June 6.—King George of Greece arrived here Saturday in the strictest incognito to confer with King Victor Emmanuel regarding the Cretan situation and to urge Italy, as one of the four protecting powers of the island, assist in the realization of the Cretan ideal.

RAILWAYMEN GET INCREASE

Chicago, June 6.—The 27,000 members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen Saturday gained important increases in wages amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars yearly by the decision of the arbitration committee which has been deliberating in Chicago.

Firemen on main and branch passenger service get an increase of 15 cents a hundred miles. The men had demanded 25 cents. Firemen in irregular freight and mixed service get an increase of 15 cents a hundred miles on oil engines and 30 cents on coal engines. They asked for 40 cents. Firemen in local or weigh freight service get an increase of 25 cents a hundred miles. Firemen on the Mallet type of locomotive get $1 a hundred miles. Firemen on yard service get an increase of 25 cents. Hostlers and other classes of employes get an increase of 35 cents.

SANTIAGO SHAKEN BY EARTHQUAKE

Havana, June 6.—Reports from Santiago, where a violent earthquake occurred Friday afternoon, say that heavy damage resulted from the earth's shaking. Business buildings toppled and residences were ruined. In several streets pavements were twisted from their foundation.

Tremendous rumblings preceded the quake. Residents of Santiago recognized these as an indication of the coming shock and rushed from buildings. Only two or three deaths are reported.

NOVA SCOTIA BARONETCY

Edinburgh, June 6.—The court gave judgment Saturday in favor of Alexander Wentworth Macdonald Bosville, who sought to have his grandfather, Godfrey, the third Lord Macdonald of Armidale Castle, on the Island of Skye, declared legitimate.

The judgment of the court indicates the right of the petitioner to the Nova Scotia baronetcy, which was created July 14, 1625, and is next in precedence to Gordon of Gordonstown.

19th Regiment For the Carnival.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 6.—Word was received here yesterday that the 19th Regiment will attend the international carnival on June 14. William German, M.P., notified the committee that permission for the regiment to leave the country for the American side under arms and for the States regular to enter Canada under arms was practically assured.

King Visits Chamberlain.

London, June 6.—King George visited Joseph Chamberlain at his London residence Saturday afternoon. He remained more than an hour and took tea.

Mr. Chamberlain was unable to meet the King at the door.

Buried In Coal Bunkers.

Victoria, June 6.—Buried by a fall of coal in the bunkers of the Empress of India, which arrived Saturday from Yokohoma, a Chinese fireman was suffocated when the liner was two days out from Victoria. The Chinese was missed by the other stoker and search was made for him, but not until his corpse was found in the coal was his fate known. The body was brought to port and will be shipped back to China.

Big Store In Trouble.

Kansas City, Mo., June 6.—The Jones Bros.' Dry Goods Co., the largest department store in Kansas City, covering a block of ground and owning a large mail order house, went into the hands of receivers appointed by the federal courts Saturday morning. Backward spring trade is given as the cause.

The creditors are mostly banks. The store will continue just as it is.

The Daily Review

MONDAY, JUNE 6, 1910.

ABOUT POWER

Another opportunity for the city to acquire further power has passed by the purchase of the Auburn dam by the Hydraulic Power Co. This company now controls all the power than can be developed within the city limits. At one time there were four dams between Hunter street bridge and the northern boundary of the city. Now there are only two, and the Hydraulic Company owns both.

North of the city, as far as Buckhorn Lake, every power site on the Trent Canal, except two, is controlled by companies or individuals, and the two dams not so controlled are, from the point of view of the development of power, the poorest of them. To the south the conditions are largely the same. A company controls Heely's Falls, the best power on the route, and at Campbellford the town has one dam and companies the rest.

Peterborough missed owning Burleigh Falls by a very narrow margin. It must be remembered that it is only a few years since the practicability of long distance transmission of electricity was demonstrated. The city woke up to the desirability of the Burleigh power when it was seen that it could be transmitted here, but Mr. Culverwell had seen it first. He had an option on the property, and he took up the option.

That opportunity was lost. Heely's Falls is gone. Other power sites are gone and going. Does this city want to own power that, under municipal management and control, can be used to build up the city? If it does, it should not let slip any opportunity that is left.

The Hydraulic Power Company had power to run its mills, its railway and its light and power plant without the Auburn dam. But it has purchased the Auburn dam and put one competitor out of the way. It may now be satisfied and it may not. It may take further steps any time towards a more complete power monopoly here, while the Seymour Company is conveying power from the canal dam on the Trent to Madoc, Belleville and elsewhere.

Peterborough should have abundance of hydro-electric power and have it under such control that there would be a certainty of permanantly cheap rates. It cannot have that certainty with the power under private control. What will be done about it?

WANT MORE MONEY

The London Conference of the Methodist church of Ontario have put themselves on record of wanting more money, not for the heathen who prance the foreign lands, naked and comfort[illegible] who have had tendencies that way in the west, but for another cause altogether.

The conference has asked the general session to raise the minimum salary of the clergy. The plea is a just one. It is not made for the silk-topped, broad-clothed clergy of the city with free house, bath, electric light and comforts that the ancient apostles never dreamed of. The plea is made for the country parson.

The city clergyman knows just where he is at. If it rains it is only a little way to the church, if one of the members seeks consolation in the dying hour, it at longest, takes but a few minutes to reach the bedside. If there is a marriage, why it may be just around the corner, and he may get $10 or $100 for the tying of the Gordian knot. His salary is all the way from one thousand to three or four, and in some cases ten thousand dollars is paid a crack clergyman, who can deliver the goods and tickle the spiritual palate of the congregation.

But this poor underpaid remnant of the circuit rides has a precarious living. He has a keen interest on Saturday night as to what the weather will be for he may have to drive 30 miles and preach twice and possibly three times between sunrise and sundown. His parishoners are miles apart, and when he calls it is no formal one. He remains for a while, stables his horse, comes in and enjoys a meal.

There are no luxurious pews in his church, no great organ or surpliced choir and the audience is not named by hundreds—a handful, that's all.

Many of these men, if married, receive the magnificent sum of $725 a year, if single, $550. An hockey player, if he is a good one, makes more than that in a few weeks and a ball player can wipe up five times as much as that between spring time and the dull days of November. But they chose the gospel.

Now when these men are not yet ordained they get but $425 if single, while to keep a wife they are voted a princely addition of $75.

A TWENTY THOUSAND CLUB

A man named B. J. McCormick discovered Welland. Mr. McCormick is an American and when he made his discovery he told the North American continent about it in printers' ink. This important find was made by him about five years ago and since that time the town has turned from a dismal dusty burg, dusty in the summer time, sloppy in the spring and fall and frozen up in the winter, to one of the smartest small towns in Canada. It has incidentally trebled its population, and has a fair-sized town living immediately outside its limits.

Mr McCormick is a great publicity agent. In Welland the last few years, there have been located a steel plant, a rolling mill, two electric metal smelting works, a brass bed works, a stove works, a drop forge works, a fine tool works and a cordage company. The pay roll in the rolling mill and steel plant alone is about $250,000 a year and the others in proportion, and the cordage works employs 300 people. The Beemis Bag Company of Boston, through the hypnotic influence of Mr. McCormick, purchased $20,000 worth of land and will some day put up a mill to employ about 500 people.

One of this booster's favorite slogans was: "Welland 10,000 population in 1910." He didn't reach his slogan, but he's getting there. Mr. McCormick had an ideal.

Fort William has a 50,000 club and Douglas Kerr is the president of it. Portage La Prairie has a 20,000 club. These clubs have for their membership men who are energetic and who have the growth of their towns in view. Why not have a club for Peterborough with the slogan:—Peterborough 20,000 population in 1912?

MACKENZIE THE MAGICIAN

William Mackenzie, president of the Canadian Northern Railway, is home from England, where he has tapped the money bags of that country for forty million dollars more. This wizard is ably seconded by D. D. Mann. Their history is familiar to all. Once small and insignificant in the world, they rose to the very top. Their ideals were large and they are achieving them. The president of the New York Central lines was once a section hand. The retiring president of one of the greatest lines in England was a one-time junior in the office.

"The heights by great men sought and kept,
Were not obtained by sudden flight;
But they, while their companions slept
Were toiling upward in the night."

Fortune is no hand-out. And these two gentlemen who have done so much to build up Canada—and who in the course of time will certainly both be offered knighthoods—have used their gray matter for all it is worth. Success is not in a pull or having friends to boost us. It's in the spot where we wear our hat. The stars do not foredoom one to failure and another to success. It may appear so, but if search is made, there is a screw loose somewhere, something natural in the way of explanation to make it plain, why one man succeeded and attained while the man who shared the same seat with him in school is still in the rabble.

A FINANCIAL EXPLOSION

Strictly fresh eggs held at 22c. a dozen on Peterborough market last Saturday. They once were, so purchasers of years gone by can recall, as low as nine cents. The E. Culver Company of Pittsburg sued the Buffalo Cold Storage Company to recover $2,300 paid on a carload of eggs, which were not fresh laid, or fresh, but putrid. They got $1,800. Herein is the reason for the raise, the cold storage man.

But while eggs are high and sugar is high, and meat and potatoes are high, so are ideas.

We want more amusement than our forefathers did. Their lives went by to the tune of old hundred, ours is piano fortissimo, from the cradle to the grave. If our grandmother was ill, she took herbs. If we have a pain, if our children complain, it's ho! for the doctor. The pleasures of our ancestors were simple, our pleasures are often extravagant. It isn't the price of eggs and beefsteak that is causing the great increase in the cost of living. It's the man and woman next door. Does the woman across the way have a new gown. She who peeps out must not be behind her. Are her children possessors of a new round of suits. So must her own be. Does he smoke 10c. cigars, it is 10c. cigars for the other fellow. And so through the roster of life's daily doings we are not as careful as our grandad. He went the lonely furrow at three or four miles an hour. It is a mile a minute for us.

The other day in New York a petition in bankruptcy was filed with liabilities of $23,741 and assets of $25. This fellow had a champagne thirst on a beer salary. He had been a failure as a producer, but a success as a consumer. Nearly $500 for champagne and about $500 for cigars; $65 club dues, unpaid bet $65, flowers, automobile repairs, jewelry, meals, silverware and stationery were some of the debts.

The price of eggs didn't have anything to do with his troubles and it doesn't have really so much to do with many others who are complaining.

THE POINT OF VIEW

A Terrible Case

(Galt Reformer.)

The case of Paddy Blake, of Clare, is a terrible warning to smokers. A heavy smoker all his life, he died at the early age of 119 years. Think of the centuries he might have added to his life had he not indulged in the weed.

The Growth of Mexico

(Springfield Republic.)

The census of 1900 gave Mexico a population of 13,607,259, and the one to be next October is expected to show 17,000,000, which would be an increase for the 10 years of 25 per cent. This would be a larger relative increase than the United States made from 1890 to 1900, or than it will probably show for the past decade.

To Fine a Cut

(Bruce Times.)

The Southampton butcher who undertook to lay meat down at the House of Refuge, Walkerton, at 8c per lb. for all cuts, has thrown up the contract, after being about six weeks on the job. The Southampton man had to pay the freight to Walkerton out of the 8c.

German Thrift

(Zion's Herald.)

Experts predict that 1910 will bring the total Prussian savings bank deposits to $2,000,000,000. There are rather more than 30 savings bank accounts to every 100 persons of the population of Prussia, while the total number of accounts has increased twice as fast as the rate of increase of the population.

WAIL OF THE HOUSE BUYER.

Last year I paid a landlord rent,
And when the days of spring came back
Unto that gentleman I went
And told him to repair the shack.
I bade him paint the kitchen floor
And decorate the bedrooms, too;
I bade him tint the dining room
And make the place as good as new.

Last fall I found a house I liked
And paid two hundred dollars down
And twenty-five a month as well.
The plan is one of great renown;
The house is mine or will be when
I've paid for what the contract calls.
This spring, alas, it's up to me
To decorate the parlor walls!

There is no landlord now to whom
I may appeal for spring repairs.
We need a coat of varnish on
The parlor floors and open stairs.
New window screens must be supplied.
The dining room must papered be.
I miss my landlord very much.
These bills will all be sent to me.

Today I bought a can of paint
And things I've never bought before,
As brushes and a putty knife.
I'm going to paint the kitchen floor.
And I am going to try to build
A fence around our garden small.
Although it's nice to own a home,
I miss the landlord after all.

Afraid of Seizure.

Sandusky, Ohio, June 6.—Forty corporate and individual owners of fishing fleets, appearing before the International Fisheries Commission here on Saturday, made complaint that their tugs are liable to seizure by Canadian revenue cutters, because of the lack of definition of the international boundary line.

Dr. David S. Jordan of Palo Alto, Cal., and Edward E. Prince of Montreal, constitute the commission. They were informed that the tugmen had no way of knowing when they were in Canadian waters. Decision was promised within ten days.

Why Savages Turn In Their Toes.

In the first place, the foot naturally takes that position when it has never been confined by boots or the ankle distorted by high heels. Convenience is also on the side of the natural position of the foot in the case of the savage, for he has to do much walking through long grass and undergrowth in forests. Consequently his progress would be much impeded if he turned his toes out to catch these obstacles instead of brushing them aside and outward, as he now does. Lastly, the savage uses his foot much more as a help to his hands than we do, and it is obvious that in doing this he must turn his toes in.

REPLANNING A FARM.

Points That Must Be Borne In Mind When Change Is Sought.

In "Replanning a Farm For Profit," the title of farmers' bulletin No. 370, issued by the United States department of agriculture, the matter of changing the type of agriculture on a farm when the old is found to be no longer profitable is treated. The bulletin says:

Habit frequently continues a type of farming in a community long after that type has become unprofitable. Wheat farming on fertile virgin soil is usually profitable, but there are many instances in the United States where farmers have continued to grow wheat for a number of years after it had ceased to be a profitable crop. The same is true of cotton. A two year rotation of corn and oats has been continued in portions of the corn belt notwithstanding the fact that it is often unprofitable, little or no money being made on either crop. Frequently these unprofitable types of farming continue through a series of years or until the property changes hands or new methods are introduced. The farmer finds it hard to change a lifelong habit.

A man who has grown up with the agriculture of a community is slow to believe that the type of farming he has followed and which was at one time profitable has at last become unsuited to his conditions. It is no small task to think out and change his long used type to some better kind of farming. There are several reasons why such a change is difficult. It may mean a new line of equipment. Buildings may need modification or fences must be rearranged. It may mean the introduction of commercial fertilizers or of more or different live stock on the farm. It may mean that money will have to be borrowed if the proposed changes are effected. Furthermore, the change may not succeed. At best the taking up of a new line of farming requires a readjustment of the usual ways of thinking and doing, a thing difficult in itself and requiring considerable time to accomplish.

Notwithstanding habit may set the farmer in his ways, altered conditions and lessened yield and income may compel him to change his system or go out of business. To what shall he change? How shall he go about it? What type of farming is likely to prove more profitable than the kind he is now following? What additional capital is necessary to institute a new and better system? These are the questions that confront him. They are difficult to answer. With pencil and paper in hand he may estimate the returns that may reasonably be expected by introducing more crops that build up the land, by growing more of the crop that is bringing him in the greatest amount of money, by giving more attention to the live stock that has been found to pay best and the like.

If in these calculations he meets with difficulty because of a lack of definite information as to what may be reasonably expected when improved methods are applied in the culture of a crop or in the handling of stock he may write to the agricultural college or the board of agriculture or the agricultural experiment station of his own state or to the United States department of agriculture for help. It is the business of these institutions to discover and gather facts relative to the science, practice and business of agriculture for the benefit of the farmer and particularly for the farmer who wants to improve his methods of farming. The agricultural press also undertakes to aid the farmer in the solution of problems of this character.

In addition to these sources, a few private firms have been established whose business it is to furnish expert advice on farm management for a consideration.

Not always, however, are the institutions just mentioned prepared to give the farmer information on a plan covering his whole farm. The expert dairyman cares to give advice only on dairying, the entomologist only on insects and spraying, the agronomist only on field crops, the pathologist only on plant diseases, the shepherd only on sheep. Not many care to attempt to co-ordinate all the manifold interests of the farm into a single comprehensive farm plan, and yet this is exactly what the farmer must do every day of his life if he would get the most out of his farm and make farming pay.

The farmer is not simply a corn farmer or a wheat grower or a cattle breeder or a sheep breeder or a poultry raiser, but often all of these and more combined. His farm, therefore, must be planned with reference to all of these operations and the harmonious dovetailing together of the different parts. In replanning his farm for profit the farmer must see all these different problems in a comprehensive way at the outset, omit the features that do not pay and strengthen those that do.

Fortunately many of our agricultural colleges today are co-ordinating the work of their different departments and giving courses in farm management, and usually suggestions can be obtained from these sources relative to the general management of the farm—not necessarily detailed directions for farming, for it would be as difficult to tell a man how to farm as it is to tell him how to succeed in law, but rather to furnish him a comprehensive plan for managing his farm, corresponding in a way to the plan furnished by the architect to a builder.

It is often said that a farm cannot be planned as other kinds of business are; that the vicissitudes of weather, the visitations of insect pests or plant diseases, the low prices that may prevail when the farmer has to sell and other unforeseen circumstances may interfere to make all farm plans almost worthless from a practical standpoint.

This is often quite true with reference to plans made for a particular year. But when the plans are based on average conditions for a long series of years then the objections do not hold, for, while we cannot tell what may happen during any particular season, we can foretell with considerable accuracy what the average conditions will be over a series, say, of ten years. The whole business of insurance is based on the reliability of averages. It cannot be foretold just who out of a thousand persons will die next year, but it can be stated with much certainty about how many persons out of the thousand will die. Plans for the farm likewise must represent and be based on average conditions and not on single years. The farm plan must be made for a period of years and not for a single year.

In replanning a farm it is essential that a few fundamental points in farming be kept constantly in mind:

First.—The plan should provide a reasonable reward for the labor and capital invested.

Second.—The fertility of the farm should be maintained or increased.

Third.—The plan must be suited to the capabilities of the owner for carrying it out.

It is assumed that in order to replan a farm for profit it is necessary to consider the capabilities of the farmer to put the new plan into effect. This in general will render it necessary to recombine the phases of farming with which he is already familiar or to bring in new features which are not very dissimilar to the ones he is already accustomed to.

Judging Corn Seeds.

One of the first points a judge of corn should give attention to is the seed condition of samples. Is the germ sound, and will it produce a good plant? A germination test is the best means of settling these questions, [illegible] while one is judging corn shows. The farmer should test every ear he plants.

If the germ is slender and small the plant is likely to lack vitality. Thin seeds tapering to their attachment produce weak germs, and consequently ears with such seeds must be discriminated against in scoring exhibits. The seed should be deep, but it must also be of medium width and thickness, for upon this depend the size of the germ and the amount of food stored in the seed for the early maintenance of the plant. But sometimes seeds of good width and thickness have small germs and should therefore be rejected in favor of seeds of the same form, but with larger germs.

Badly matured seeds sometimes present small, blister-like eminences over the germ, due to a separation of the cuticle from its attachment. Again, if the whole area over the germ is deeply sunken it indicates lack of maturity and consequent excessive shrinkage. Failure of the grain to separate readily from the cob is another indication of lack of ripeness. A brown or pink discoloration about the germ or the attached end of the seed is very objectionable, as is also the presence of mold or rotten seeds.

Salt For the Animals.

Salt is necessary to the health and thrift of domestic animals, and they should have it in winter as well as in summer. They need more of it probably during the period of abundant succulent feed, but the animal system requires more or less of it all the time. A good plan is to keep salt in sheltered boxes where the stock can get at it at will. This is a safeguard against neglect, and, being accustomed to it at pleasure, there is no danger that too much will be taken.

The Asparagus Beetle.

The asparagus beetle is a troublesome pest and hard to fight. Clean cutting, especially in ridge culture, keeps them well under control in spring, but considerable harm is done later on by slugs or larvae. Poultry are very fond of these beetles, and a few fowls will soon capture the matured insects if allowed in a garden bed.

In Modest Florida.

J. Curtis Sturtevant at a dinner at Palm Beach illustrated with a story the modesty of children.

"One warm February morning here in Florida," he said, "I was motoring with a young lady, and by a stream we got out to gather flowers. After awhile a boy came up and said:

"'Hey, mister, is that your girl over there?'

"'Yes, I suppose so,' said I.

"'Well, tell her to go home,' said he. 'Us fellers wants to go in swimmin'.'

"I told the young lady of this odd request, but she had not yet finished her bouquet, and she said, with a laugh, I must tell the boys she wouldn't look; she'd shut her eyes.

"This they were duly told. And they consulted gravely on it. Then the spokesman returned to me and said:

When Your Pipe Goes Out.

And the flickering embers die
And the last sweet puff, like a winging soul,
Escapes from your lips like a sigh,
Then you wake from your dream with a sudden start
And rub your eyes as in doubt,
While maybe a pain sort of tugs at your heart.
It's the way when your pipe goes out.

YOUNG GIRL RUNS A FARM.

Sixteen-year-old Edna L. Bitting is the youngest farmer in the United States and is considered one of the most expert students of agriculture in New Jersey. She has taken complete charge of Hillside farm, at Harbourton, N. J., a property owned by her uncle. The farmers of the state call her the girl wonder and admit that Hillside is one of the most prosperous farms in New Jersey.

Although Miss Bitting has only recently taken complete control, she has assisted her uncle for several years. Her father offered to pay the expenses of a college course, but the girl preferred farming to college life and insisted on helping her uncle.

While at school she passed her vacations with her uncle and soon was able to do the work of a man. She was not satisfied with the knowledge of the laborious part of the work, but took a deeper interest in agriculture and is now considered such an expert that farmers in the vicinity seek her advice.

It is an interesting sight to watch a pretty girl, neatly dressed, giving orders to and overseeing the work of a corps of farm hands, some of whom have been engaged on farms for more than a quarter of a century.

"I wouldn't live in a city if I were given a fortune," declared the girl after she assumed control. "If city girls only knew how sweet country life is they would yearn for it. I intend to make farming my life work, as I think it is as important as some of the professions girls now engage in. Agriculture is dry to read about, but when you have theory and practice combined there is nothing more interesting. My parents do not wish me to become a farmer, but I prefer it to anything else and will visit a city only when absolutely necessary."

Miss Bitting has always been considered an unusually bright girl, and she maintained a high standard while attending school. When she declined to enter an agricultural college she said she could master farming from books without further instruction. That she has succeeded even beyond her own expectations she admits and is delighted over the fact.

TRY THE MONEY-BACK CURE FOR INDIGESTION

Nine times in ten stomach derangement is responsible for sallow complexion, dull eyes and thin body.

It is the stomach that supplies nourishing blood to the muscles, the nerves, and skin. If the stomach is healthy, plenty of nutritious matter will be absorbed by the blood. If it is not healthy, the food will ferment, and undigested, will pass along through the bowels, furnishing so little nutritious matter that the blood becomes impoverished, and the glow of health vanishes.

If you suffer from nervousness, sick headache, belching of gas, sour taste in the mouth, heaviness after eating, or any other miserable stomach disturbance, you need Mi-o-na, and the sooner you get it the quicker you will be healthier and happier.

It will relieve any distressed stomach condition almost immediately. It will cure if used according to directions. Wm. Madill sells it for 50 cents a large box, and he thinks enough of it to guarantee it to cure indigestion.

WHEN HE SUCCUMBED.

Fate of a Respectable Man Who Had a Loving Wife.

They took him up tenderly. Gentle hands carried him to the ambulance, and he was hurried away to the hospital, where at last he opened his eyes. But as yet he was too weak to speak.

Apparently there was no organic trouble. The machine had worn out; that was all. The strain had been too much for his mortal frame. He had struggled on to the last with despairing courage until nature asserted itself and he succumbed to the inevitable.

No one knew him. He had been seen slowly crawling out of a respectable mansion, dragging his way along until he fell. But the house looked like all the rest, and his identity was as yet unrevealed.

He looked like a gentleman. It was presumed in the absence of testimony that he was. His appearance was that of a well to do man in the prime of life, a man evidently of family, who had a loving wife.

He was just tired. The great struggle he had been through, the suspense, the torture of it all, the fearful uncertainty, the sudden hope and the quickly succeeding despair had all left upon him their terrible marks. He was a wreck. He who was once filled with sublime courage, who walked erect and looked every man in the face, was now but the faint semblance of his former self.

He opened his eyes and smiled feebly as the nurse bent over him.

"Not that." He shook his head. He shuddered.

"No," he whispered. "I am a respectable man. But I have been home all the afternoon trying to help my wife select a wall paper to go on our living room."—Life.

MAKES HAIR GROW

Wm. Madill Has an Invigorator That Makes Hair Grow in Abundantly or Money Back.

If your hair is thinning out gradually it won't be long before the bald spot appears.

The time to take care of your hair is when you have hair to take care of.

For thin falling hair the best remedy known to mankind is Parisian Sage. It is compounded on scientific principles and furnishes to the hair root a nourishment that acts quickly and promptly and causes the hair to grow.

But remember this:—"It kills the dandruff germ, the pest that appropriates all the natural nourishment that should go to the hair root.

Parisian Sage is sold by Wm. Madill, druggist, under a positive grarantee to banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

It gives to women's hair a lustre and radiance that is most fascinating and causes it to grow abundantly.

THREEFOLD DUTY OF MAN IN CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP

Rev. Canon Davidison Spoke Instructively to Ancient Order of Foresters—Our Responsibity to Our Fellowmen, the King and God—Annual Church Parade.

"Honor all men, love the brotherhood, fear God, honor the King," from the 2nd chapter of 1st St. Peter, 7th verse, was the text chosen by Rev. Canon Davidson for his sermon to the local Court Stanley of the Ancient Order of Foresters which attended St. John's last night, on the occasion of their annual church parade.

Canon Davidson said that the Ancient Order of Foresters was one of the oldest and largest fraternal societies in the country, and spoke of its splendid agency for good in brotherhood and fraternal work.

The text had been repeatedly used in sermons to fraternal societies, but might well be repeated to remind us of our duty of the future.

The duty spoken of in it came under three heads;—The duty to our fellowmen, the duty to our rulers and the duty to God. This was out duty socially, politically and spiritually.

First we should ask ourselves if we believed in duty. Many of us did not although we wouldn't confess it. Many did what they did simply because they were compelled to do so by the mere force of necessity. But as to the great round of duties outside of doing the things involved in merely existing and keeping out of the hands of the law, nothing in life concerned them.

Duty was a splendid thing. It differentiated those who stood for the best in manhood and womanhood from those who were literally no good; those whose lives had little of the strong or noble or heroic in them.

The words of the text summed up most concisely what our duty was and told us its different departments.

No man was too degraded to be unworthy of our attention. Every man was made in the image of God and no matter how degraded a man might be there might be some possibilities for good in him. We should feel towards such men that they were our brother men and should be on the lookout to do them some sort of honor whenever the opportunity presented itself.

The second thing that suggested itself in the text was that we should love the brotherhood and this meant all members of the Christian church in the widest acceptance of the word.

As members of the A.O.F. the speaker's special hearers felt specially required to honor the brotherhood. They knew that the success of their order depended largely on the amount of loving kindness manifested towards their brothers in lodge, in society and in the world.

Passing from this phase of the text we should honor the King. The speaker commended Canadians on their patriotism and loyalty and spoke in feeling of the late King Edward.

But there was more than mere sentiment in patriotism.

"What think you of such men," said the speaker, "who throw up their hats for the king and sell their vote on election day to the first man that comes along."

There was a practical political Christianity that had to be cultivated.

And as the last and important part of ours duty we were told to fear God. Did we recognize our duty to our fellowmen and to our King and say that we did not owe a duty to Him who made us?

There was a great fraud over this country in the matter of duty to God. There were men who thought those who were converted and were doing religious work had a duty to God and that those who were outside this circle had no duty to perform. Did God ever make such a circle and place men and women in it that were the only ones who were to do their duty to Him?"

In concluding the speaker spoke appreciatively of the creditable offices of fraternal societies in bringing men to realize their obligations and in encouraging the spirit of Christian brotherhood.

OUR DUTY TO THE CHILD TOLD IN COMPREHENSIVE SERMON

At the morning service in St. John's church on Sunday his Lordship Bishop Sweeney preached a sermon introductory to the convention.

In a few stirring remarks he urged the congregation to lend their best efforts to contribute to the convention's success and usefulness.

His Lordship congratulated the citizens of Peterborough on the public spirited movement to place chimes in the tower of St. John's church. The bells would convey a general message of joy or mourning and in this way be a common possession and source of benefit to the whole community.

These words, said of John the Baptist, suggested themselves as a suitable text for a sermonbearing on a most important phase of the convention—the problem of child life.

As to parents the answer depended largely upon themselves in relation to their observance of the first law—a sound mind in a sound body. Parents were also responsible for home environment and the example and the precepts that moulded the moral character of the child.

The moral and spiritual feature of the child involved the fact whether he or she would be salt or corruption to the community.

If parents and god-parents had conscientiously disregarded their responsibilities of training and influence they had answered the question: "What manner of child shall this be?"

The preacher concluded a simple, direct and well reasoned sermon by pointing out that the clergy, Sunday school teachers and secular school teachers had a definite duty and distinct responsibility in performing their part in answer to this all important question.

Inspiring sermons were also delivered in St. Luke's and All Saints' by Rev. Provost Macklem and Ven. Archdeacon Warren.

THE MAN THAT NEGLECTS THE OPPORTUNITY AT HIS DOOR

Is the Worst Kind of Sloth—Foresters Have Splendid Opportunities That They May Take Advantage of—Sermon to C. O. F.

Rev. J. R. Webb preached to the Canadian Order of Foresters last night.

It was raining at the time of the parade, but the attendance was good.

THE SERMON.

He took as his text: Proverbs, 12, 27:—"The slothful man roasteth not that which he took in hunting." Among other things he said:

In preaching to Foresters I ought to give you at least a smell of the woods. I am well aware that your metaphorical excursions to the forests are not made in the capacity of hunters, and yet I dare to say that this text is not inappropriate.

The principle behind the proverb is this: that the worst kind of sloth is that which fails to use and enjoy the blessing which has been brought within the reach of the individual. If the bird is on the wing and you cannot bring it down your responsibility ceases with the effort, but when you are equipped with the implements with which you can bring a supply to your feet, and when real effort in the morning will make an evening of plenty a possibility, and when by sheer carelessness a man fails to use the opportunity which is at his door he deserves to go hungry.

Let me place the principle in this text before you in relation to three phases of our experience. First, the arrow of youth ought to supply our tables with plenty of old age. You are yourselves apostles of this doctrine, at least you determine that if you can prevent it your loved ones will not go hungry in the event of your death. That is a most laudable ambition, and to that end others may be taught the same thrift. You cannot too strongly urge economy upon the young men of your acquaintance. There are too many going through life supposing that "to-morrow will be as to-day, but more abundant." There is no need in this country of any large percentage of men being dependent or leaving dependents upon civic charity. In nine cases out of ten those who have to turn to church or city for material aid are brought to that condition by improvidence or prodigality in their days of plenty. I would like to emphasize the fact that the $463,979 paid out by your society in 1909 was in no sense a charity, but the giving back of funds saved by men through your co-operation, and the 7,369 initiations in the same period was an educational propoganda that will be far reaching in its results.

In the second place let me say that you should bring into the very warp and woof of your life those ideals that are mentioned on your seal. I went to gaol this week—not as a prisoner, but as a student and I was told by the Governor (who is himself a Forester) that your motto is "Liberty, Benevolence and Concord." If these exalted principles are regarded only as a decoration for your crest, they are of no more service than was the captured game of the man in the text which never found its way to the over. A man can cry liberty, benevolence and concord until he is hoarse, and avail nothing unless these have a place in his life. I saw a man carrying a banner which bore the legend 'Liberty,' and he himself was struggling under the influence of a master more tyrannical than any slave owner. There were those who found their way to our shores to seek liberty of conscience, yet they themselves became persecutors. The apostle James had the right thought when he said: 'But whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work; this man shall be blessed in his deed.'

'Benevolence' is a beautiful word, but it is more beautiful when it is incarnate in life. If the only benevolence, which your order inculcates, is that which operates after your death it is of a very poor brand. A city can warm your home and clothe your family if need be, but it can never furnish what you owe of helpful influence as a husband, a father and a citizen.

"Then I ask you again: Is the concord you boast a practical thing? Do you rejoice because your brother man rejoices? Do you weep when he weeps? Has the thought of brotherhood gripped you until you feel that you are your brother's keeper, and in duty bound to exercise an uplifting influence upon him? Lastly, Is your life fulfilling its great purpose or is it like the bird in the hands of the hunter, unservicable? And what is the great purpose of this life? The shorter catechism is right. The chief end of man is to glorify God and enjoy Him forever. Life is a probation. It is given, not to be spent, but to be invested.

What was it that made the lone life of the early foresters in this country bearable, with their limited equipment, their toilsome days, their long nights, their cruel winters. They were inspired by vision. To the forester's inspired eye the autumn leaves upon the ground became the carpets of his home, the whizz of the axe was prophetic of the laughter and song of children yet unborn, each cleared acre was a conquered province for his coming kingdom. He was a seer. He was like Abraham, who dwelt in a tent, but looked for a city. I would not be faithful to my duty if I failed to ask you, are you doing the same now? Are you holding but lightly to the things of the present, in view of the future? 'For we have here no continuing city, but we seek one to come.' You are not using your life as God intended you should if you live live for the present alone. Only as you use what is yours to-day can you expect further opportunity in the great future.

Be strong!
We are not here to play, to dream, to drift.
We have hard work to do, and loads to lift.
Shun not the struggle; face it. 'Tis God's gift.

Be strong!
Say not the days are evil—Who's to blame?
And fold the hands and acquiesce—O shame!
Stand up, speak out and bravely in God's name.

Be strong!
It matters not how deep entrenched the wrong,
How hard the battle goes, the day, how long.
Faint not, fight on! To-morrow comes the song.

Thirty-five members of the band were present and the audience was a very large one.

Peterboro' Clergyman Selected

The Publishers' Press, of Montreal, which is always alert for the needs of the newspaper, will print for syndicate service a number of sermons selected from among the best known preachers in Canada. The galaxy of names is a splendid one, including such well-known men as Bishop Worrell, Halifax; Archbishop Bruchesi, Montreal, and Dr. Symonds, formerly of St. Luke's here, and now of Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal. It is extremely gratifying to note that Rev. Canon Davidson, of St. John's church, Peterborough, is among the names mentioned.

AS WE SEE IT

Reference has been made in the press to a letter which appeared in one of the local papers, and which was offered to the Review during last week for publication. The letter was a rejoinder to some comment made by Rev. Dr. O'Brien, of the Church of the Sacred Heart, who protested against the publication of a copy of an oath ascribed to be that taken by the Bishops of the Catholic Church in Quebec, stating that the oath, as printed, was a forgery.

The Review printed, as many papers throughout the Province have printed, this oath, as well as the oath of the King of Britain, as a matter of news, and without comment of any kind. Rev. Dr. O'Brien requested that his protest be printed and it so appeared.

To carry on a discussion over such matters in a local paper, never accomplishes anything, especially a paper, such as the Review, read by all classes and all denominations. Points of doctrine or belief may be written and re-written and no one convinced. The denominational paper or periodical is the proper place for such discussion. Indeed, it generally follows, in fact it has been the case in the past, that men have engaged in discussion over religious matters in the local press, and the only result was bitter words, hard feelings and amonosity. The Review desires to avoid all this among our community, and among its readers and contributors.

WINNERS IN CLOCK CONTEST AT BARRIES

The winners in Barrie's clock contest on Saturday, June 4th, at three o'clock were:—

Mr. Herb Stock, 283 Sherbrooke st., whose timecard read 7h. 0m. 39s. He received $3 cash, and Miss A. Lane, 530 George street, whose timecard read, 7h. 0m 38s. She received $1 in cash.

These were the nearest cards presented at the time the clock was opened, 3 o'clock.

Several were presented afterwards which were closer to the time, but as they did not comply with the conditions of being at the store at three o'clock they missed the money.

What time will the clock stop this week?

Moscow, June 6.—The prefecture of police has informed the organizers of the Pharmaceutical Congress, which is to be held here, that Hebrew delegates who are pharmaceutical assistants will not be allowed to enter the city.

A Curse to the Country.

Syracuse, N.Y., June 6.—There are so many young men coursing about the country in automobiles and their pleasure absorbs such a large share of the productive capital of the country that Chancellor James R. Day, believes it is becoming a question if the automobile is not a curse to the country.

Root Celery.

Not every one knows there is a variety of celery which makes a large root like a turnip and is an exceedingly fine salad vegetable.

The seed is sown and the plants are planted exactly the same as the better known varieties, but when the roots have grown large enough, which is, by the middle of autumn, they are dug up as wanted, the tops are trimmed off and the bulbs are then cleaned and scraped and boiled tender. They are then sliced and laid in weak vinegar, to be served like pickles, or they may be served with cream or French dressing, the same as potato salad. The flavor is mild and delicious.

The Herring Line.

A senator apropos of fame said at a Washington luncheon:

"What is fame, after all? Kipling when he lived in Brattleboro took a trip to Montpelier, and the first evening he came down to the hotel dining-room he overheard this dialogue between two waiters:

"First Waiter—Do you know who that is, George?

"Second Waiter—No. Who is it?

"First Waiter—That's the celebrated Kipperin.

"Second Waiter—What's he done?

"First Waiter—Hanged if I know. Fish line, ain't it?"—Washington Star.

Looking Ahead.

Josephine, aged ten, has a decided lisp. She is also very fond of attending the matinee. The other day she was giving a spirited story of the play to Marion, who was aged nine.

"My mamma says it isn't good for little girls to go to the theatre," said Marion, with an air of self righteousness. "I'm not ever going till I'm eighteen."

"Hump!" retorted Josephine without any hesitation. "Th'pose you die when you're theventeen, then you'll be thtung!"

Basket-Making Venture.

The initial stage of what may prove to be a new and important Natal industry has been reached in Maritzaburg where a company has been floated to promote basket-making. Some 12,000 osier cuttings have been planted on a property near Edendale, and it is intended to import skilled artisans from England to teach the natives the art of basket-making according to modern methods.

AN AGE OF LUXURY.

Dress and Novelties In Food Now Objects of Greatest Importance.

Of late years, writes Lady Violet Greville, in an English publication, dress has acquired extraordinary importance. People who dressed as a necessity of their station now make dress an aim in itself. A dandy might have possessed a wardrobe full of coats, or, like the late Panmure Gordon, cherished an indulgence in 100 pairs of boots, but these were the exception, and were regarded as eccentrics. The amount of suits required by the average man now cannot be counted on the fingers. There are lounge suits and dress suits, fur coats and frock coats, dinner jackets and smoking suits, motor, golf, shooting and fishing costumes, each of which requires waistcoats, stockings and boots to match. With a woman it is even worse. Boxes enough to load a cab are required for each week-end visit, and the same dress cannot be worn twice. Our grandmothers bought lace and furs when they were married to last them their life, but the constant changes of fashion necessitate endless expenditure. Every bride in society has her diamond tiara and her sables, every shop girl wears her fur boa and carries her muff. Each year furs grow dearer, and each year women spend more on these accessories to dress. The average expenditure of a well-dressed woman is about three times that of her mother, who probably could have afforded more.

Luxury in food, too, increases. Though we may not indulge in such long and heavy dinners as our ancestors, we eat more delicately, more expensively of forced strawberries, plover's eggs, early asparagus or petitis poussins, etc., and require better cooks. Restaurants and hotels vie with each other in introducing novelties and out-of-season luxuries, and the standard of the gourmet grows higher every day. The kind of meal that once satisfied a fastidious man about town, the plain dinner that was so popular with the guests of Charlie Paris, the wine merchant, or Sir Henry Thompson, the surgeon, a bit of codfish, a beefsteak and onions, toasted cheese and a woodcock, would be considered very poor fare now to put before one's guests, who do not want to taste wine, or enjoy the flavor of claret, but to drink champagne all through dinner, and smoke cigarettes directly after.

Dirty Patagonia.

"Patagonians are not giants, as some have supposed and as the geographies teach," said a man who has traveled. "They are large in comparison with the other South American natives, that is all. Everything is relative, you know. But they are very fat. That is why they can stand the cold so well. I have seen Patagonian men and boys running around unclad while I was wrapped in warm garments, with the snow falling upon them in quantities and the wind blowing bitterly. They are kept warm by their fat and dirt. Patagonia is one of the dirtiest places imaginable. Don't go there if you hate dirt. That is my advice to all who contemplate a journey to the jumping off place of South America."

Political Burglaries.

It was through a stolen document openly seized by the British ambassador in Berlin that the British Government first learned of the recognition of the independence of America by France. The British Minister was Hugh Elliot, and he had the desk of the French Minister forced open to obtain the copy of the treaty he wanted. In 1855 a sensation was created by the discovery of a plan by which secret documents were systematically abstracted from the Russian embassy in Berlin, being copied at night in the interests of another nation and replaced in the drawer at the embassy in the morning. The burglaries had been taking place for two years before they were discovered.

Not Much Work.

"Some folks think that people in the show business have an easy time of it," said a minstrel star, "and that reminds me of what an old farmer in a little town said one day as he saw me carrying the bass drum in the minstrel parade. We had walked nearly five miles in the hot sun, and I was about ready to drop. That big drum was heavy. When we reached our car after the parade my feet were sore, my back ached, I was perspiring all over my face and was completely tired out. As I almost staggered past the old farmer he looked at me contemptuously.

"'Huh,' he said, 'these actors 'll do anything to get out of workin'.'"

A Slang Phrase.

"Bull con," a slang phrase which means to flatter, to praise with ulterior motives, had its origin in the west years ago. When the gold brick game was started the bunko men sprang a fine, high-sounding combination of words upon the simple farmers. They called it an investment in "bullion consolidated." Years after the words were cut down to "bull con" and came to mean any graft that depended upon the gift of gab. Still later it was used to describe the method of flattery.

Like Lord Morley, Sir Charles is a scholar as well as a politician. Lady Dilke once stated that her first waltz was danced with Lord Morley. "And a very good waltzer he was too," she said. In his hours of relaxation Sir Charles is devoted to rowing and the rapier, while the late Lady Dilke, who was well known as an art critic as well as social reformer, made the collecting of rare books her chief hobby.

The Disappointed Prodigal.

His father, an old man, wrinkled and white-bearded, stood at the door.

"Father, father," cried the P. S., "I've come home to die!"

"Just my luck!" groaned the old man. "I let your insurance policy lapse last month!"

Settin'.

A farmer was sawing wood when it occurred to him that he ought to have the help of one or more of his five boys. Lifting up his voice, he called, but not a boy appeared.

At dinner, of course, they all appeared, and it was not necessary to call them.

"Where were you all about two hours ago, when I wanted you and shouted for you?"

"I was in the shop settin' the saw," said one.

"And I was in the barn settin' a hen," said the second.

"I was in gran'ma's room settin' the clock," said the third.

"I was in the garret settin' the trap," said the fourth.

"You are a remarkable set," remarked the farmer. "And where were you?" he continued, turning to the youngest.

"I was on the doorstep settin' still." —Judge.

Tapping the Comet For Gas.

With a wild look in his eyes the man with the square satchel dashed down the street.

"It's coming!" he shouted. "Be prepared! It's coming!" And the crowd was close at his heels.

"What's coming?" demanded an excited citizen. "Earthquake?"

"Cyclone?" asked another.

"Tidal wave?" chimed a third.

But the man with the wild eyes shook his head and opened his satchel.

"Nay, friends," he responded solemnly. "Halley's comet is coming. Before it arrives you want to buy this celebrated volume entitled 'Comets and Their Origin.' It tells how the tail of the comet may be captured, turned into natural gas and supplied at 2 cents a thousand feet, and"—

A Student of Canada.

According to a prominent Canadian public official, recently returned from Australia, the good people in America who regard the recent sweeping victory of the "Federal Parliamentary Labor Party" in the Commonwealth as a slap in the face for imperialism, are very much mistaken, for this gentleman met the Hon. Mr. Fisher, and found that he is really a very progressive imperialist. He advocates a very progressive policy in naval and military matters, and even goes so far as to publicly proclaim his belief in universal compulsory military and naval service as the only effective means of national insurance against war, and also as a means of strengthening the national character. Mr. Fisher was very anxious to find out from my informant all he could about Canada's militia system, and had had experienced colonial officers sent to all the leading countries in the world to obtain data to be used in developing the most satisfactory military and naval systems for the Commonwealth. He is a Scotchman by birth, and has all the Scot's enthusiasm for the Empire.

My informant stated that he was surprised to find Mr. Fisher so well informed regarding Canada and Canadian public men. The Australian statesman admitted having studied the lives of Sir John A. Macdonald, Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and said that he had instructed the Australian Parliamentary librarian to procure all the books he could on the development of the Canadian constitution, the national defensive force, and the various departments of the Dominion and Provicial Governments.—Chesterfield in The Family Herald.

Why He Was Sad.

Jones' rich grandmother died, and Jones seemed unnaturally depressed and sad. His friend tried to cheer him.

"She left a last will and testament, I suppose," said Jenkins carelessly.

"Ah," chimed in Brown, "you were always a friend of hers! Of course your name was mentioned?"

"Yes," answered Jones, bursting into floods of tears, "my name was mentioned, boys. I—I am to have"—

They hung expectant, while more sobs choked back his words.

"I," he declared at last, "am to have the testament!"—London Scraps.

THE girl who is blessed with a talent for millinery is a much to be envied young person this year, for the hats are all so attractive and so especially becoming to young girls that it requires quite too much expenditure of money to be provided with all the hats desired unless they can be made at home. Fortunately, this is an age of the world when it is fashionable to be practical, and millinery classes are most popular—classes where girls listen to practical talks as to how to utilize to the best advantage materials and trimmings.

Many of the newest hats have large crowns of silk, while the brim is of the straw, either white or the shade of the silk crown. As it is the crowns rather than the size or shape of the hats this summer that have changed character since last year, it is a good scheme to make a last season's tennis hat quite up to date by removing the straw crown and placing over the wire frame a large silk kerchief. The large square silk handkerchief can now be had for from fifty cents upward in any coloring, from the palest shades of pink, blue and mauve to the most brilliant and now so fashionable Persian hues.

In actual width this year hats are really not larger than the widest worn twelve months ago, and the shapes and curves of the brim have not been materially altered. It is the straight crowns and the large head size, which permits the new hats to almost completely cover the head, which make the difference that is so apparent. If a hat that was once a favorite shape is still in sufficiently good condition therefor, it is possible by removing the crown and cutting slits in the inner side of the brim to enlarge the head size, and then by recovering the crown with a square of silk or a silk handkerchief bought for the purpose, an extremely pretty, up to date hat can be evolved at delightfully small cost. If the hat has already a wire foundation beneath the straw so much the better, but if not, wire crowns can now be bought which can be attached to any frame. A wire frame will, of course, make the hat lighter than when the straw is left and simply covered over with the silk.

THE silk square of the crown is generally the only trimming on the hat. The silk must be put on quite soft and full, with the ends gathered into a loop or bowknot in the front or a little to one side. If the silk is very soft the ends may be wired to give more style to the bow. A wide flowered ribbon may also be used to cover the crown, two widths probably being necessary. A large double bowknot of the same ribbon placed directly at the back will be extremely pretty on a white straw tennis hat. The wider part of the brim may be faced with the same ribbon, and the color is sure to prove becoming against the face.

For a white hat which has become discolored or a light straw which is faded and yet still retains its good shape, an application of straw paint should be applied. This fluid is made solely for coloring straw and will not run when rained upon, as shoe blacking has been found to do by any one who ever tried to freshen up an old hat by applying to the head adornment that which was intended only for footgear. With this coloring fluid an old black hat can be painted to look like new, and any hat can be restored to its pristine brilliancy of coloring or changed to any other color desired.

AN old sailor hat that, while still of fashionable size as regards crown and brim, is brown from dust and age and also sadly bent out of shape, can be made as good as new by first dampening the brim and placing the hat on some perfectly flat, even surface and putting on top of the brim several heavy books. It should be left in this rack for perhaps a day or two, and then when absolutely stiff and dry should be given a new coat of this black paint, which can be bought at most large department stores.

Lace hats elaborately bedecked with flowers and ribbon are fashionable for afternoon wear, but for the morning the long popular lingerie hat has been superseded by a simple wide brimmed straw shape trimmed only with a wide, rather flat bowknot of plain or fancy colored ribbon. For this style of hat a yellow, tuscan or burnt straw is best as both white and all the light shades change color so in the sun. When a pretty and becoming shape has been found it is an excellent plan to buy for it several different ribbon bowknots, to be changed according to the color of the gown to be worn. Large bows well wired, with an end of the ribbon to go about the crown can be bought, or the ribbon can first be bought and wired in the shop according to directions. Unless a girl has a special knack at matching pretty, effective bows and rosettes it will be worth the slight extra expense to have the ribbon made up and wired at the store where it is bought.

The large flat bows may really be placed anywhere at all upon the hat. In some models the trimming is all directly in front, in others just at the back, again a bowknot is seen a little at one side of the crown, sometimes to the right and again to the left, while oftentimes the bow is composed of many long loops which fall over and completely cover the crown. There are infinite possibilities of designs that can be carried out with different arrangement and color of ribbons all upon the same hat. A box of milliner's pins will make possible the adjustment of any ribbon trimming, for when the adornment of a hat is to be changed, perhaps every day in the week, even basting is a waste of time. The end of ribbon that is left to go about the crown must be long enough to tie in through the centre of the bow knot, thus making it more secure.

Summer time gives splendid opportunity for those classes which are more fun than work, and a course in simple millinery is an excellent one for any girl who would like to lengthen out the possibilities of her allowance.

The Girl Who Can Organize.

THAT many young girls have a decided talent for organization is without question. It is as distinctly a characteristic with them as their fathers' ability to run railroads or other business enterprises. As a rule girls find an abundant use for this talent. It makes them, besides, leaders among other girls instead of merely individuals that pass with the crowd. It is to such girls that an appeal is made when there is an occasion to get up something, either for pleasure or for service to others.

A young miss with a talent for organization must have energy and a clever brain, besides a knowledge of many resources that can be turned quickly to her account. She must have the knack of firing her friends with enthusiasm and of placing their activities in paths leading to the accomplishment of her own desires.

One young girl with this talent has of late been busy organizing a fin de la saison matinee club. Earlier in the season she arranged the details for a party of twelve which went up to the "Promenade" at New Haven.

To organize and put through successfully a matinee club is not, she relates, an easy matter. Although the members of it, fourteen in number, are all friends and about the same age, they have not the same taste—a fact which must be borne in mind when the plays are chosen for the club to see. Some girls care only for plays that make them laugh, others prefer those that make them weep, while there are still others so complex that they profess to laugh through sad scenes and to weep at those that are funny.

The girl who organizes a matinee club must inform herself long in advance on the plays that are to be presented and must make early arrangements for the comfortable seating of the club. She has also to assign the seats to the members. In doing this her tact is usually stretched painfully near its limit. Girls have many whims about the especial friends they wish to sit beside, although in the interest of the sociability of the club it is well to change the seating order with every meeting.

Occasionally the organizer complains that she shoulders all the responsibility in the beginning and bears all the fault finding in the end. Nevertheless she knows that she has been of benefit to her friends and has had meantime her own satisfaction, for to organize is not only her talent but one of the joys of her life.

The miss who has the matinee club under way has also arranged a morning club to visit the museums of the city. All young girls desire to acquaint themselves with the many wonderful collections on exhibition, but often, unless there be some added incentive, the fulfilment of the wish is relegated to a day in the unnamed future. Through the energy of the miss with the talent for organization the dates to go to various museums have become fixed engagements. The pleasure, moreover, that the girls gain by going together makes these dates of the club more desirable to keep than any others.

For the oncoming summer, and even the next winter, this talented miss has many plans that she declares will amuse and benefit her friends, and incidentally herself. It is needless to add that she is very popular.

COMFORT IN MOTORING.

THE girl who does a great deal of motoring will often find it pretty cold if she is not thoroughly wrapped up, even though the spring is here and the weather may be growing warmer.

The strong wind that is caused by swift motion calls for thorough protection if one wants to be really comfortable. Two new inventions have lately come out in England which are great aids to this much desired end, and any girl can make them both for herself if she cannot buy them, which she probably can do if she prefers to. They are a vest protector and a long motor veil edged with fur.

The vest protector, besides helping to keep one warm, has a [illegible]ness in protecting from dust the front of a white or light colored waist. So many cloaks and coats are a little open at the neck in front that the top of the waist is exposed and is very quickly soiled.

The protector is made like the top of a tight fitted waist, buttoned straight down the front. It is cut off a little below the bust line in front and straight up the sides a little way in from the shoulders. From there the line goes around the back about three inches below the neck, and at the top is a high standing collar. The vest protector may be made of almost any material, but, of course, something that will wash is most serviceable.

The veil is made of one of the soft silk materials, not chiffon, something thicker and stronger, and must be three or four yards long. It is edged all around with a band of fur and some have a second and narrower band inside. This fur protects the back of the neck especially and the long ends of the veil can be used as a substitute for a muff. By turning them up under one can keep her hands just as warm as with a real muff, and many are the days when one starts out on a motor ride with no idea of needing a muff and before long finds one's fingers tingling with cold.

A veil without the fur can, of course, be used in the same way, but the difference in warmth is enormous. Even narrow bands of fur bunched together give great warmth.

PRACTICAL TALKS BY THE GRANDMOTHER

"A WOMAN'S feet grow indefinitely," announced the April Grandmother. And while her astounded young friends were still uttering gasps of dismay at this unwelcome piece of news she continued:—"That is why so many girls walk clumsily. They keep on buying what they call their 'regular sizes' in shoes when in reality their feet are constantly widening and lengthening.

"Ease and grace of carriage belong naturally to few girls, yet many of them might acquire it—first by admitting to themselves that their feet are not of fairylike proportions and then by learning to walk correctly. As awkward walking detracts so greatly from the appearance, it is remarkable that parents do not impose a penance upon daughters who persist in walking on their heels, turning up, turning in or spreading out their toes or—most slovenly of all—walking on the sides of the feet.

"The girl who realizes that her walk is awkward is apt to make the mistake of imitating some one else and to adopt a lope or wiggle utterly unsuited to the proportions of her figure, for the length of each individual's step should be exactly adjusted to the length of the leg, the toes ever so slightly turned outward, the weight balanced on the balls of the feet and the body allowed to sway [illegible] from the ankles.

"Girls of a nervous temperament rarely acquire a gliding, graceful walk, because their steps are likely to be uneven and jerky instead of smooth and regular. In order to walk evenly the foot must be set upon the ground in an almost straight position, raised a trifle upon the toes and let down lightly in a way which shall not show the sole of the shoe. And if, in addition to this method of locomotion, the knees move flexibly, as in the skating motion, the shoulders are thrown back and the head is held up, a swaying, easy step will soon be acquired. But even then a girl will not look graceful when walking if her elbows are allowed to stick out or her arms to swing from the body like those of a windmill.

"Under the impression that a languid manner is attractive, some girls form the habit of putting one foot forward and dragging the other. This affectation more nearly resembles the slow, heavy gait of the elephant than the airy, floating movement of the swan.

"The girl who is afflicted with large pedal extremities should not go stumping through the world, but make ceaseless efforts to step lightly, and in order to accomplish this her feet must have absolute muscular freedom, which can only be furnished by a shoe that is sufficiently wide at the top and ball and not too large at the heel. The same shoe rule applies to those who have small feet, for only through foot comfort can a girl maintain serenity of disposition and, by her ability to walk several miles each day, retain indefinitely a reedlike, willowy figure."

TO KEEP CLIPPINGS.

IF one has the "clipping habit" and does not have some regular place to keep them the little pieces of paper generally become a nuisance and are constantly in the way. And yet any girl who takes much interest in reading is sure to find something every now and then that she would like to keep.

The best way to manage the question is to have a classified clipping case and so keep them all ready for immediate reference [illegible] a saving of time and energy [illegible] not having to hunt for what one wants on the instant. An easy way to make a clipping case is to buy some of the long legal envelopes and mark each one with a word, or several words, indicating some subject one is interested in, and then fasten them all together.

The words should be painted or done in fancy lettering with a pen. Such subjects as "Travel," "Art," "Drama," "Music," "Useful Suggestions" are used, but the maker can choose her own subjects, and new envelopes can be added at any time.

After the envelopes are marked two covers must be made just the same size as the envelopes. They are made of cardboard, painted or covered with brocade or embroidered linen. They are placed outside of the envelopes, and the whole thing is fastened together by cutting holes through them all near each side of the lower edge of the envelopes, the side away from the flaps, putting a ribbon through the holes and tying a bow at the back. These ribbons can at any time be pulled out and new envelopes put in, either to renew torn ones or to add a new subject.

The covers of these cases are sometimes very beautiful. Some are made of handsome brocade and others of leather, with cut designs lined with satin. Any kind of elaborate embroidery may also be used.

EVENING SCARFS.

PERSIAN silks, chiffons and ribbons are unquestionably the craze of the moment for trimmings, for linings, for whole waists, for belts and ties and even for art embroideries. These Oriental textures in their soft fascinating colorings are now to be seen everywhere.

The Persian scarfs are most effective bordered with marabout or ostrich feathers or with bands of plain colored silk. For all sorts of work bags and for [illegible] wear, ties and jabots, &c., the lighter toned Persian silks are charming.

From a two yard length of Persian chiffon a fascinating evening wrap for midsummer can be fashioned by a girl herself, with little skill required. If double width the chiffon should be cut down the centre and pointed at each end, gathered in slightly at the seam which forms the centre of the wrap. This Persian chiffon is then lined on both sides with white or some pale colored chiffon or chiffon cloth through which the Persian coloring will still be distinct. Where the cape falls over the shoulders the three thicknesses of chiffon should be gathered in loosely over from one to three rows of thick cording. The ends of the scarf or wrap are then finished with a deep sewing silk fringe, white or a color to tone in with the chiffon. A border of satin or taffeta will be effective, but if there is an old marabout boa that can be utilized, a far handsomer wrap will be the result.

This wrap calls for no fitting, cutting or draping—simply a straight length of chiffon about two yards in length by a yard in width. A straight strip of soft satin of the same dimensions can be utilized in the same way if a somewhat warmer wrap is desired. For midsummer, however, three thicknesses of chiffon will be sufficient, and carried out in pale, cool colorings this Persian cape is sure to evoke constant admiration.

The Apple Blossom Party.

ANY girl who goes early to a country home adjacent to a city should give an apple blossom party to her friends still in town. Our lovely apple blossoms are the nearest approach we have to the Japanese cherry blossoms, so prized in the flowery kingdom that every one, high and low, during the blooming time makes a fête in honor of them. Many think our apple blossoms are beautiful enough to deserve similar honors, and besides it is an ideal time to ask people to the country, for everything is then its loveliest in its fresh garb of green.

If your home is not large enough for a house party and you wish to invite young men as well as girls have them out for a Sunday luncheon or a high tea. If you are having a house party all of your guests will assist you in gathering blossoms for the fête, but if they come for a short time you will have everything prepared. In the latter instance part of the programme will be an afternoon walk or drive to see the splendors of surrounding pink orchards, and this must be arranged for and mentioned in the invitation, planning it to take place either after luncheon or before a high tea.

In inviting your guests designate the train on which they are to arrive and have it understood that they will be met at the station on their arrival and conveyed to your house. You, of course, do not meet them yourself, but your brother does, if you have one, and if not your coachman or your chauffeur looks out for them. If your guests outnumber your private conveyances you order what is required from the local livery or your neighbors may be obliging in offering their motor cars to help you. [illegible] they get to the station for their return train in the same manner.

When you send out your invitations write them on large corresponding cards at the top of which is painted a delicate spray of apple blossoms. Similar blossoms should adorn the place cards on your table. Boughs and sprays of the natural flowers should ornament the rooms and the color scheme of the luncheon or supper table be pink. In decorating the rooms do not overdo it. Too many flowers are inartistic. Copy the Japanese and have just a few branches, some large and some small, here and there. If you wish Japanese ideas in floral arrangement study the manner in which artificial flowers are placed in vases in their shop windows in any of our big cities and then go home and do likewise. Whatever they do with cherry blossoms you can do as beautifully with apple blossoms, and you will astonish yourself and your friends with your artistic effects.

Make a lovely centrepiece of the blossoms for your table, putting them in a glass bowl so that the stems show through and keeping your design low, for a high arrangement of flowers, while stunning in certain places, is undesirable on a dining table, where it cuts people off from seeing one another. Use a white lace cloth over a pink lining and pink ribbons in bands and bows for further embellishment. If you wish to serve a tea punch or lemonade you can ornament the bowl most charmingly by twining small twigs of blossoms around the top, wreath fashion. This is done by wiring the edge of the bowl first, in order to have something to fasten the flowers to.

Wear a pink gown and put a spray of apple blossoms in your hair, providing similar ones for the other girls, if it is a supper, but not, of course, if a luncheon, for then they would not remove their hats. The young men guests should be presented with boutonnières of the blossoms. On a table in your hall have a big jar full of the flowers in whose honor you are giving the fête and distribute them to your parting guests to take back to town with them.

You can give a delightfully poetic touch to the whole thing by hunting up what the poets have said about apple blossoms and either reciting a poem yourself or asking one of your guests to do so. You can also make your place cards and your invitations more attractive by quoting on them a verse anent apple blossoms, such verse being written at the top of the corresponding cards used and at the bottom of the place cards, where the name of the guest should take precedence.

THIS IS MRS. GRUNDY.

ALL girls know "Mme. Grundy," the social oracle, whose word is law, but how many ever thought whence came this authoratitive, awe-inspiring lady?

She is purely mythical, and, amusingly enough, has been ever since she was created as a character in a play in which she never appeared!

In an old English comedy called "Speed the Plough," written in the eighteenth century by Thomas Morton, the author had two rival farmers' wives, one of whom—Mrs. Grundy—remained invisible throughout though constantly kept before the minds of the audience by the other farmers' wife in the question, "What will Mrs. Grundy say?"—perpetually asked about everything that was transpiring in the play.

Imaginary Mrs. Grundy caught the public fancy, and through the centuries has so grown in importance that she is now the embodiment and the dictator of the proprieties.

LITTLE MISS DANDELION.

NOW that the spring is coming on, if you want a trusty barometer watch the dandelion. It is marvellously sensitive to weather conditions when it has seeded and is at the fluffy stage.

Then when the weather is fine the ball will be full, but if you see it closing or find it closed you may know that rain is approaching.

If after a shower the ball does not begin to expand you can rely on the fact that the storm is by no means over.

Just as long as there are showers in the air little Miss Dandelion keeps her fluffy self tightly curled, for the wet would quite spoil her featheriness.

WEST ENDS AND T.A.S. BOTH TOOK LEAD AND WON OUT

P.A.C. Were Smothered With a 15-8, Score—Oldhamites Annexed Safely for Fifteen Hits—Straths Performed Poorly in First Innings Per Usual—Quinlan Allowed Only Three Hits.

The Review joins with the many friends of Jack Pilling, the popular manager and first baseman of the P.A.C. ball team in wishing for him a speedy recovery from the injuries received in Saturday's game.

It was in the eighth innings that a runner to first base collided with him. He remained in the game, but in the ninth complained of a pain, and Thompson ran for him. At the conclusion of the contest he was taken away to receive medical attention, and on arriving at the Nicholls Hospital, Drs. Frederick, McClelland and Morgan performed a delicate operation. A bloodvessel back of the stomach had been ruptured. The operation was successful and Mr. Pilling is recovering.

Talk about misplays and swatting, talk about excited fans; breathe it gently, dearest Mamie, when you speak of also rans. Talk about ninth innings rallies, talk about the games they've won, but forget about it, Mamie, when you're asked how THIS was done. Mention marbles, even checkers, talk about the frays to come; throw some light on Jeff and

In the Ninth With Two on Shaw Came to Bat

Johnson; put them wise to "Going, Some." Don't squeal on that freak at shortstop if they ask you who he is; don't tell them that he was bent on handing out the smiles to Liz.

AND

If you ever feel like balking, a la Prunes is what you need, don't go searching through the dope book—least don't go by what you read. If you think you'd like to feature as the villain on the stage, turn your peepers, watch dear Willie, when he strikes out, watch him rage. Perhaps you'd like to be a spieler, lessons you can get dirt cheap, watch the motions of that tall guy, who paroles the sawdust heap. Perhaps you'd like to learn the drop act; you don't have to climb a tree, cast your glimmers out to centre, get an exhibition free.

For once in many summers the games were called on time; the fans were there, some male, some fair, old Sol shone down down sublime. The umps had his instructions to ginger up the play. There had been kicks because 'twas late—the crowd refused to stay. But things were changed, the fielders all forgot the art of creeping, the flingers and the men behind did not do so much sleeping.

The first affair got off at two, the second one at four. The last Strath man went out at first in eighty minutes more.

Some thought the P.A.C. would bat and place the game on ice, while others thought that Duke's West Ends would take the larger slice. The kids won out with fifteen runs, the south end bunch got eight. Both nines had slipups—twenty-one were chalked up on the slate. The flower kid and Sunny Jim were handing out the flinging, the former sent three down to first, while but one Grey went singing. Eight would-be wafters of each gang stood up and then sat down. Some threw the bat, some chewed the fat, and at the Chief did frown.

THE SCORING.

First Innings.

The West Ends went first to the bat, but failed to start the race; the P.A.C. then took their turn, and gathered in a brace. Their heaver led off with a hit and Gordon walked down free. Jack Pilling leaned against the pill, and filled the bags for three. The chumps were forced on Benton's crack; Ned Simmons hit the air. Then Bobbie skied and some one cried, "Here's where [illegible] Dickie missed the falling ball, two runners crossed the pan; but Gus right here put on the brakes, and Thompson took a fan. Two runs.

Second innings.

Crane smashed to right and "Con" took fright, the runner made it two; Mac doubled and the throw came wild to get Crane as he flew. He scored, and Guerin followed, when Curly placed one right. Geale bunted and Minorgan scored, the play worked out of sight. "Heas" got a life and Rose was out, but Gibson's waft was fumbled. The Gale went home and Heaslip's roam came next when Dickie rumbled. The happy bride was safe at first, but Dickie died through napping. Crane's hit and Gibson's tally next set grand-stand maidens clapping. Six runs.

No runs came in for Park Street, the ball was fielded clean.

Third Innings.

To even up, the Greys were stopped, no tallies did they gather. The Duke yelled out "We've got enough," and Benton cried, "Well, rather."

For Park Street Captain Jack led off, he singled and then counted when Benton sent a double out, and on the second mounted. The nimble Ned had three strikes called; Bob Pilling then inspected a choice one, and he used the gad—the plate and Ben connected. A hit by Thompson followed, Bob thought that he would go, but this run did not tally, "Min" sent a perfect throw. Two runs.

Sixth Innings.

The fourth and fifth had both been blanks, the sixth brought West Ends one, for after Heaslip died by, three, Rose started with the run. A slip by Benton gave him first, he stole the middle bag. Bill Gibson fanned, but Dickie's hit sent Gussie passed the flag.

The south end team was goose-egged no runs were garnered here.

Seventh Innings.

West Ends walked in and took their turn, and then walked out to see the other fellows gallop round and make the count read three. Jim Pilling flew and went out too, then Gordon took a ticket, Jack Pilling went the route at first, but Benton sent one wicked. This sent young Gordon across the plate, and Simmons, life was granted, when Gus tried stopping with his boots. Gee! how the runner panted. Bob Pilling came along again and planted out a double, and sent two runners home to roost, without the least of trouble. Three runs.

Eighth Innings.

Geale grounded out, Pinch-hitter Laing was safe on Pilling's error. Rose singled, Gibson's slats were bent—he looked a holy terror. Then Dickie had his little say, he pulled the play to Pilling, Laing jerked the string and it appeared as though the bag was filling. One run.

R. Laing for P.A.C. flew out, but Johnson slammed a single, he went to second and to third and home on Jimmie's bingle. One run.

Ninth Innings.

This spasm has a tale to tell, the job was sure well done; the West Ends finished up with seven, the P.A.C. got one.

The West Ends in Their Ninth

SECOND GAME.

Do you think the Straths could win out if they got a lead, say ten? Do you think with a brand new infield, occupied by big league men? Do you think with a brand new outfield, [illegible] with Donlin and like mates? That the team in the cellar hangout would forget about the gates? Do you think with a plank for a weapon, they could waft the little pill? Don't you think it a house they need? Perhaps they'd hit it then at will. Don't you think that they've lead on their paddles? Don't you think that they've bees on their bell? Don't you think that a lot you could tell. That you think the whole bunch had forgotten about playing the game as they should? Can you really imagine them winning? No, I don't think that anyone could.

By the rest you can see whose the blame was, you can see how the T.A.S. nine, galloped away with the game at the start off, how the Straths took a fall down a nine; you can see that the T.A.S. twirler was shooting them over in form; you can see that his fielders behind him were, always immense in a storm. For it wasn't a cinch for the infield, the wind wasn't always their way; but they stabbed and the pickups were smooth ones, they deserved to get off with the fray.

THE SCORING.

First Innings.

The Straths went out in order, but the T.A.S. sent four men across in their half.

V. Corkery was safe when F. Craig dropped Dusty's. He stole second and went to third and home when Dusty threw wide to Weatherston. Flaherty walked; Calaghan was passed. Quinlan singled and McFadden hit safely to right, scoring Callaghan and Flaherty. O'Brien was safe when Curtis dropped his easy fly and Quinlan scored. Corkery and Giroux fanned. Kenealley walked, but when V. Corkery hit to Weatherston the runner was forced. 4 runs.

Second Innings.

Fast fielding stopped the Straths in their half. Flaherty was out, Kendrey to F. Craig. Callaghan hit over third and stole second, and scored when Quinlan sent a screamer through Kendrey, Quinlan to second. McFadden flew out to Ray and O'Brien

O'Brien Struck Out

grounded out, Weatherston to F. Craig. 1 run

Third Innings.

For the Straths, Dusty was safe when Giroux fumbled his grounder, stole second and third when J. Corkery allowed Quinlan's throw to get away. Curtis flew out to Callaghan, but F. Craig sacrificed, scoring Dusty home. Shaw was out at first. 1 run.

There was nothing doing in the fourth and fifth.

Sixth Inning.

In their half the T.A.S. put one man over. Cahill, batting for Kenealley, singled to left and took second, Shaw allowing the ball to troll past him. Patterson missed V. Corkery's third strike, and on the throw to first, Cahill counted. 1 run.

Both were retired runless in the seventh.

Eighth Inning.

Ray flew out to Flaherty, Patterson fanned, Dusty Walked. Macfee batting for Curtis hit to Flaherty, who fumbled, the runner being safe and Dusty scoring. F. Craig singled to right sending Macfee to third, but Shaw ended by grounding out Giroux to Flaherty. 1 run.

T.A.S. were retired in order as were the Straths in their ninth, and the game was over.

ASSISTANT TO THE RECTOR

Rev. Charles Carpenter Will be Curate at St. John's Church

His Lordship Bishop Sweeney announced yesterday morning at St. John's that Rev. Charles Carpenter, of Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, had had been chosen by him as assistant parish priest of the parish of Peterborough, to assist Rev. Canon Davidson, the duties incumbent upon the rector being too heavy for him to attend to without clerical aid.

Rev. Mr. Carpenter is very highly recommended from Newfoundland as a zealous and able clergyman.

NON-JURY SITTINGS

Of High Court Opened To-day—Chief Justice Falconbridge is Presiding

Chief Justice Falconbridge, of Toronto, is presiding at the non-jury sittings of the High court, which opened to-day at one o'clock.

Only one case is being proceeded with, that of Johnston vs. McGibbon. Mr. G. W. Hatton for the plaintiff, and O'Connell & Gordon for the defendant.

The Dobbin vs. Dobbbin action for alimony was settled with judgment by consent for alimony, the amount and costs being fixed. R. Ruddy for plaintiff; D. O'Connell for defendant.

In the Bullock vs. Campbell action the plaintiffs concluded not to press the claim, and accordingly a judgment was entered by consent dismissing the action, and provided that the costs mentioned should be paid out of the estate of the deceased.

The action was brought by the administrators of the late J. H. Campbell seeking to make the two sons of the deceased account for certain implements and monies received by them from the deceased before his death, the plaintiff claiming that owing to his advanced years the deceased did not understand the effect of his action in the matter.

Dumble & Johnston for plaintiffs; Dennistoun, Peck & Kerr for defendants.

The Holdcroft-Stewart action was adjourned.

It is a Real Pleasure

To us to hear the many kindly appreciative remarks which come to us daily from wearers of the modern glasses which we are now supplying. They are certainly the finest ever produced, and they recommend themselves by whomsoever used. Mr. Browett, Optical Specialist, makes a most thorough examination of the eyes, and is most careful of the adjustment, so that in every particular they are made to suit the exact needs of each eye, and the facial features of the wearer. In fact these glasses are useless unless the examiner has had sufficient experience in refracting and adapting. Accuracy, Suitability and Best Value are foundation principles upon which our Optical Business grows.

Women probably publish their "at home" days in the society's columns so the other women will know when not to call.

When he reaches the age of 21 the masculine human begins to talk about "when I was a boy," but did you ever hear a woman of twice that age ever refer to the time "when she was a girl?"

"I COULDN'T HAVE DONE MORE IF SHE HAD BEEN MY OWN CHILD"

Said Engineer Mimms in Explaining Accident Which Resulted in Death of Mamie Feeley to the Little Girl's Father—No Other Accident in Railway Career Pained Him as Much.

"I did everything I could to save your little girl. I couldn't have done more if she had been my own child."

That's the way Engineer Mimms, of the G.T.R. Port Hope train, expressed himself to Mr. Frederick Feeley, father of the seven-year-old girl who was killed on Saturday, May 28th, at the corner of Park and Westcott streets, by the engine of which Mr. Mimms has charge.

While the coroner's jury was deliberating on its verdict the inquest at the city council chamber Friday the engineer took the opportunity of conversing with the child's father, who was present at the hearing.

He explained the circumstances of the accident to him and expressed his deep regret that it should have occurred. It was beyond human power, he stated, to bring the engine to a standstill any sooner than he did.

"There is no occurrence in my railgave in my evidence that I can say," said Mr. Mimms to the Review. "I couldn't have done more to save a child of my own—and I have children. There is no occurrence in my railway career that has pained me as much as this accident."

It seems peculiar and is very unfortunate that Mr. Mimms should have had the charge of the engine by which two children met their death at Peterborough in such a short time.

The same engine hurled the O'Brien baby to its death a few weeks ago just outside the city limits.

The engineer has the reputation of being as careful and vigilant a driver as there is in the employment of the whole G.T.R. system.

"THE GIRL I LEFT BEHIND ME."

She Pleased the Boy the Way She Always Wanted to Do.

By JOHN BRIDGES.

The two families had been close friends for many years. As schoolgirls the mothers had been at Mount Holyoke together, and the boys had been at Amherst and had graduated in the same class. Holyoke and Amherst are not far apart geographically, and on walks about the Connecticut valley the four had fallen into company. Afterward there had been two weddings, and the two new homes were established in the same western city. The heads of the families went into law practice together, and the firm has lasted until this day, more than twenty-five years.

When the children were born it was quite natural that the boy should have been named Arthur Selden Hamilton, after his father's partner, and the girl Angela Hamilton Selden, after her mother's schoolgirl friend and companion. Arthur was almost a year older than Angela, and a year is a long time in the ages of youngsters.

When, after their high school days, it was decided that both should go to college they left home on the same day in charge of Angela's mother and Arthur's father and journeyed eastward to the Connecticut valley.

Angela took her mother's old room at Mount Holyoke, and Arthur became established in his father's old quarters at Amherst. Somehow, though, after a few friendly and rather homesick calls, Arthur fell into the athletic spirit. For the four years that he was in Amherst and Angela was at Mount Holyoke he saw her but little. She seemed to him to be the same little girl he had known when they played together on rainy days in the attic. To Arthur, Angela had never grown up.

Afterward Arthur went abroad for a year's study, and Angela went to visit some friends at an army post farther west. When Arthur came home and found instead of the schoolgirl he had known a beautiful young woman he was scarcely prepared for the change. It was all foreordained. While he had seen pretty women abroad and at Amherst had almost proposed to a girl at commencement time, he had been practically heart free. This vision of loveliness who kissed him frankly as a sister might took his breath away. When he left the Selden home that night it was with the intention of winning Angela Selden.

All that winter he saw much of her. At the parties they attended, at the theater or wherever he could make an excuse to meet her he was her devoted cavalier. In both the families it was regarded as a foregone conclusion that there would be another marriage to link the two families yet closer together.

One evening Arthur called at the Seldens' determined to ask Angela to be his wife.

"She must know," he thought, "how much I love her. If she will have me I'll take the governor's offer and go into the business with him right away. Then we can be married in the spring and spend June in the Connecticut valley."

Arthur climbed the steps which led up to the Seldens' veranda. On the veranda sat Angela and a man in uniform.

"Mr. Hamilton," said Angela, "let me present my friend Lieutenant Allerton."

They shook hands. Arthur said something about being glad to see Lieutenant Allerton. Lieutenant Allerton said something about being charmed to meet Mr. Hamilton.

There was some music, and Allerton sang. He sang well, and Angela accompanied him as only a sympathetic musician can. Arthur felt a lover's jealousy. "Why couldn't he have stayed away till tomorrow?" he thought.

When Allerton rose to go he said, "Then mother and I may expect to meet you on Tuesday in Chicago?"

"Yes," replied Angela, "and tell your mother that I shall give her a great deal of trouble before we reach Leavenworth, for I am going to make her tell me everything about her boys at the fort. You know I fell desperately in love with every soldier there last summer."

Arthur stayed for a few minutes after Allerton had gone.

"Are you going away?" he asked in dismay.

"Yes," she replied. "Mrs. Allerton has asked me to visit her for a month at Leavenworth. The colonel is the dearest old man that ever lived, and—isn't Lieutenant Charlie just the handsomest boy you ever saw?"

Arthur said goodby hurriedly and walked miles into the country, smoking strong cigars.

"What I fool I am!" he cried. "Why didn't I know about these handsome soldier boys that she says she fell so desperately in love with? But what a fool I was not to tell her after Allerton went away! I'll go out again tomorrow and tell her all about it and make her choose between us. She must tell me which she cares the more for."

The next day he received a little goodby note from Angela, saying that her father wanted her to go on to Chicago for a day or two with him, and as he had been called away suddenly she had gone. The note continued:

"Write to me and tell me all the news, and when I get home in October we will finish that last round of golf. Remember, you are ahead of me now, but I promise to practice a lot at the fort, and I intend to beat you after all."

But before October came Arthur's father told him that he had good reason for thinking from something Mr. Selden had said at the office that Angela was engaged to Lieutenant Allerton.

Then Arthur had to go to New York on business for his father for several months. He heard from Angela once or twice, but she said nothing about her engagement. He had fought hard to quench his love for her, but the more he fought against it the harder the task seemed until finally he worried himself almost into nervous prostration. When he got home his mother was greatly alarmed at his appearance, but he told her he was quite well and that he proposed to go more into society than he had ever done.

"What's going on tonight?" he asked.

"There isn't anything," said Mrs. Hamilton. "There's nothing going on this week, and at the theater there's nothing worth seeing except 'The Girl I Left Behind Me.'"

"Well, let's go to that," said Arthur.

When they took their seats in the theater the orchestra began playing the stirring old tune from which the play was named. Arthur turned in his seat and looked about the auditorium. Two rows behind him sat Angela and her father. Their eyes met. Angela smiled and almost beckoned him to come back and speak to her. Arthur bowed stiffly and turned to speak to his mother.

The next morning came a note from Angela.

"If you can possibly arrange it," ran the note, "I wish you'd come up and have tea with me at 5 o'clock today."

It was almost a command. Arthur went.

She came into the room with both hands outstretched.

"I am so glad to see you," she said. "What a bad boy you've been not to write to me!"

Then she looked at his face squarely in the light.

"Why, Arthur Hamilton," she cried, "what's the matter? You look as though you'd seen a ghost."

"No," he said. "I've only seen 'The Girl I Left Behind Me.'"

"What do you mean?"

"Nothing, only it seems that that is just what I am seeing now." And Arthur gazed into her eyes.

"Do you mean that you heard of my engagement and that"—

Angela stopped and blushed.

"Yes, I mean exactly that, and I hope you will be very happy and that Mrs. Allerton is pleased."

"Look here, boy," said Angela, unconsciously using the old childish name she used to call him, "do you think I got engaged to please Mrs. Allerton?"

"Well, I thought you were going to please the family that way, at least not"—

He was getting into deep water. He turned and stared into the street. Then he looked back at Angela. There were tears in her eyes. He caught her in his arms.

"Will you please me this way?" he asked.

"I have always wanted to, boy, always and always," she said.

AIRSHIP PROPELLERS.

They Are Built Up of Layers of Selected Wood.

Propellers for airships are built of laminated wood—that is to say, of wood built up in layers.

For the making of a propeller six or eight feet in length there would be required to begin with a stick of timber six inches or thereabout square, and such a stick of solid wood, however perfectly seasoned, might check or crack. For this reason the propeller is built of laminated wood, of strips of selected and perfectly seasoned wood of the required width, which are planed down to the requisite thickness and then glued together under pressure, making a practically solid stick.

Some airship propellers of laminated wood have been made with the laminations all of spruce. One New York concern making propellers produces them also of a combination of ash and mahogany.

The shaving out of the blades from this stick, each of precisely the required taper, pitch and thinness and the two exactly alike, is work that calls for the greatest patience, care and skill. The perfect propeller in its finished state is a beautiful example of good workmanship.

A six foot propeller of laminated wood, its weight six and a half pounds, costs $50; a seven foot propeller, weight nine pounds, $60, and an eight foot propeller, twelve pounds, $70.

For model airships there are made, also of laminated wood, but these commonly all of mahogany, little propellers from ten to twelve inches in length and accurate in pitch and finish. They sell at from $1 to $7.

Among the full sized propellers the greatest demand is for those measuring seven feet. From the orders thus far filled and now in hand the propeller makers are looking for a greater activity than ever in flying machines in the coming season.—New York Sun.

Sham Jewelry.

"This is the age of sham and make believe in the jewelry world," says a woman writing in the Fremdenblatt, "and the people who have any doubt on that score should go to Paris and be convinced. The makers of imitations are turning out better work than ever before, and the easily detected sham has faded away before articles which baffle many people. The 'superior quality' of these alleged jewels has made women courageous. They go in ankle deep with a small pin, and when they feel sure that the deception is undiscovered they wade with a brooch and, rejoicing in the sensation, are soon in deep water with a diadem. They are not cheap, these latter day gems, but they are within the reach of the people who wish to shine by their luster. The housemaid may wear them by sacrificing her savings, but on her person they would quickly be recognized. In that respect the mistress has the advantage over the maid."

Great Guns.

Sir A. Trevor Dawson makes this comparison to show the great strides made in modern ordnance in forty-five years: In 1864 the most powerful twelve inch gun was a muzzle loader, 12 calibers long, weighing 23.5 tons, using a charge of 85 pounds of powder and discharging a projectile of 614 pounds with a muzzle velocity of 3,000 feet per second. It could perforate 16 inches of wrought iron at the muzzle and 8 inches at a range of 6,000 yards. In 1909 the twelve inch gun had become a breechloader, 50 calibers long, weighing 70 tons, using a projectile of 850 pounds discharged with a muzzle velocity of 3,000 feet per second and capable of penetrating 52 inches of wrought iron at the muzzle, 37 inches at a distance of 6,000 yards and 17.5 inches at 24,000 yards.

Misfit Names.

Talking of family names, the new issue of the London directory provides some curiosities. Sebastian Bach is a horse dealer, Robert Bruce and John Bunyan are greengrocers, John Milton is a chandler and James Boswell a mason. William Shakespeare is the name of a barrister, a tailor and a van builder. There is a Crusoe and also a Gulliver. Julius Caesar is a chemist, Livy keeps apartments, Homer is a lighterman, Pinder an electrical engineer. Mars retails beer, and Venus, not inappropriately, sugar candies. Francis Bacon is an architect and Bayard a dairyman. And what could be better for the name of a saddler than Whippy?—Square Deal.

The Banana In Paris.

The banana has become popular in Paris and is sold freely in the streets. The increasing popularity of the fruit is amply justified, says a Paris paper, for Dr. Max Makowsky in Naturopath gives the following analysis of the fruit: 4.75 per cent of carbureted hydrogen, 19.50 per cent of alimentary salts, 1.75 per cent of cellulose and 74 per cent of water. The doctor adds that all that is necessary for sustenance can be obtained from the banana and bread and butter. The Parisian journal suggests that it would be interesting to know upon what the doctor himself subsists.

The New Compass.

For the purpose of securing clearness, simplicity and precision in the application of compass errors the hydrographic office of the United States navy has adopted a new form of compass on which there is no north, south, east or west, but which consists of a circle divided into 360 degrees, beginning with 0 at the true north point and reading to the right.—Popular Mechanics.

Congress asked the Inter-State Commerce Commission for statistics on which to base new R. R. legislation.

THE SAFETY OF "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

May Be Taken For Years

The Ideal Remedy For Young and Old

Nature's gifts do us good, if used judiciously. We eat bread from babyhood to old age without ever tiring of it. We drink water, year in and year out, with the greatest benefit to our health. So too, we eat fruit in season and are better for the change of diet. This is true, because such things are the natural foods and drink of mankind. It is for this reason that "Fruit-a-tives" may be used for years in correcting some ill of the body. As is well known, "Fruit-a-tives" is made of the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes.

Just as fresh fruit may be eaten at every meal, so "Fruit-a-tives" may be taken every night for 20 years or more with the greatest benefit.

The absolute safety of "Fruit-a-tives" has been a great factor in its success. Those who suffered with chronic troubles such as Constipation, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, etc., naturally took a number of boxes of "Fruit-a-tives".

As they became better, they found that instead of being compelled to increase the dose as in most medicines, they were decreasing it, and gradually taking fewer doses.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. At dealers, or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

SUMMER PLANS.

Get out the time tables, Lucy; surely we're late this spring.
For it's time to plan vacation and the annual summering.
We who have planned together junkets and trips and tours—
Hearken to my plans, Lucy, and I will listen to yours.

First we must go to the mountains, up where it's clear and dry.
"But I don't like the mountains; they're likely to be too high.
Rather for us the seashore, by the Atlantic deep"—
"But I don't like the seashore; its noise never lets me sleep."

"Why not a trip to Europe, where we can have a change?"
"But I'm afraid of Europe, where everything seems so strange."
"Well, let us try the Rockies and travel the boundless west."
"But that would be work, my dearest, and the thing we both need is rest."

"Haply, then, Nova Scotia, cool as a mountain grot"—
"Cool? Don't you ever think it! Sometimes it's terribly hot."
"Well, let us seek the country, up in the woods of Maine."
"Perish the very notion—miles from a boat or train!"

I could go on forever telling each futile plan,
Reporting each conversation that ends right where it began.
But here's the motif of my ballad, this is the crux of my pome—
That Lucy and I do this year—and end by staying at home.
—Franklin P. Adams in Success Magazine.

Tough Job.

The old major had been on an extended trip "up noff." Now he was back in the general store of the village telling of his travels.

"And Niagara falls, suh!" he began vividly. "What could be a grander sight? To think of the vast, inconceivable power in those millions of tons of water that dash over the rocks, and then to think that those falls are harnessed by mere man!"

The major paused for breath, and the old colored man who had just come in with a pail of eggs looked interested.

"Majah!"

"Yes, Sam."

"Who was de gen'man det harnessed dem deh falls?"

"Why—er—Sam, I can't just remember his name. But why are you so anxious to know?"

"Ah was just thinkin', majah."

"Thinking of what, old man?"

"Thinkin' what Ah'd give to see det gen'man try en harness det ol', ol' mule Ah bought f'um de bankrupt circus last spring. Tee-hee!"—Chicago News.

An Insult.

Nell—Yes; she's broken the engagement, and I don't wonder. He told her to drop novels and read something more substantial — something that would improve her.

Tom—Well?

Nell—Well, the idea of a man intimating that his fiancee could be improved in any way!—Catholic Standard and Times.

NATURE TELLS YOU

As Many a Peterboro Reader Knows Too Well

When the kidneys are sick,
Nature tells you all about it.
The urine is nature's calendar.
Infrequent or too frequent action;
Any urinary trouble tells of kidney ills.
Booth's Kidney Pills cure all kidney ills.

Peterborough people testify to this.

Mrs. T. DeRussia, of Mary and Bethune street, Peterborough, Ont., says;—

"I believe Booth's Kidney Pills a remedy of exceptional merit in relieving backache caused from disordered kidneys. I frequently suffered with a dull, heavy pain in the small of my back. It would extend around my sides and into my shoulders. Headaches were frequent and often accompanied by spells of dizziness. Booth's Kidney Pills were recommended by a friend, and I procured a box at Wm. Madill's Pharmacy. I soon found them to relieve me. I have had no trouble since and can credit this only to Booth's Kidney Pills."

How the Cobra Gives Warning.

The most dangerous reptiles of India and Africa are the cobras. No snakes, not even rattlesnakes, are more dreaded, and with reason. As the rattlesnake warns the ear by its significant "rattle," so the cobras warn the eye by the mode in which they expand the upper part of the body when irritated. This expansion is produced by a sudden movement of the ribs of that region of the body. Usually they incline backward, but the animal when irritated makes them stand out at right angles to the body and so, of course, forces outward the skin which covers them. Thus the neck, or part just behind the head, becomes greatly expanded and flattened, as it also does, though in a less degree, in the Australian blacksnake. This expansion is called a hood, and so the animals are called hooded snakes. In some of them there is on the back of the hood a dark mark, something like a pair of spectacles, and they have therefore been called spectacle snakes.

A Trick of Thieving.

A London bank cashier continually found himself short after balancing the day's transactions. Usually the deficiency was for small sums. It puzzled him for a long time, but eventually the mystery was solved by an accident. A clerk in the office was in the habit of handing him a book to initial each day. The book was laid on the desk where usually there were a number of loose gold coins lying about, was duly marked and lifted up again. One day the clerk, in taking back the book, was not so cautious as usual, and the cashier caught the glint of a coin adhering to the back of it. Struck by this defiance of the law of gravity, he grasped the book and found on it a small piece of wax to which the coin was adhering, and now the clerk is numbered among the unemployed.

A Better Road.

"The popular taste in art," said an artist, "is apt to be peculiar. Once, in Vermont, I was at work upon a picturesque bit of woodland—a lane, a tree, a charming effect of sunlight and shadow—when a hand fell heavily on my shoulder, and the voice of a young farmer said:

"'What are ye paintin' that little bit o' road fur? Come along with me, mister, an' I'll show ye somethin' worth paintin'—three miles o' road, all just repaired.'"—Exchange.

It was decided in a New York court that the term "affinity" is a good old English word and not in itself libelous.

"BEAUTIFUL IRELAND" SUBJECT OF DELIGHTFUL LECTURE

Capt. Robert Turner of Boston, Gave a Thoroughly Interesting Illustrated Address at St. Alphonse's Lyceum —Striking Slides of Irish Scenes and Statesmen

Prof. Robert Turner, of Boston, the well known lecture traveller, experienced not the slightest difficulty in holding the attention of his audience last evening in St. Alphonse's Lyceum, when he delivered his famous lecture on "Beautiful Ireland." The lecture was illustrated with lantern slides.

Prof. Turner is an extremely witty and entertaining speaker, and kept his hearers continuously in good humor by his droll remarks.

Altogether 220 views of Ireland and noted Irish statesmen and poets were shown last evening. Dublin, the capital city of the Emerald Isle, abounds in the picturesque.

The present Bank of Ireland, one of the finest buildings in the world, and which was one time used as the Parliament Building, was copied and exhibited at the World's Fair, in St. Louis. The law building, called the Four Courts, is another magnificent edifice. On this building is a statue of Moses, costing $200,000.

The portrait of Robert Emmet, the immortal Irish patriot, who was hanged, and a part of his farewell address, recited by Mr. Turner, thrilled the audience with its impressiveness and sadness.

Many views of Belfast were shown. Belfast is a city of many architectural curiosities.

Dublin College, Nelson's monument, O'Connel street, St. Patrick's Cathedral, Customs House, Public Library, Statue of Thomas Moore, and many other views were shown during the evening, and the explanatory and descriptive remarks as made by Prof. Turner, tended to make the lecture one of the most instructive that it has ever been the privilege of a Peterborough audience to listen to.

To-night Prof. Turner will lecture on Ben Hur.

Council of City of Peterborough:

Gentlemen, — Your Manufacturers' Committee beg leave to report that they have conferred with Messrs. B. F. Ackerman, Son & Co., in regard to an enlargement of their factory.

We recommend that upon B. F. Ackerman, Son & Co., purchasing fifty feet additional land adjoining their factory on George street, and making such additions to their property, at a cost of not less than $8,000, as will enable them to employ from fifty to seventy-five additional hands, that they be given a fixed assessment of $15,000 for ten years for municipal purposes, and that the council consent to a spur being constructed from the Canadian Pacific Railway across Dalhousie street east of the creek, on the usual terms.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

G. A. GILLESPIE,
Chairman.

—Adopted.

Ald. Turner asked that the Board of Works look into the matter of pruning trees about the city. He pointed out that in some places the branches hung so low that pedestrians were put to inconvenience. Gilmour street was cited as a case.

Ald. Hicks pointed out that there had been an appropriation for the carrying on of this work, but the funds had evaporated. However, the Board of Works will take up the matter.

Before the regular session commenced in the council chamber, Relief Officer Miller asked for two months' holidays, during July and August. The request was granted.

A communication was received from ex-Mayor Best, who owns property adjoining the King Edward Park. He would like the city to give 20 feet of the Park property for a driveway, and he will give 8 feet of his property. The matter was referred to the Board of Works.

TWO FIREMEN WERE KILLED

New York, June 7.—Two firemen were killed, twenty-six others were injured, two of whom are in a critical condition, and at least forty were imperilled and had to flee for their lives at a fire early yesterday in the five-storey storage warehouse at 110 to 116 Washington street.

The dead: James Healey, fireman, 27 years, of engine pump No. 10; John Cotter, fireman, 25, engine pump No. 6; injured externally, and died from suffocation, taken from fourth floor.

The firemen, who were fighting the fire on the fourth floor, were caught in a back draught and for a time it seemed that all must perish. At least twelve were overcome by smoke at one time, and even rescuers succumbed to the fumes.

Chief Croker not only led the rescue work, but he and Captain "Big John" Sullivan took the body of one of the men from the ruins.

Just as the firemen broke in a window on the top floor, they were met by a sheet of flame and a fierce back draught which almost blew some of them from the window sills.

Croker issued a call for volunteers to go to the aid of the injured men. Nearly a hundred men lined up before the chief, and out of this number he selected a dozen. These firemen scaled the ladders to the top floor and fought their way into the furnace that blazed before them.

It was a desperate fight before they succeeded in getting to where their comrades lay senseless on the floor.

NEW FOREST RESERVE

Big Areas of Eastern Rockies Are Set Aside—Protection for Water Supply.

Ottawa, June 7.—The entire eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains from the international boundary northward to a short distance north of the 54th parallel of latitude is now reserved from settlement or occupation, and will be administered entirely with a view to the proper utilization and reproduction of the forest, the protection of the water supply of the prairie provinces, and other related objects. Such is the effect of an order in council just passed.

The total area of the district now reserved from settlement along the eastern slope of the Rockies in Canada is about 14,400 square miles. Adjoining this to the south is an area of 1,400 square miles similarly reserved by the United States Government, and known as Glacier National Park.

Of the areas reserved in Canada Rocky Mountains Park, area 4,500 square miles; Jasper Forest Park area 5,000 square miles, and Waterton Lakes Park, 54 square miles in extent, have been reserved for some time. The area now put under reserve for the first time is thus 4,850 square miles (3,100,800 acres). The entire area of 14,400 square miles comprises an area over two-thirds that of Nova Scotia, over three-fourths that of the "southwestern peninsula" of Ontario, from Toronto west, and over seven-eighths that of Vancouver Island. The most northerly boundary of the reserve is situated between forty and fifty miles north of the latitude of Edmonton, and about a hundred miles to the northwest of Yellowhead Pass. The western boundary of the reserve is the boundary between the provinces of Alberta and British Columbia, i.e., the crest of the Rockies; and the eastern boundary is an irregular line fixed by the order. The width of the strip set aside varies from ten to thirty miles from the international boundary up to the latitude of Calgary, and from there northward widens out to from thirty to fifty miles, so continuing almost to the northermost boundary.

SIR ROBERT FINLEY STARTS ON TWO WEEKS' SPEECH

Counsel for Canada in Fisheries Dispute Shows That Whole Thing Depends on Seven Questions Arising Out of the Treaty of 1818.

The Hague, June 7.—(C.A.P. Cable)—Sir Robert Finlay yesterday opened the case on behalf of the Canadian Government. His speech is expected to last a fortnight. By arrangement the speeches of Messrs. Robson and Root will not be delivered until the close of the arbitration.

Finlay yesterday showed that the matter for arbitration turned upon seven questions concerning the interpretation of the treaty of 1818. He argued that Britain could regulate these fisheries without the co-operation of the United States, forbid the employment of non-American citizens in the fisheries, collect customs and other duties on vessels and freely define what territorial waters formed a bay, forbid fishing in Newfoundland Bay, and deprive fishing vessels of commercial privileges. He gave a long historical review of the question, showing that the United States itself, contrary to its present attitude, had considered as bays territorial waters, the entrance to which was more than six nautical miles wide. He then quoted diplomatic documents refuting the assertion that prior to the conclusion of the 1818 treaty, Britain had already limited her jurisdiction to the three miles limit, including bays.

The tribunal will meet four days a week and remain in session four hours a day. At this rate the argument will not conclude before the end of August, possibly the middle of September.

The preliminary meeting was held in the court of arbitration building, but the room is insufficient for the court and the representatives of the contending parties, therefore they decided to try to get more commodious quarters. It was expected that Dutch official life would put itself out for the purpose of meeting the wishes of the tribunal, but it took no interest whatever in the search for commodious quarters. Eventually the tribunal discovered in the top flat of the Parliament buildings a high ungaily, unlighted, unfurnished attic, vacant. Now the interested parties are in a quandary what to do. For the present moment they are undecided whether to take possession of the "Roof Garden" or apply for permission to use the Chevaliers Hall, the headquarters of Netherlands Knights.

THE PRESBYTERIAN ASSEMBLY DISCUSSES FUTURE OF QUEEN'S

Report of One Committee Declares That Whatever Changes the Assembly Shall Make the Interest of the Church in the Institution Should Not Slacken.

Halifax, June 7.—The Presbyterian General Assembly yesterday accepted the invitation of the Ottawa Ministerial Association to meet next year in Knox Church, Ottawa.

The day was spent in a discussion of the report of the committee on the proposed change to the constitution of Queen's University, tending to the separation from church control, which concludes with the following resolution submitted to the assembly:

"Your committee earnestly desire that nothing may in any degree diminish the interest which has always been taken in Queen's by the Presbyterian Church. They recognize that the institution owes its origin to the church, and that her progress to the prominent place which she now holds among the educational forces of the land has been in large measure due to relations with the church and to the self-sacrificing loyalty of many members of the church. They rejoice in the many tokens of affection on the part of the church for Queen's, and trust that the university will continue to enjoy the sympathy of the church and the assistance of all who may be able to further her interests, so that this secret of past success may be an element in her future prosperity."

"Anticipating a further development of the university as gratifying as the past has been they are impressed with the importance of maintaining the theological faculty with increasing liberality in order that it may keep pace with the other faculties of the university.

"And finally, whatever changes the general assembly may see fit to sanction in the constitution of the university, they trust those good influences which have attended her birth and development will be perpetuated with increasing power and fruitfulness."

Dr. D. D. MacLeod, Richard Lees, M.A., of Peterboro, a graduate of Queen's, Rev. W. C. Clark and Principal Gordon all spoke at the afternoon session.

Mr. Lees advised caution, but spoke strongly against the change. He said the Anglicans and Baptists, instead of giving away their colleges, were moving in the opposite direction, and ended by saying: "I do not think the Presbyterians will be so foolish."

Rev. Mr. Clark showed that Scotland had the ideal of a national rather than a denominational system of education. Queen's was founded as a protest against the latter. He argued that if the change was made, Queen's would come into much better relation with the funds of the Province of Ontario, and her rights would be immeasurably improved.

The entire evening was occupied with the discussion, which will be concluded to-day.

LIBERALS CHALLENGE COCHRANE

Fort Frances, June 7.—The Liberal Association of the district of Rainy River held a special meeting here yesterday. They unanimously decided to invite the new Ontario Minister of the Whitney Government to justify his agreement with E. W. Backus, president of the Minnesota & Ontario Co. before the electors of this district. They wired to him last night the following invitation:

"Hon. Frank Cochrane, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.—Having learned that you are responsible for the granting of Ontario's consent to the exportation of power from this town to Minnesota, and also that you are the Minister of the Whitney Cabinet representing this district, and also that you are prepared to justify your action before the country, we would suggest that you arrange for W. A. Preston's resignation as our representative in the Provincial Legislature, and that you run as Government candidate in bye-election. If you think you can justify your action, we invite you to come before the people of this district and seek vindication. Let the electors decide."

CHILD BURNED TO DEATH

Child Burned to Death.

Coldwater, Ont., June 7.—Little Gertrude England, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar England of this village, was so seriously burned that, after nearly three hours of fearful suffering, she died. She left her home with some flowers for Mrs. Higginson, of whom she was very fond, and then joining Bessie Sawyer, a little three-year-old chum, went with her to a playhouse in a shed. While there the little ones seem to have lit a lamp which, in some way, ignited the clothing of little Gertrude. Bessie got out and gave the alarm but before help could arrive her playmate had been burned almost beyond recognition. She retained consciousness for two hours, piteously imploring help from her mother and Dr. Harvie, who attended her. She was the only daughter of her parents and the whole community is shocked by the tragedy.

TO CUT DOWN THE CIVIL LIST

London, June 7.—An important meeting of the Premier and the Ministers is expected to be held before the opening of Parliament. The Nation, regarded as the most authoritative Ministerial organ, points out that the King's death makes it impossible any longer to adhere just to the one [illegible] also [illegible] have the general election in July, and January seems the best month.

Meanwhile Parliament must devote the immediate future to appropriation bills, the 1910-11 budget, the civil list and the regency bill.

It is said that the Laborites will demand representation on the committee which will be appointed to revise the civil list, but it is not certain that they will get their demand. In default of abolishing the Sovereign, many of them would like to cut down the crown's allowance to the most meagre limits. Should they get representation, they would not be strong enough to effect any reduction.

El Alam, the official organ of the Nationalists, says: "He has buried himself alive, has proved his ignorance of history by saying that Egypt has not seen the like of the present Government since 2,000 years. TUESDAY, JUNE 7, 1910.

CONSISTENCY, THOU ART A JEWEL

Pope said, "Show me one that has it in his power, to act consistent with himself an hour," and Pope was supposed to be rather a keen observer. Across the line in one state they will not allow amateur ball games on Sunday, and yet in that same state they have major league games and thousands of hooting, yelling citizens. In Ontario baseball is prohibited, but one can play golf. Baseball, so the law says, is not right, but golf is a quiet pastime. Why is this? To run a lawn mower is an offence, but to whack a ball with a stick is unassailable. Four men play poker in the back room of a hotel or in some resort; in go the police and off go the men to jail. They are fined for gambling. Yet men play in stocks, buy and sell on margins, and gamble just as surely as the fellows who paid the fine. They are often ornaments to society and pillars in the church. Now why is this? Chinamen play their fan tan in their little clubs and the same police do the same thing as they did to the four men. But it is said that sometimes there is gambling in high toned clubs. However this may be only idle rumor.

THE LAND OF LONG HAIR

China is arousing. She will have a constitution. Russia is supposed to have had one granted a few years ago, but they are hanging young and old just as regularly in Russia as ever, the Siberian mines are still yawning for their prey and the Jews are still being lashed while the Jewess is the victim of gross violence. But China's constitution will not be like that. China for years has been sending her learned men into the four quarters of the earth seeing what is worth while. They have returned and met in council and now is the news of a better military system, modern police force, and a vast improvement in the financial and educational system. Don't think for a moment that the Chinaman who does up shirts and collars is the fair representative of China, as well judge Italians by the navvy who works with the pick, as China by the laundryman.

China is awakening, and when that vast host does awaken the rest of the nations will sit up. She has four hundred million. Fanatical, death has no terrors for the Chinaman and an army of several millions equipped with modern appliances and supplied with modern battleships is a dream of the future that will in all probability be realized.

These men who do everything opposite to us westerners will some day have to be reckoned with.

[illegible] GREY

We might as well have Earl Grey for Governor-General as any one else. He will probably be more welcome to the $50,000 a year, free house and retinue than some others who might come. We might have some one here who would be so unmixable as to undo all the good that my noble earl has done. He might be a big stiff.

Fifty thousand a year is a fine fat salary and the worst of it is that the fellows who get it don't need the money. But it's an awful bore, this Governor-General business. Does he go. It is noted by press and a watching public. Does he come. The same noting is accomplished in the same way. Does he sneeze? The message is flashed about the Dominion, his Excellency has contracted a cold. Does he yawn. He is rundown and overworked. Does he attend a function, he is shot by a battery of cameras. Does he send regrets. He is criticized.

THEODORE ROOSEVELDT AGAIN

Some one has mailed to the Review Office the following clipping:

There is no effective substitute for a real man; machinery cannot displace him, says the Philadelphia Ledger. No graven image, no automaton will do instead of him. He knows his own mind, and he knows men, and he is qualified to command a whole regiment of those who shrink and hesitate and palter. He makes up his mind at once and adheres to his determination he does not recant and reconsider till the golden opportunity has passed irrevocably. Above all, whatever he does, even when he is in the wrong, is manly; his mistakes are the miscarriages of his effort to do right, and not the errors of omission and neglect. People forgive Theodore Roosevelt's mistakes because he did things. A man man who never does anything wrong is a man who has never done anything at all. We may well pray to be delivered from the man with "icicles in his arteries," who moves across the world's stage in a fixed groove, like the paper doll in a child's theater that is pulled across the scene with a thread in a undeviating line. He is a bloodless abstraction, he is not a man."

"Icicles in his arteries" is a well-termed phase. No one will ever accuse Theodore Roosevelt with having icicles in his arteries although the press of the civilized world seem to think he has "bees in his bonnet." Success intoxicates some men and distorts the reasoning faculty. Nebuchadnezzer thought he was the only one, when he walked in his great palace in his great city the like of which has never been seen, but he was suddenly out eating grass with the cattle.

Napoleon had his vanity swelled with success till he thought that he could tarry at Moscow. That was the beginning of the end. Is this the fate that will befall our lion hunter and shooter of tigers and elephants?

For thirty years Abdul Hamid, the ex-Sultan of Turkey was master of twenty-five million of men. He relished honeyed speech. When deposed the young Turk leaders explored the palace. They came to a locked-up apartment from which they heard the words, "Long live the Sultan." It was not a room of traitors, but a room with hundreds of caged parrots who had been taught the expression. Abdul Hamid was fond of parrots and praise.

CONSERVATION IN NORWAY.
Nebraska State Journal-Herald.

The Norwegian law requires that when a lumberman cuts down a tree he shall plant one to take its place. The penalty for a violation of this law is a fine for the first offence, imprisonment for the second and retirement from the lumber business for the third. Compared with these regulations, the American programme of conservations seems but the first step in effective forestry.

LISTEN TO THE BELLS

The Finest Collection Owned by an Englishwoman.

OF INTEREST TO HOUSEWIVES

Many Lands and Ages Represented In It—Curious Specimens of the Middle Ages—Bells For Shoes Among Them. Ancient and Modern Devices.

An Englishwoman has the finest known collection of hand bells. She has specimens of foreign bells from all over the world, as well as antique British bells.

The bells range in size from an old English pack horse bell, which weighs five pounds, to the tiny bells worn on shoes centuries ago. There is an ecclesiastical bell of very early date with a fleur-de-lis pattern on it.

Other specimens are an apostle bell, which bears the faces and emblems of the evangelists, and two china bells of the Georgian period, one formed of a

An Elizabethan bell shows a female figure in a Medici collar and a wonderfully fitted bodice with a basque. The bell portion, which forms the skirt, is engraved in a conventional pattern.

There are models far more interesting than the English bells in this collection, which will doubtless some day be placed in an English museum. There are bells from Rome which were found in the Forum. One is of silver, worked in fish scale pattern, and is over a thousand years old; another is also of silver and has on it a representation of Romulus and Remus and the wolf.

There is a bell from a temple near Lassa. It is of copper inlaid with gold and is of great antiquity. A bell from India is of silver latticework and is said to be the only one of its kind in existence. It was found in Benin.

There is a Siamese bell in the form of a dancing girl enameled in green and gold which was one of those used for barter during the French invasion. There is a Medici bell with the crown and balls of the pawnbroker, and there are bells from the tombs of Egyptian kings and from the boudoirs of famous Frenchwomen. There are hundreds [illegible] collection gathered by one woman and shown on rare occasions to lovers of the antique, unique and beautiful.

Nursery Tray For Baby.

When the baby first joins the family party at the nursery table he is usually no great stickler for good manners. His pride as sole possessor of a spoon for the first time in his life causes him to brandish it far and wide regardless of the fact that it may not be empty. He also has a way of hammering on the table with it. His control of his cup and saucer, moreover, is purely elementary, and over both go, time after time, to nurse's dire distress and the general detriment of the clean damask cloth. Every one concerned will welcome under these circumstances a special tray, which, clipped upon the table in front of baby, will minimize the sad results of energy and lack of control over his cup and spoon. The tray has actually a ridge and a trough at the edge, is prettily colored and is also pictorially patterned in a way that will gratify baby's sense of the artistic, if not mother's.

Many Women who are Splendid Cooks

dread having to prepare an elaborate dinner because they are not sufficiently strong to stand over an intensely hot coal range. This is especially true in summer. Every woman takes pride in the table she sets, but often it is done at tremendous cost to her own vitality through the weakening effect of cooking on a coal range in a hot kitchen.

It is no longer necessary to wear yourself out preparing a fine dinner. Even in the heat of summer you can cook a large dinner without being worn out.

New Perfection
WICK BLUE FLAME
Oil Cook-stove

Gives no outside heat, no smell, no smoke. It will cook the biggest dinner without heating the kitchen or the cook. It is immediately lighted and immediately extinguished. It can be changed from a slow to a quick fire by turning a handle. There's no drudgery connected with it, no coal to carry, no wood to chop. You don't have to wait fifteen or twenty minutes till its fire gets going. Apply a light and it's ready. By simply turning the wick up or down you get a slow or an intense heat on the bottom of the pot, pan, kettle or oven, and nowhere else. It has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot, drop shelves for coffee, teapot or saucepan, and even a rack for towels. It saves time, worry, health and temper. It does all a woman needs and more than she expects. Made with 1, 2, and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner sizes can be had with or without Cabinet.

LEGAL ABSURDITIES.

Fine Distinctions That Are Found In the Criminal Law.

Burglary is the crime of breaking in and entering in the nighttime of another's dwelling house with an intent to commit a felony therein. This means precisely what it says. If a door or window is broken open, or the knob of an unlocked door is raised, or an unlocked window is raised, it is burglary. But if the door or window is left slightly open or even raised as little as an inch and a thief pushes or raises it entirely open and enters, it is not burglary. It means, too, a "dwelling house." Therefore if a family is sleeping in a tent or booth and a thief enters it is not burglary. If all the other conditions are met and it happens that the dawn has broken, there can be no burglary, for that part of the definition specifying the nighttime is strictly adhered to.

We meet another of these fine distinctions in "larceny," the stealing of personal or movable property, which requires that the thief must get complete control. Thus if a thief in attempting to steal a watch lifts it out of a man's pocket and it is not attached to the owner by a chain, if the thief gets it into his hand for a moment only it is larceny and felony. If, however, the watch is attached to the clothing, even though the pickpocket cannot see the chain, as might happen in a crowd, he has not had complete control, and the act is not larceny, but only a misdemeanor. The difference of the two terms relates only to the length of the sentence. But if it is your watch and you wish to see the trial of the would be thief proceed you will do well to see that the indictment does not choose the wrong word.—Charles B. Brewer in McClure's Magazine.

Baggage Insurance.

This is a modern business age wherein a pianist may insure his fingers, a dancer may insure her ankles or a man with important business on hand may be indemnified against late arrival of a passenger train which failed to convey him to a certain point in time to close an important deal involving millions. But there is still a new kind of indemnity, and not Lloyd's either. It is the mere insurance of your personal belongings while traveling, and this very latest idea is through a system of tourists' baggage tickets. A traveler bound anywhere can insure his baggage for a short period as readily as he can get personal accident insurance to cover the perils of the journey.—New York Tribune.

The Nobel Prizes For This Year.

A statement just published by the managers and trustees of the Nobel foundation shows that the five winners of the Nobel prizes for the year 1910 will each receive, in addition to the decoration, a money prize of about $38,000. The fund consists of 33,729,698 kronen, about $9,107,018. According to a provision in the deed of gift, 10 per cent of the income must be returned to the fund and about 25 per cent of the remainder is set aside for taxes, expenses incurred by members of the various juries in the discharge of their duties, etc. "But for these drafts on the fund," says the report, "the five prizes for 1910 would each be greater by about 60,000 kronen."

Measuring Memory.

Attempts have been made from time to time in France to "measure memory." One of the experiments consists in reading a series of figures to the subject at a regular speed of about two per second and observing how many he can repeat without error in the order in which they were given. The faculty of voluntary attention is, of course, called into play by this experiment. Children from six to eight years old retain on the average five figures, children ten years old six figures and adults seven figures. It has been ascertained that Jacques Inaudi, the lightning calculator, can retain more than forty figures. — Harper's Weekly.

A DUCK HARD TO KILL.

The Screaming Walloon Is Something of a Diver Too.

The screaming walloon is a hard duck to kill. Its hide is very tough and is thickly covered with feathers and down. Besides, the bird is a great diver, one of the kind that used to "dive at the flash" when hunted with the old arm that flashed when fired. It is of very little value for table use, being so tough. The only way to manage it at all is to skin it and parboil it in a big pot with plenty of water. The negroes make caps of walloon skins.

"They are great ducks for diving," says a well known Tred Avon river progger. "They can dive quicker, go down deeper, remain under water longer and come up farther away than any other duck that frequents our waters. I remember once I succeeded in killing a walloon, and, being short of game for the table, I determined to cook my bird. I got a negro to skin it, giving him the hide for his trouble. After being cleaned we put it in a great pot full of water and under it kindled a hot fire. After awhile I wanted to see how the cooking of my duck progressed and lifted the top off the boiling pot, but there was so much steam escaping I could not see into the pot and struck a match over it. The blamed walloon, sir, dived at the flash of the match. It disappeared and has never been seen since."

The Postal Card Rage at Washington.

About the first thing that a visitor in Washington decides to do is to get a full supply of postal cards to send home. Many have inquired who first set the fashion. At the postoffice the other day it was revealed that the first postcards ever issued in the world were sent out from Austria in 1869, following a suggestion made in 1865. Professor Herman of Vienna is the saint on whom the postoffice clerks visit their benisons when they find difficulty in handling the sheaves of postcards coming in all the year around.—National Magazine.

Top Spinning One of the Most Ancient Sports.

SOME TOP DESIGNS.

Top spinning is one of the oldest games in the world. It has been played for thousands of years, and there are few even of the savage nations of Asia and Africa who don't play the game with some sort of top. Long before Columbus sailed for America the Indians knew a good deal about tops and top spinning. The Sioux whittled them out of bits of wood something like those shown in the picture. In Ceylon, Siam and China nearly all the tops are so fixed that they whistle or sing when they spin. The ordinary top used by the American boy is probably the most popular in the world. It is extensively used in England and in all of her colonies. The German top is larger and more expensive, and the French top is quite different in shape. None of them will stand the pegging of the stubby little American top.

About the Screech Owl.

The barn owl, or screech owl, as it is often called, from its weird, piercing shriek, so unlike the deep, mellow hoot of some of its near relatives, is the best known of its kind. It is also the best worth knowing and most useful of its tribe and a good friend of the farmer, for it destroys hundreds of the farmer's greatest enemies—rats and mice.

In its favorite haunt, the barn, it will stand bolt upright in some dark corner or on a lofty beam, seemingly asleep, but with eyes and ears open. At the slightest rustle in the straw below it is all attention, head bent downward and bright eyes gazing intently at the spot from whence the sound comes. If the mouse or rat shows itself, without a movement of his wings the owl simply "drops" upon his prey and seldom fails to grasp it in his strong, sharp talons. Flying back to his perch with it, he seems to meditate awhile, then gravely bolts his victim whole and solemnly waits for the next sound from below. His method of swallowing the mouse he has caught is curious. He takes it from his talons and holds it in his beak by the middle for a few moments, then by a quick jerk of the head throws it in the air and catches it by the head. A second jerk sends it head first down his throat, except for the tail, which remains hanging out for another minute of meditation, when a third jerk puts it out of sight.

India Rubber.

When we think of the many different uses to which india rubber is now put we cannot repress a smile as we read the following allusion to it in Dr. Priestley's book on perspective, published in 1770, which, it is said, is the earliest mention of the substance: "I have seen a substance excellently adapted to the purpose of wiping from paper the marks of a black lead pencil. It is sold by Mr. Nairue, mathematical instrument maker, opposite the Royal Exchange. He sells a cubical piece of about half an inch for 3 shillings, and he says it will last several years."

Why?

Why is a lazy dog like a hill? Because he is a slow pup (slope up).

Why is a bee a great deceiver? Because he is a humbug.

Why is a jailer like a musician? Because he fingers the keys.

What is that which never asks a question, yet requires many answers? A doorbell.

Seasonable Advertisements.

This advertisement was seen posted in Birdland: "Master Robin has opened a singing school at 23 Songster street. A limited number of pupils will be admitted. Master Robin will teach the birdlings to sing the sweetest and latest songs, such as 'The Merry Widow Waltz,' 'I'm Afraid to Go Home In the Dark,' etc. All who wish to join the summer school will leave word at his nest."

Willie Winkie's Drive.

Willie Winkie drives his horses
Over hill and over dale,
Never stops for flood or fire
When he's going for the mail.

Though the way be long and dreary,
Willie's spirit never flags.
All his thought is for his horses
And the safety of his bags.

When at last his journey's ended
All the mail that he has brought
Willie runs and gives to mother,
As a good mail carrier ought.

Then the fiery steeds and driver
Like a flash are off once more,
But with all their speed they never Get beyond the nursery door.

A Division of Labor.

Bobby had been unusually quiet for several hours, so quiet indeed that his mother began to worry over the great quantities of stillness that came from the room in which he was sitting. Finally, unable to stand the strain any longer, she rose up from her work and went into the nursery.

"What are you doing, Bobby?" she said as she discovered the little chap curled up in a chair with a very solemn expression on his face.

"Thinkin' and wishin'," replied Bobby.

"What about, dear?" asked his mother.

"I was thinkin' how nice it would be if I was twins," he answered. "Then the other one could do the studyin' at school and I could stay home and play, and then when I did something naughty, why, you could spank him. When I was sick he could take the castor oil, and"—

"And when you had some candy—what then?" asked his mother.

"Oh, I'd eat it," said Bobby. "It wouldn't do for me to let him get sick."—Judge's Library.

A Prodigy.

"So you think your boy is a prodigy? But every man thinks his own son is the most wonderful being that ever breathed."

"I tell you this youngster is remarkable, no matter how you may sneer. I've seen him do a thing that I don't suppose any other boy of his age could possibly do."

"What's his specialty—mathematics?"

"Mathematics! I should say not! He hasn't any more head for figures than I have, and learning the multiplication table was the hardest work I ever did in my life."

"In what branch of science does he seem to be particularly interested?"

"He isn't interested in science at all. But the other day a friend of mine who has a big automobile left the machine standing in front of my house for more than half an hour, and, although the boy was playing around outside all the time, he did not once climb into the automobile or even toot the horn."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Clinging to a Pleasure.

ENCOURAGING ADDRESS TO SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS

Given by the Lord Bishop of Toronto at Opening of Sunday School Convention of Archdeaconry of Peterborough at St. John's — Ven. Archdeacon Warren on the Force of Example,

The feature of the session of the Anglican Sunday School Convention last night at St. John's school house was the helpful and sympathetic address on Sunday school teaching by His Lordship Bishop Sweeney, of Toronto.

Rev. Canon Davidson was in the chair.

Canon Davidson, in an appropriate address of introduction, spoke in high eulogy of the self sacrificing and fruitful efforts of the Sunday school teachers who were indefatigable workers in the interests of the children under their instruction.

He referred optimistically on the possibilities of the convention, and heartily thanked the delegates for their presence and assured them of a hearty welcome and thorough appreciation of their services.

THE CONVENTION'S INCEPTOR

Rev. J. Russell McLean, of Colborne, the central figure of the convention, spoke interestingly of the work which he had brought into being.

PETERBORO IS HOSPITABLE.

Mr. McLean paid a tribute to Peterborough and her hospitable people.

This convention meant a great deal to the clergy of this portion of the diocese. The speaker commended the clergy for the active part they had taken toward the success of the convention, and complimented Messrs. R. J. Devey and James Edgar, of the hospitality committee for the splendid attention they had given to detail.

AN ESTEEMED HEAD.

His Lordship the Bishop was cordially thanked by the speaker for giving his valuable time and efforts in the interests of the convention.

"I [illegible] say, ladies and gentlemen," said the speaker, fervently, "that it is a good thing for the bishopric of Toronto that we have such a bishop."

Archdeacon Warren was also to be heartily thanked.

PURPOSE OF THE CONVENTION.

The idea of the convention was that it was to be a friendly gathering. We wanted to find out what improvements could be made in our Sunday school methods—to get at the heart of the matter.

A CYCLONIC FORCE.

To mention that, Mr. McLean, of Colborne, had been the central figure in the inception of the convention, was, His Lordship Bishop Sweeney stated, indeed a pledge and guarantee that this convention would be a success.

"I call him my cyclone priest, and I am sure that he has applied that cyclonic force to this convention."

A COMPREHENSIVE WORK.

The bishop characterized the Sunday school work as the most continental one in all the church of God.

He earnestly hoped that what he was privileged to say yesterday about the child would make the deep impression that he would like to have it make.

A CALL TO SERVICE.

There were three lines in the profession of Sunday school teaching in the church of the living God.

In the first place there was the call and response of the Sunday school teacher.

He wondered if the teachers had looked upon their responsibility with the same spirit as the clergy looked upon their higher office in the church.

INDIVIDUAL RESPONSE.

He could not tell how that call had come to them individually, whether from God directly or through their preacher, but they knew full well how that call came to them, and in what measure they had responded.

As they responded to that call Sunday after Sunday they must place themselves in the same attitude that the prophet Samuel did when he said: "Speak, Lord, for Thy servant heareth."

THE TEACHER'S DUTY.

"Do not look, I beseech you, upon your work from any point of view than that you are earnestly called to give His message to the child."

[illegible] CO-OPERATION WITH GOD.

The second thought was that the teachers, having heard and responded to that call, found themselves in co-operation with Almighty God in Take three the moulding of the character of the child.

Christ called one after another to swing into line of eternal energy.

SPIRITUAL INSTRU[illegible]TORS.

"Workers together with God, workers together with the parents of the child."

The parents of the present day were so busy with the mundane things of life that they found little time to give to the spiritual edification of their children.

CHRIST THE MODEL.

If the teacher was to be an effective co-worker with God and the child's parents and sponsors he or she had to know the material and Model just as exactly as the moulder in clay had to know his material and model.

The teacher had to know the child and fashion it after the image of the Lord Jesus Christ.

THE CROWN OF WORK.

Those who were disheartened with their work he would have leave the convention with the knowledge that they receive the Lord and by Him they would be repaid.

CHRIST'S DECREE.

As Pharoah's daughter said to the Hebrew mother concerning the babe in the bulrushes, so Christ said to the Sunday school worker: "Take away child and nurse him for me and I will give thee thy wages."

Christ was ready to fulfill His promise and was waiting with the commendation: "Well done thou good and faithful servant enter now into thy Lord."

A TRYING SERVICE.

The Bishop admonished the teachers to let no one take away their crown. "Hold fast what thou hast, let no man take away thy crown."

He knew the teachers would be discouraged and had often been discouraged for there was no work in all the church that one would feel more tempted to take up spasmodically than the work of Sunday school teaching.

"LET YOUR LIGHT SO SHINE."

He appealed to the teachers to let nothing obscure their light that it would not glorify their Father which is in heaven.

Christ had said, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify thy Father, which is in heaven." And when opportunities were gone they were gone forever. They could not be recalled.

AN INSPIRING PRIVILEGE.

The teachers were to go from the convention filled with the dignity of their calling and with the realization that they were working with God and would receive His blessing and reward.

VEN. ARCHDEACON WARREN.

Ven. Archdeacon Warren said it was a very great pleasure to again welcome His Lordship to the archdeaconry of Peterborough to which he was no stranger.

As the Bishop became better known to the Anglicans of Peterborough his offices would be more and more highly appreciated.

PERSONAL LOVE ESSENTIAL.

Real personal love, regard and sympathy for the child were essential in advance in Sunday school work.

THE POWER OF EXAMPLE.

There were some things to be valued by the Sunday school teacher much more than anything that could be said to the child.

The fundamental influence on the child was the life character and example of the teacher.

It was our daily walk, our constant actions, the general drift of our life that impressed the child.

SUSCEPTIBLE TO IMPRESSIONS.

Children were keen to see and our daily life was the impression that told on the child.

We were to be careful of what were the driving forces of our lives for our example had a mighty influence with the child.

ALL MAY WIELD GOOD INFLUENCE.

As a parent he would like to say that he believed that anyone who would, could influence the life of the young for good.

[illegible] the evening solos were acceptably sung by Miss Dawson and Mr. Stacey.

COMPANIES IN SHAM BATTLE

Companies six and eight of the 57th Regiment were in battle last evening near the court house. It wasn't a real one, however, but only a sham. The firing of the rifles could be heard by those attending the evening session of the convention at St. John's church. Needless to say, the address of the Right Rev. Bishop Sweeney was somewhat interrupted.

SHOW WILL BE CONTINUED BY MR. TURNER

Mr. W. A. Edwards, who is now putting on moving pictures and vaudeville at the Grand Opera House, will discontinue his temporary occupancy of the theatre on Saturday night.

Mr. J. J. Turner, the manager of the theatre, will continue the summer entertainment and will present first class vaudeville and moving pictures.

The show will probably be under the direct management of Mr. Turner. [illegible]

It is a Real Pleasure

To us to hear the many kindly appreciative remarks which come to us daily from wearers of the modern glasses which we are now supplying. They are certainly the finest ever produced, and they recommend themselves by whomsoever used. Mr. Browett, Optical Specialist, makes a most thorough examination of the eyes, and is most careful of the adjustment, so that in every particular they are made to suit the exact needs of each eye, and the facial features of the wearer. In fact these glasses are useless unless the examiner has had sufficent experience in refracting and adapting. VEXED QUESTION DECIDED

At last night's meeting of the Council the majority decided to retain the services of Fire Chief Howard, into whose conduct the Fire, Water and Light Committee have been holding some investigation and in regard to which a report is on fyle. The committee did not question the ability of the Fire Chief in regard to his handling of his duties, but were pronounced as against some personal habits, rendering him at times, so the report averred, unfit for the performance of those duties. So that he has what may be termed another chance. Members of the committee expressed the thought that the investigation seemed to partake of the nature of a persecution, but that is only a plea for sympathy.

The action of the members of the Fire, Water and Light Committee is to be commended. They have done exactly what they were elected to do, act in the city's interests and in the direction of efficiency. A man at the head of so important a department, where the lives and property of citizens, as well as the lives of his men are, in a measure, under his care and keeping should at all times be in a fit condition to cope with any emergency that might arise. This the committee recognized and pointed out in their report. To persistently ignore remonstrance and reprimand only invites the inevitable.

It is to be hoped that the lesson will not be lost on Fire Chief Howard. He is believed to be an efficient and fearless fire-fighter and one who will always lead his men skilfully, but these qualities are of little avail if he allow personal habits to interfere with the possible performance of his responsible duties.

HAVELOCK HAPPENINGS

From Our Own Correspondent.

Havelock, June 4—The Havelock and the Norwood teams locked horns the other night upon the Havelock football grounds, and 'twas a noble fight. Each man was keyed up to his best, and bound to make a win, and there was something doing from the time they started in. At ten past seven the game commenced before a monstrous crowd, and when the teams lined up to play, they gave them greetings loud. Each man called on his favorite team, to do the best they could, and silently within himself each player said he would. The Norwood team came down to win, they were one goal behind, and it was up to them to play to get up in the shine. The whistle blew, the game commenced, and they are off at last, the Norwood men they work real hard, their play is swift and fast. With might and mail they play the game, the ball goes here and there, and Havelock backs work harder still, the forwards do their best. The Havelock men secure the ball, they pass it 'cross the plot, they place it in the Norwood goal, upon a mighty shot. Again the Norwood team starts in, determined to work hard, to make a showing for their team, upon the old score card. They pass it outward to the left, the left wings make a dash towards the Havelock goal it goes, there is a mighty clash. The home defence jumps in the play, and soon the deck is cleared, towards the Norwood goal once more, the pigskin bag is steered. The Norwwood backs are on their job and try to keep it out. But Havelock team they score again and Havelock rooters shout, the Havelock team secure the ball and pass it up the line, they score again and make it three, and now it is half time. The ball starts on its roll once more towards the Havelock stakes, but forth there comes a Havelock man, and through the crowd he breaks. Now up towards the Norwood goal and both teams dig right in; the centre man he drives it hard and bursts the old pigskin. They have to get a new ball now, and there is some delay, but soon the teams line up again to finish out their play. The Norwood team play hard and fast; they pass the pigskin quick, and now between the Havelock stakes the moving sphere they kick. The Norwood team they rush again, the rooters yell some more, and next against the Havelock goal they many shots do pour. But Havelock backs give play for play, they will not let them score. the Havelock forwards get the ball and rush it as before. Now up into the Norwood goal they take the ball once more, and place it in the Norwood goal and make their total four. Then up and down along the line, the ball goes here and there, and now it moves along the ground, then rises in the air; and thus the game comes to an end, the score is four to one, the Havelock team have beat Norwood and district two have won. To Madoc town this week they go, with district one to play, and may they score as many there, as they did yesterday.

The Havelock line-up was:—
Goal—Stewart.
Backs—Copp, Tomlinson.
Halves—Seabrooks, Brooks, Kitchen.
Centre—Wilky.
Right Wing—Warner, Bryans.

House of 1,000 Pennies.

Toronto, June 7.—A building that was built of pennies and shillings left in court as "unclaimed balances," enough to make up $26,000, is being torn down to-day at Osgoode Hall.

A score of workmen were engaged on the job, throwing pillars and roofing into the yard. The big chimney will be demolished by the violent process of attaching a rope to it and pulling it over.

Thirty-six years ago the wing was erected from the monies lying unclaimed from judgments. These were in few cases above a few dollars on individual accounts, and consisted mostly of from one cent to fifty cent amounts. In hundreds of money judgments, the winning party in drawing the amount to his credit left small sums unclaimed. In the course of time the aggregate served to erect a three-storey building for law court and office purposes. But the house of a thousand pennies is quickly crumbling to the earth.

Sensational Trial Opens.

Berlin, June 7.—The trial of Frau Von Schoenbeck-Weber, of exalted birth and high rank, on a charge of instigating the murder of her husband, Major Von Schoenbeck, on Christmas Day, 1907, and of being an accessory to the murder committed by Captain Von Goeben, began yesterday at Allenstein, in East Germany.

Owing to the prominence of the prisoners and the peculiar circumstances surrounding the crime, the trial will probably be most sensational.

King Decorates Tars.

London, June 7.—King George yesterday decorated the sailors who carried the body of his father through Windsor. The hundred picked tars who manned the ropes of the funeral gun-carriage were reviewed at Marlborough House. At the conclusion of the review, the King gave the gun-carriage into the keeping of the navy and presented to every man medals of the Royal Victorian Order.

Head Crushed In Mixer.

Belleville, June 7.—Robert Long, aged 14 years, employed in Lingham's brack yard, was placing sand in the mixer when in some way his head became caught in the machinery, the lever crushing his head in a terrible manner, inflicting a fracture at the base of the skull. Doctors say there is small hopes of recovery. The victim has only been here a year from the old country.

Points in Kohler Indictment Dropped.

Cleveland, June 7.—The prosecution in the investigation of charges against Frederick Kohler, suspended chief of police, rested its case late yesterday. Several points in the original charge were not pressed. The defence took up its side of the case immediately.

Object to Pastor.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 7.—A committee of three from this place are in Guelph to ask the Hamilton conference not to send Rev. Dr. Williamson of Hamilton here as pastor of Lundy's Lane Methodist Church, to succeed Rev. A. E. Lavelle.

Assassinated While She Slept.

Lexington, Ky., June 7.—Mrs. Alfred McIntosh of Lee County was shot as she slept Sunday night.

Where History Began.

Describing a visit to the tombs of the Egyptian kings, Albert Bigelow Paine in Harper's Weekly writes of "the splendid tomb of Amenophis II., of the eighteenth dynasty, who lived in the glory of Egypt 1600 B. C., a warrior who slew seven Syrian chiefs with his own hand. The top of the sarcophagus is removed and is replaced by heavy plate glass. Just over the sleeper's face there is a tiny electric globe, and I believe one could never tire of standing there and looking at that quiet visage, darkened by age, but beautiful in its dignity, unmoved, undisturbed by the storm and stress of the fretful years. How long he has been asleep! The Israelites were still in bondage when he fell into that quiet doze, and for their exodus a century or two later he did not care. Hector and Achilles and Paris and the rest had not yet battled on the plains of Troy."

Moral Suasion and a Strap.

"She seems to have abandoned her moral suasion ideas relative to the training of children."

"She has."

"How did it happen?"

"Well, I was largely instrumental in bringing about the change. You see, she has no children of her own, and I grew weary of her constant preaching and theorizing, so I loaned her our Willie."

"Loaned her your boy?"

"Precisely. She was to have him a week on her solemn promise to confine herself entirely to moral suasion."

"Did she keep her promise?"

"She did, but at the expiration of the week she came to me with tears in her eyes and pleaded for permission to whale him just once."—New York Mail.

Confucius on Kingcraft.

"What is kingcraft?" demanded a disciple.

"Were there no help for it which could be best spared of the three?"

"Troops," said the master.

"And were there no help for it which could be better spared of the other two?"

"Food," said the master. "From of old all men die, but without trust a people cannot stand."

Got It Mixed.

An amusing blunder was made in the case of a judicial declaration that certain resident magistrates "could no more state a case than they could write a Greek ode."

This was made to read that the magistrates "could no more state a case than they could ride a Greek goat."—London Scraps.

STARVATION AMID PLENTY.

An Odd Situation, Yet It Is the World's Greatest Danger.

Nitrogen is possibly the oddest of all the chemical elements. It has no taste, no color, no odor, no marked affinity for other elements. It is neutral, negative and a non-supporter of life and combustion. Nevertheless, it is a very important element. It constitutes the main difference between the animal and vegetable kingdoms. It is the basis of practically every explosive known to science, and the frightful power of dynamite, nitroglycerine, cordite and gunpowder is due to this queer element.

A trace of this harmless nitrogen, added to a bit of the fluffy, innocent cotton so common in our households, converts it into the deadly guncotton. Although it has no odor, yet when it is combined with hydrogen, another gas without odor, it forms the strong-smelling gas known as ammonia. The sweetest perfumes known to man are all nitrogen compounds. Although it has no color, yet when combined chemically with two parts of oxygen, it makes a gas that is a brilliant cherry red.

Although it is inert, and we breathe gallons of it every hour, yet when chemically combined in still another proportion with oxygen, it forms the well-known laughing gas, so commonly used as an anaesthetic by dentists. Though it has no apparent effect upon the body, yet when combined with carbon, hydrogen and oxygen in the form of meat, the body finds it the hardest element to get rid of, and too often it is the cause of the most fatal of all kidney diseases.

Air is a mechanical mixture. By this is meant that the constituents are distinct and separate, even as sugar is distinct from the water in which it is dissolved.

Were nitrogen to form a chemical combustion with the other constituents of the atmosphere, all life would become extinct almost instantly. An atom of nitrogen, so inert and harmless, combined with another atom of an equally harmless substance, carbon, sometimes called soot, makes the deadly gas known as cyanogen, the basis of prussic acid, one drop of which will cause almost instantaneous death.

Although there is so much nitrogen all around us, the world is slowly starving to death for lack of it. Animals must have it in the combined form, and it must be given to the soil, if we want wheat, and corn, and other grains. Hundreds of years ago birds deposited a nitrogen-bearing substance on the sea cliffs and in the sea caves along the coast of Chile, in far off South America.

Man has gone there after this precious nitrate and borne it away, shipload after shipload, to be used as a fertilizer on the impoverished fields of Europe and America. Now the deposits are nearly all gone and nitrogen must be sought elsewhere. In Germany they are taking it from the air by means of electricity.

If this method proves itself to be a success the world life will be saved; if it does not and no other natural deposit is found, or no other means of fixing the nitrogen in the air in a soluble form so that plants may feed upon it, all earth life is doomed, even though it be postponed for hundreds of years. The time is surely coming when our descendants shall suffer from a nitrogen famine, although living in a sea of it.

Even to-day we are feeling it, and the countless abandoned farms in New England are silently eloquent of the nitrogen that was theirs once, but is now theirs no more. Truly, nitrogen is a queer element and it behooves us to become better acquainted with it unless we wish our descendants to face the frightful danger of starvation due to the lack of this strange gas so abundant, and yet so hard to obtain in the form needed by plants.

Liberty In Three Nations.

An Englishman loves liberty as he does his lawful wife. She is a possession. He may not treat her with much tenderness, but he knows how to defend her. A Frenchman loves liberty like an affianced bride. He will commit a thousand follies for her sake. A German loves liberty like his old grandmother. And yet the surly Englishman may some day in a fit of temper put a rope around her neck, and the inconstant Frenchman may become unfaithful to his adored one, but the German will never quite abandon his old grandmother. He will always keep a nook for her in the chimney corner, where she can tell her fairy tales to the listening children.—Heinrich Heine.

Would Drown All Sounds.

The agent of the apartment house was trying to discourage him from applying for a flat.

"Your nerves would be ruined," said the agent. "There is a phonograph on the second floor that runs day and night."

"Dot was nuttin's," responded the little man in the red and blue cap.

"On the third floor a girl practices on the piano all day."

"I vud hear her nod."

"Der soundsv ud nod reach me."

"Great Josephus! Are you deaf?"

"Nein! I blay der drombone."

Mother's Task.

When mother gets breakfast she must remember that father likes his breakfast food without cream, Johnny wants both cream and sugar, Susie doesn't like breakfast food at all and must have a substitute, Mary has to have grapefruit and the rest of the family want oranges and apples. No two agree on anything, but she must remember what each one wants or the family doubt her devotion. What is it, do you suppose, that keeps the mother of a large family from going crazy?

The Rubber Plant In 1735.

The first accurate information regarding the wonderful rubber plant was furnished by La Condamine, a French scientist who was sent in 1735 by the Government of France to measure an arc of the meridian near Quito. This brought him to the heart of the rubber growing country, and much valuable information was thus obtained.

Want National Parliament.

Pekin, June 7.—On Wednesday next a formal demand will be made upon the throne for the immediate convocation of a national Parliament. The authors of the exaction to be attempted are the delegates to the provincial assemblies, who have the support of organizations of merchants.

It is learned from the leaders of the movement that they do not intend to use drastic measures, because of the fear that an anti-dynastic revolution would only serve to bring the armies of foreign powers into China.

Got Back Bones of Tecumseh.

Chatham, June 7.—The Indians from St. Annes' Island went to Wallaceburg Saturday and demanded the bones of Tecumseh which were taken up from a grave there by Dr. Mitchell and party. Dr. Mitchell acceded to their request in accordance with an agreement made with the Indians in a council held before the remains were disinterred. The Indians have replaced the skeleton with solemn Indian rites. People here do not believe that the remains found were those of Tecumseh.

What's In a Name?

Toronto, June 7.—When Samuel Hauge stood up in the Police Court yesterday, charged with non-support, he caused a sensation by declaring that the woman taking the witness box against him was not his wife. It turned out that she was Mrs. William Hoag, whose husband was similarly charged. The confusion of names had caused the mix-up. William wasn't present and Samuel was given a week to turn over a new leaf.

Said He Was Political Prisoner.

Kingston, June 7.—Carl Dullman, leader in the dynamite plot to blow up the Welland Canal ten years ago, refused to give Government camera men a sitting at the penitentiary and was put in the dungeon cell for disobedience. After a few hours in the cell he reconsidered the matter and went before the camera.

He raised a technical objection, claiming that he was a political prisoner.

Windsor, June 7.—Ptomaine poisoning caused by eating lobster in a Boston hotel while on a business trip for the Packard Motor Car Co., Detroit, resulted in the death of Jas. F. Baines, service manager of the company, at his home here Sunday afternoon.

CHURCH UNION NOW GOES BACK TO PRESBYTERIES

Canadian General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church Spends Day in Discussion of the Projected Amalgamation—MacKay Dissents.

Halifax, June 8.—After a debate for two whole sederunts, the assembly again divided on the subject of church union. By a vote of 184 to 73, the motion of Principal Patrick, convener of the committee, that the assembly declare approval of the agreement to form a basis of union passed by the joint committee representing the three denominations, and also directing that the resolution be transmitted to presbyteries for their judgment, to be reported on before May 1, 1911, was carried.

Dr. Patrick reviewed the action of the general assembly and the work done by the union committee. He referred to the unanimity with which the committee had arrived at its conclusion. At each stage of the proceedings it had taken the church into its confidence, sending out reports of the work so far as completed.

"Here we have the greatest achievement since the reformation," he said.

He called attention to the number of reasons why union should be consummated. First, he placed the historical position of the Presbyterian Church in regard to union, which has always been that unionism is a duty when not forbidden by conscience.

The contemplated union, if achieved, would be only the beginning of wider unions, involving the Anglican and other denominations. He asked the assembly to approve of the basis of union and send it to the presbyteries for their judgment. This would not bind next year's assembly, which would be free to act as seen fit.

Principal McKay of Vancouver dissented on three grounds: 1. That the assembly was incompetent to take action on the matter. 2. That the vote was taken to confuse the issue. 3. That the rights of the people had not been safeguarded.

The standards and constitution of the Presbyterian Church held that there might be a unity of spirit with diversity of form and operation. The jellyfish represented union with differentiation.

"The new creed lacks the architectonic principle," he said. "It has nineteen articles simply because the document it copies had that number. It does not attempt to interpret or be the essence of the great doctrines of the ages. It is only an excuse for a creed.

"There is going to be a new order of lay preachers. I believe we ought to allow men to preach when they feel like it. But will this increase the standard? These licensed laymen will be able to swamp us by their votes.

He came at length to his final appeal: "Don't muzzle the people. It has been ironically said that a superior power must have had a hand in framing this amendment. I accept the taunt. Yet I believe that a higher power urged us to this stand. I have suffered much because of it, but my conscience is my guide, and a clear conscience my reward." (Great applause.)

"It was never intended by the barrier act that a day would come for the church to commit suicide. Leave this thing alone and just send it to the people. We can trust their judgment. (Applause.) Let us have unity, but let it come spontaneously. Away with this engineering; this artificial union."

RAIN BRINGS JOY TO LUMBERMEN

Fredericton, N.B., June 8.—John Kilburn, lumber operator, brings good news from the stranded lumber drives on the upper St. John. When he left Connors Monday morning it was raining and there seemed to be good prospects of his lumber getting into the corporation limits.

Mr. Kilburn reports that the big jam abandoned several weeks ago within five miles of the corporation limits has been gotten out into safety. It contains about 14,000,000 feet, belonging to the St. John Lumber Co. and Kilburn and Morrison.

Cunliffe brought the big drive out of the Allegash last week, and has sent his crew back for another. It is reported to-day that American capitalists are negotiating for the purchase of the mills and lumber lands of the Scott Lumber Co., owners of 35,000 acres, and with 15,000 acres under lease.

KOHLER CHARGES STRONGLY DENIED

Cleveland, June 8.—A long array of witnesses took the stand yesterday in defence of Chief of Police Kohler, charged with gross immorality and habitual drunkenness. The evidence was confined to the charge of inebriety, and was largely concerned with the specific count that on the night of the last municipal elections Chief Kohler was drunk.

Hotel employes and professional, business, and newspaper men, all of whom had known the accused for a number of years, were called. They were unanimous in their testimony that they had never seen any signs of intoxication in Chief Kohler.

The hearing will be resumed to-day, when former Mayor Tom L. Johnson is expected to be the principal witness.

Chosen C. O. of New Regiment.

Sidney Porter, who under the name of "O Henry" became known as one of the foremost short story writers in America, took place yesterday in the Church of the Transfiguration, "The little church around the corner," around which the author constructed several of his stories. After the service the body was placed aboard a train, to be carried to the home of his wife at Ashville, N.C., where the burial will take place.

Webb and Mrs. James Wood were each given life membership certificates. The former's was for the Foreign Missionary Society of Canada, and the latter's was for the Home Missionary Society of Canada.

The presentation to Mrs. Webb was made by Mrs. W. D. Scott, and to Mrs. Wood by Mrs. M. R. Kidd.

PROFESSOR GOLDWIN SMITH PASSES PEACEFULLY AWAY

Publicist, Historian and Man of Letters Was Eighty-Seven Years Old and Had Lived to Know all the Great Men in His Time—Never Survived From Fall—Funeral Will be Held on Friday Afternoon—President Schurman's Tribute.

Toronto, June 8.—Peacefully, after having been in a state of only semi-consciousness for several days, Dr. Goldwin Smith, whose pre-eminence in the world of letters made him one of the great outstanding figures of the brilliant Victorian era, passed away at his residence, "The Grange," on Grange avenue, at the head of John street, about 3.20 p.m. yesterday.

The end came in his beloved library in the presence of his physician, Dr. F. Le M. Grasett, his secretary, T. Arnold Haultain, and John Chinn, for many years the family butler and a trusted household dependent. Immediately upon the announcement being made the flags on the civic buildings were placed at half-mast.

The death of the venerable "Sage of the Grange" is more or less directly attributable to the accident which befell him on Feb. 2 last when he slipped on the stairway in his home, sustaining a fracture of the right thigh. At the time, fatal results were feared, but, with the wonderful vitality with which he was endowed, he rallied and appeared to have passed the point of immediate danger. According to Dr. Grasett, he was doing well until Wednesday of last week,

"I think he may have taken a chill," said Dr. Grasett. "He began to fail, and then began to lose strength rapidly, like an old man would. We knew that death was inevitable."

Dr. Smith was removed to his library about six weeks ago. He was then apparently convalescent, and it was believed the change to the big airy apartment would be beneficial.

The invalid enjoyed being wheeled about the beautiful grounds for which the Grange is famed. Three weeks ago, on a sunshiny Monday, he was given his last outing.

"He was always very anxious that the end should come," said Dr. Grasett. "He was, however, always quite cheerful while consciousness lasted, but since Sunday morning he was practically in a condition of unconsciousness ,and I don't think he knew anybody at all."

Dr. Goldwin Smith had no very near relatives. Mrs. Col. William O'Brien, Shanty Bay, is a cousin. A nephew, Fraser Homer Dixon, of Winnipeg, is now on his way to Toronto. Mrs. Berger, a niece, is on the Atlantic to visit friends in England. When she left her uncle was improving in health and no immediate danger seemed to threaten. Mrs. Homer Dixon and George R. Kirkpatrick, Toronto, are also related. Mrs. Dixon was a visitor at the Grange last night.

Mr. Haultain, for eighteen years secretary to Dr. Smith, said that the latter left no instructions concerning the funeral, beyond that he desired to be buried in the plot at St. James' Cemetery where his wife lies. Mr. Haultain said that while details of the arrangements had not yet been considered, the funeral would take place from the Grange on Friday afternoon at 2.30 p.m. It will be conducted by Rev. W. Harris Wallace, pastor of Beverley street Baptist Church, and Rev. Robert J. Moore, vicar of St. George's Church.

Mr. Haultain said last night that he believed arrangements would be made whereby anyone desiring to view the remains would be enabled to do so. The funeral itself, he thought, would be semi-private, but members of the City Council, and of public bodies would be welcomed.

Asked concerning the statement several years ago that the professor had dedicated his brain to Cornell University, Mr. Haultain said, "There is an enthusiastic professor of anatomy, Burt G. Wilder, there. He has written much on the subject and is particularly interested in the subject of comparative craniology. He said to Dr. Smith once half seriously and half jocosely, that he would like to have his brain so dedicated and the professor replied in the same vein, 'You may if you like.' I think that the professor thought better of it afterwards. He left no instructions, and so nothing will be done in this respect."

Goldwin Smith was born on August 13, 1823, at Reading, in Berkshire, England, where his father, Richard Smith, was a practicing physician of high standing and of ample fortune. As a child he was conspicuous for the unusual precocity of his understanding and for the remarkable retentivity of his memory. He received his early education at Eton, from whence, in his 19th year, he was transferred to Christ College, Oxford. Not long after his matriculation he was elected a Demy of Magdalen College.

He gained both the Ireland and Hertford scholarships, and the Chancellor's prize for Latin verse. In 1845 he took his baccalaureate degree and was placed in the first class. Two years afterwards he was elected to a fellowship in University College, and for some months he officiated as tutor there. In 1847, at the age of 24, he was called to the Bar of Lincoln's Inn, and took up his abode in London. He never, however, engaged, or attempted to engage, in actual practice as a barrister.

He espoused the Liberal side in politics, and began to contribute to the daily journals, as well as to quarterly and other reviews. Already his scholarship began to attract attention, and in 1850, when Lord John Russell, yielding to the public pressure for university reform, appointed a Royal Commission to report on certain abuses and disabilities at Oxford, Mr Smith consented to act as assistant secretary.

In 1857 the regius professorship of modern history at the University of Oxford became vacant through the resignation of Prof. Vaughan.

The chair was offered to him in the spring of 1858. He entered upon the task with avidity, and for about eight years performed the duties of the position with credit to himself and to the university.

Upon the breaking out of the American civil war, Goldwin Smith arrayed himself on the side of the Federal Government.

In 1863 he published a pamphlet called "Does the Bible Sanction Slavery?" in which the negro question was vigorously discussed.

In 1864 he for the first time crossed the Atlantic and paid a visit to the United States. He was given an enthusiastic welcome by the Union Club, New York, and everywhere received with favor and hospitality as he traveled through the northern States.

Upon his father's death in 1868, Mr. Smith found himself without occupation. The chair of English and constitutional history in the new Cornell University at Ithaca, N.Y., was offered to him, and after some deliberation he accepted it.

In 1871, having exchanged his post for that of a non-resident professor, he removed to Toronto, where he made his home for the rest of his life.

Shortly after his settlement in Toront Mr. Smith was appointed a member of the senate of the University of Toronto, which position he held until 1876.

In 1875 he married Harriet, widow of the late Mr. W. H. Boulton of "The Grange," and made that splendid mansion his home for the rest of his years in this city. Mrs. Smith died in September last year.

SCHURMAN'S TRIBUTE.

President of Cornell Discusses Late Dr. Goldwin Smith.

Ithaca, N.Y., June 8.—In commenting last evening on the death of Goldwin Smith, President Jacob Gould Schurman of Cornell University, said:

"In the death of Goldwin Smith Cornell University loses one of its most devoted friends, its oldest emeritus professor, and the most illustrious scholar who ever sat in its faculty. He came to Cornell University as professor at its opening in the fall of 1868, from the oldest university in the English-speaking world—from Oxford, where, after a distinguished career of scholarship, he had held the regius professorship of history—and his great reputation as a man of letters, an historian, and a publicist, at once reflected lustre upon our new and struggling university.

"Goldwin Smith was the friend of the American Republic. In the dark days of the civil war, when the sympathy of the European nations was against the Union, he was its champion and defender. With John Bright, Cobden, John Stuart Mill and kindred spirits, Goldwin Smith set himself to the task of informing and clarifying public opinion in England on the issues of the civil war; and thanks to that enlightened public opinion, the English Government, in spite of great temptation, maintained a proper official attitude towards the Government of the United States.

"Goldwin Smith was the exponent and exempler of the highest culture of the nineteenth century. His spirit had been nurtured and formed by the best literature of classical antiquity and of modern times. As an historian he strove, like Plato's wise man, to be a spectator of all time and all existence. Thus more easily than most men, he adjusted himself to the changes of the world, which he had surveyed for four score and seven years. Literary man though he was, he welcomed the progress of science and willingly accepted its general theoretical results."

ITALY WILL BE GIVEN PREFERENCE

Ottawa, June 8.—The Dominion Government has concluded a trade treaty with Italy, which will likely be signed in a couple of days. It is expected that the conclusion of a trade treaty with Belgium will also be announced in a few days, while there also is a possibility of Holland being added to the list.

The new treaty with Italy is in some respects practically the same as the Franco-Canadian agreement. It is understood that Italy is admitted to the [illegible] treatment of the Canadian intermediate tariff as regards certain articles, chiefly silks. The general effect of the intermediate tariff is to admit goods into this country at a rate about two and a half per cent. higher than the British preferential tariff.

Overtures have been made to Canada by the Italian and Belgian Governments, as the result of the accordance to France of better rates than under the general tariff.

The new agreement with Italy will go into effect immediately. The exact terms have not yet been made public, but it is understood that Canada will receive the same benefits as are obtained under the Franco-Canadian treaty.

Photograph Marriage.

Vancouver, June 8.—The first "photograph" marriage ever contracted by a Japanese resident in British Columbia with a Japanese woman living in Japan, was legalized by an orthodox ceremony at the detention shed on the C.P.R. wharf yesterday. A marriage ceremony, recognized by the law of Canada, was insisted upon by the federal immigration authorities before they would permit the woman to land in Vancouver. By this ceremony the woman is assured of legal status in Canada.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Magistrate O'Keefe, discussing yesterday the question of dealing with habitual drunkards, suggested that a home for inebriates was a necessity in Ottawa.

Sir Ernest Shackleton visited Ottawa yesterday, but refused to state whether he would accompany Earl Grey on his [illegible] or not. He will leave for England at the end of this week.

The doom of three murderers was pronounced yesterday in New York in the cases of Carl Loose, Guiseppe Gambaro and William Gilbert. Loose and Gambaro will be electrocuted in Sing Sing Prison and Gilbert at Auburn.

Mrs. William Sills' six-year-old son at Oswego, N.Y., yesterday picked up an old revolver that had not been used since last Fourth of July, playfully pointed it at his mother. The weapon went off and inflicted a fatal wound.

William M. Davis, C.E., who has been Berlin's capable and successful town engineer for over eleven years, has accepted the position of city engineer of Prince Rupert, B.C. He expects to assume his new duties about the first of August.

Five children, of ages from 9 years to eighteen months, were taken in Brantford yesterday from A. Breckenridge, a Millgrove nomad, who has been traveling the country as a scissors grinder. The children were in a deplorable condition.

Fire did $75,000 damage in the business section of Mount Savage, Md.

BYE-ELECTIONS IN ALBERTA

Edmonton, June 8.—Writs were issued for bye-elections yesterday in Vermillion, Medicine Hat and Lethbridge district. Premier Sifton will run in Vermillion, former Judge Mitchell in Medicine Hat and S. J. McLean in Lethbridge district. Nominations will take place on Wednesday, June 22, and the elections on Wednesday, June 29.

Arch. Campbell, member for Vermillion, has resigned in favor of the Premier, who will probably be elected by acclamation. Hon. C. R. Mitchell, the new Minister of Education and Attorney-General, will have opposition in Medicine Hat, his brother-in-law having been nominated by the Conservatives. Hon. J. A. McLean, Provincial Secretary, will be elected by acclamation.

Caught In Cog Wheel.

Deseronto, June 8.—John Tait, an oiler, employed by the Rathbun Co., met with a very painful accident yesterday. He was oiling a shaft, when his clothes caught on a cog wheel and he was whirled around twice, his body and head hiting beams that were above the shaft. His clothes were torn off and he fell headfirst to the ground, about fifteen feet below the shaft. He was unconscious when picked up and one leg was broken. The doctors expect him to recover.

Killed In Machinery.

Collingwood, June 8.—John McCort was instantly killed here yesterday morning about 10 o'clock, while working at a wire fence machine in the Imperial Steel & Wire Co.'s works. McCort, who is about 27 years of age, has been employed at the wire works for five years. Screams for "help" brought men to his aid, but they could not do anything till the whole plant was shut down.

SOUTHERN ITALY ALARMED BY SEISMIC TREMORS

Further Particulars Regarding Earthquake — Serious Shocks in Vicinity of Mount Vulture—Several Hundred May Have Been Killed.

Rome, June 8.—Great apprehension has been caused again by seismic disturbances, official reports showing that the zone affected by earthquake shocks yesterday is a vast one, embracing practically the whole of Southern Italy, as well as a portion of Tuscany and Venetia, to the north.

But the district where serious shocks occurred extends only about fifty miles about Mount Vulture, an extinct volcano near the Town of Calitri, in the Province of Avelling. Some of the reports estimate the dead at fifty and the injured at several hundred.

It is feared that there are many buried in the ruins of the houses which were thrown down in Calitri, while great damage was done at other places, with doubtless a considerable loss of life.

The Government has taken hold of the situation with promptitude, and although the earthquake occurred during the night, it was not long before the military and civil authorities were hard at work.

The King decided to leave immediately for the district. He intended to go alone, but Queen Helena insisted upon accompanying him, saying: "My presence is necessary at all festivities, it must not lack where the people die and weep. In the south Italians suffer; therefore, I must go. It is my place as a woman and a mother."

While the south has been afflicted by an earthquake, the vast region of Sardinia, the largest island in the Mediterranean after Sicily, was ravaged yesterday by a violent cyclone. The districts of Lanusei, Tortoli, Ilbone, Irlini and Jerzu have been devastated and the crops, vineyards and cattle destroyed. It is believed that many shepherds have followed the fate of their flocks. The damage in Sardinia is estimated at $2,000,000.

PATENT RECIPES USELESS

Roosevelt Delivers Romanes Lecture and Discusses Government.

Oxford, Eng., June 8.—Former President Roosevelt was the guest of Oxford yesterday. He delivered the Romanes lecture at the University of Oxford and the university conferred upon him the honorary degree of doctor of civil law.

Mr. Roosevelt's subject was "Biological analogies in history."

"You can belong to a nation," he said, "which possess the greatest empire upon which the sun has ever shone. I belong to a nation which is trying, on a scale hitherto unexampled, to work out the problems of government for, of and by the people, while at the same time doing the international duty of a great power. But there are certain problems which both of us have to solve, and as to which our standards should be the same.

"The problems that arise are of well-nigh inconceivable difficulty. They cannot be solved by the foolish sentimentality of stay-at-home people with little patent recipes, and those cut-and-dried theories of the political nursery which have such limited applicability amid the crash of element forces. Neither can they be solved by the raw brutality of the men who, whether at home or on the rough frontier of civilization, adopt might as the only standard of right in dealing with other men, and treat alien races only as subjects for exploitation.

"It would be foolish, indeed, to pay heed to the unwise persons who desire disarmament to be begun by the very peoples who, of all others, should not be left helpless before any possible foe. But we must reprobate quite as strongly both the leaders and the peoples who practise, or encourage, or condone aggression and iniquity by the strong at the expense of the weak. We should tolerate lawlessness and wickedness neither by the weak nor by the strong; and both weak and strong we should in return treat with unscrupulous fairness."

Important Practice

The 57th Regiment Band will practice to-night in the band hall, Simcoe street. The hour is eight, and every member is requested to turn out on time.

NEW SERVICE BY WATER LILY

From Peterborough to all Points at Stoney Lake and Return—Connections With all Trains

As noted in yesterday's issue of the Review, the steamer Water Lily commences [illegible] service on Monday, June 13th. The steamer has been repainted, refurnished and put in first-class shape by the Otonabee Navigation Company and will be in charge of Capt. W. Copperwaith. Engineer Dunn, of Owen Sound, a man of wide experience, and who is well-known in marine circles, will be on duty at the engines.

The Water Lily will leave the Wolf street wharf at one o'clock, so that passengers on the C.P.R. from Toronto will have plenty of time to make connections with the boat. She will call at all points from here to Crowe's Landing, arriving there at 7.30 p.m. Returning she will leave Mount Julian at 7 a.m. arriving at Peterborough at 12.30 p.m. Passengers can connect with C.P.R. for Toronto, Buffalo, Detroit, London and Chicago and with G.T.R. for Belleville, Kingston, Brockville and all points east. Passengers so desiring may connect with O. N. C. steamer Maid-A-Vale at Juniper Island at 8 a.m. each day for Bobcaygeon, connecting with C.P.R. for all points east and west.

The conveniences which the new service offers can readily be seen and prospective passengers are assured of every consideration due them by those in charge.

ORDERED TO LEAVE THE CITY

Sorry Plight of Thomas Hoyland, But He Has Brought it on Himself

Thomas Hoyland is endeavoring to go through this life with a big handicap. He is addicted to the use of liquor and this was plainly written across his features when he appeared in the police court this morning charged with vagrancy.

He has relatives in the city, but his habits are such that they, reluctantly, refuse to take care of him.

He has spent some time at the Protestant Home, but he had not conducted himself as a ward of that institution should.

The Charity Board does not feel in duty bound to carry Hoyland on its list. He was some time ago given transportation to Kamloops, B.C., but did not stay there.

Magistrate Dumble ordered him to leave the city within twenty-four hours.

DISREGARDED RULE OF SCHOOL

Central School Pupil Who Met With Accident Should Not Have Climbed on Fence

Two accounts, one from the Nicholls Hospital and the other from Dr. Morgan, were presented to the Board of Education last evening, in connection with the injuries which a pupil of the Central school, by name Ashcroft, received. The pupil was injured about the face through an accident which befel him when he disregarded one of the rules of the school and climbed on a fence.

The majority of the members felt that the Board should not be held liable for the accounts. On motion of Messrs. John Crane and Dr. Burnham the accounts were referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. D. W. Dumble held that if the fence was not in proper repair the Board should assume the responsibility.

A REALISTIC LECTURE ON "BEN HUR"

The second lecture by Prof. Turner, of Boston, in St. Alphonse's Lyceum, was even more interesting than that on the previous night.

Mr. Turner spoke to a crowded house on the life of Ben Hur. The limelight views which go with this lecture, are very realistic, and portray the costumes [illegible] so vividly that the spectator is almost transported back to the time and scene of the story.

The story of Ben Hur is very old, and is familiar to all. A brief synopsis, however, may not be untimely.

Ben Hur, a Jewish youth of noble birth and culture, becomes the enemy of his former boyhood friend, Messala. About this time the birth of Christ is announced by Maji. Messala is instrumental in having Ben Hur's mother and sister imprisoned.

Ben Hur vows vengeance, and after various exciting times, he defeats his old enemy in the celebrated chariot race.

Ben Hur finally discovers his mother and sister, who have been imprisoned, and have contracted leprosy. They are healed by the Saviour and the family is finally reunited. Messala is killed by his wife. Ben Hur marries Esther, the daughter of his late father's manager.

The final scene, that of the crucifixion of Christ, is very thrilling and pathetic.

Mr. Turner is a very pleasing lecturer, and at the close of the meeting a vote of thanks to him was tendered.

This afternoon the lecture is being repeated for the benefit of those who were unable to hear it on Tuesday.

The Daily Review

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 8, 1910.

THE RETIRING PRINCIPAL

Mr. William Smith has resigned his position as principal of Central school. His farewell is more than usually impressive, as Mr. Smith has taught for thirty years. Thirty years, that is a long time. Many the youth has passed from his room to face that other school—the world. Some have made failure of life, many others success, and some are gone to the unknown. But all who live will remember the principal who has now given notice that he will cease from active work and the thoughts will be kindly ones. But he will never forget his pupils, nor will they forget him.

"The ties we form in childhood
Cling through our later years,
No distance parts true friendship,
Nor time its freshness sears.
And when we hear some name extolled
For deeds of merit full,
With what great joy and pride we say;
'He shared my desk at school.'"

School days are happy times, and Mr. Smith's memories will be pleasant ones.

THE CONVENTION

One of the most important conventions in Canada in point of future possibilities is the eleventh conference of Canadian Charities and Correction, which will meet at Guelph on June 22nd to 24th next. Among the questions to be discussed are the saving of the child.

In Peterborough, this week, the child problem is being dealt with at the Anglican Sunday school convention.

It is all very well for the church universal to say to the child, "Now, be a good little boy and go to Sunday school," and then stay at home themselves, for though the child goes, he thinks a lot. As the years go by and the little Lord Fauntleroy suits are discarded, and the skirts become longer, he notices that there is a crowd of youngsters on the street corners on Sunday afternoon, and she in the lengthening skirt observes that girls about her age are enjoying a Sunday afternoon parade. Then the parents wonder why it is that they are losing interest in the school. They reason with them and urge them to go, but they don't go themselves. Can the child be blamed? Children are ever imitators. Dad smokes, and is much surprised when he sees his boy of tender years rolling up leaves, to try and imitate him. The mother scolds, and the eldest daughter shakes the baby, and calls it a little brat. The father curses, and so does the son, as soon as he gets outside. The mother is a gossip and a gadabout. What can you expect from the daughter?

Conventions are excellent and very necessary, but the convention of two, [illegible] are the best and most lasting, and leave the indelible imprint on the face and actions of the youth through life.

A GREAT MAN GONE

Dr. Goldwin Smith is dead, and the world has lost one whose pen made music of its English. Most men see no further than their home town, some look over their province, and a few view the nation. Goldwin Smith saw the world as it passed in panorama before him. He was an historian of wonderful ability, of marvellous mind. He was a great logician, a friend of Gladstone's.

Tutor to the late king, acquainted with the greatest minds of the age, knowing well princes and philosophers, he was as unassuming and approachable as a child. He might have been a lord, but he refused the title.

Before the fall which hastened his death, Dr. Smith might have been seen in his pew in the Beverley street Baptist church in Toronto, each Sunday morning.

Revered of men he did not chose the seats of the mighty. Goldwin Smith was great and he will be long remembered.

WHERE WILL IT END

The Cunard Company are going to build a fifty thousand ton liner gross register. This great ship is built for capacity rather than for speed. To those who have never seen a liner, or who have not explored its resources, this size vessel with its tonnage will be incomprehensible.

The Otonabee, that excursion craft that steams in and out of Peterborough is just 128 tons. It would take a fleet of four hundred such boats as the Otonabee to make up a boat like the one that the Cunard Company are going to build.

The world is rushing on. They build now deep and high. Yet in far off Egypt stand the Pyramids, silent sentinels in the sands. They were built in the dim long ago, but they are there to-day. They have awed the Bedouin, and inspired the warrior and the poet. Napoleon uttered his immortal phrase before them, and they will stand long after he is forgotten, and the world has solved much that is now mystery to them.

The Almighty meant that they should stand, and they are standing.

NEARLY AS VILE

Some degenerate broke into the Y. M.C.A. building at Owen Sound and cut the furniture and rugs, hacking promiscuously with a knife. They destroyed the trophies won, and smashed the piano keys, and left. This fellow should be horsewhipped, not because it is the Y.M.C.A., but because of the meanness of the outrage. Another rascal entered into a church in Montreal and ate the Host. The Almighty let him live, but be, too, should have been flogged and imprisoned. A brute in clothes near Galt maimed and cut cattle in the fields. This fellow should be beaten also. But the furniture can be fixed and piano keys mended, and the Host replaced, while the wounds on the cattle will heal. Some strange devilish blood must be in a man's veins to make him commit crimes like these, and those who do these things are nearly as vile as the man or woman who will spread a scandal unfounded, and try and ruin an hitherto good name.

FUR TRADE TRAGEDIES

PROFITS WERE IMMENSE, BUT SO WERE DANGERS.

Unfriendly Indians Were the Greatest Peril of the Fur Traders of a Century Ago—Explorers Were Scholars and Scientists, But the Traders Were Out For Plunder, and Their Crimes Were Many and Ruthless.

In the early days great profits accrued from this fur-trade. During the three years following 1784, and not including the cargoes secured by the operations of Capt. Mears, 5,800 otter skins, valued at $160,700, were taken on the British Columbia coast and sold in China. From 1799 to 1802 inclusive, 48,500 skins were secured, which at an average of $30 a skin, represented a value of one and a half million dollars. One celebrated trader named Sturgis, states that in a single voyage he had collected 6,000 skins, and that in a single day he had purchased 560 of prime quality. Where such enormous profits could be made, no wonder the trade was prosecuted with vigor and, it must be said, often without scruples or regard for the rights of the natives.

Many of these early fur-traders were men of very different stamp from the explorers who had preceded them. The latter, representing for the most part, the Government of Great Britain, came in search of geographical knowledge. They were not tempted to wrong or cruelty by greed. They found on the whole the natives peaceably inclined, and they left them friends. The one object of the traders was to secure cargoes, and in securing them the difference between right and wrong was often overlooked. Liquor was supplied the natives and the inevitable debauchery followed. Often the hostility of the natives was roused and tragedies were enacted, as dark and bloody as any that ever formed the object of sea-faring tales. The recital of the chief circumstances of a few will indicate the character of those early years of the fur-trade on our Pacific coast.

It will be remembered that when the Spaniards withdrew from this coast and left it to Great Britain, the early port of Nootka, on the western coast of Vancouver Island, was taken possession of by the native chief Maquinna. In 1802 the port was visited by the ship Manchester of Philadelphia, having on board a rich cargo for barter with the natives. Seven of the crew deserting, placed themselves under Maquinna's protection. Shortly afterwards they attempted to desert to another chief, but were captured and put to death with great cruelty.

Another remarkable tragedy of those early rough, and often lawless days of the Pacific coast fur trade was that of the ship Tonquin, which took place at Clayoquot Sound, on the southwestern coast of Vancouver Island. The Tonquin sailed from New York in September, 1810, with supplies for John Jacob Astor's famous trading post, Astoria, on the Columbia river. In the following March the Tonquin reached Astoria, and having discharged the part of her cargo destined for that port sailed northward to Clayoquot Sound, whose shores were inhabited by a powerful tribe of savages, known as the Wahen-ishes. Captain Thorn, a hard, tyrannical, obstinate man, commanded the Tonquin, and for his first officer, he had Alex. Mackay, who is will be remembered, had accompanied Alex. Mackenzie on his memorable trip across Western Canada, through the Rocky Mountains and down to the Pacific Coast.

No sooner had the Tonquin anchored off Clayoquot than natives in canoes came out to her in large numbers. They were allowed on board, and in the most friendly manner proceeded to barter furs for merchandise. But the apparent friendship was feigned, as Captain Thorn was informed by a native who had been engaged as interpreter. He told Thorn that the tribe was ill-disposed and intended attacking the ship on the following day. Thorn's obstinacy proved his ruin, for he refused to take advantage of the interpreter's warning. Of the entire crew not one man escaped and the story of the massacre was carried to Astoria by the interpreter two years later.

Following the early explorations of British Columbia, and especially explorations carried on along the coast, comes the fur-trading period, which extended over many years, and in which adventurous and often lawless men were engaged. Great profits were made in this trade, for the fur-bearing animals were plentiful and their pelts, obtained in barter at low prices from the natives, found a ready and exceeding lucrative market both in China and Europe. With good luck the fur-traders soon accumulated fortunes.

The greater part of these furs was obtained from the sea-otter, a powerful animals, sometimes four feet in length and weighing ninety younds. In describing this animal a trader of those early days wrote: "A full grown prime (pelt), which has been stretched before drying, is about five feet long, and twenty-four to thirty inches wide, covered with a very fine fur, about three-fourths of an inch in length, having a rich jet black, glossy surface, and exhibiting a silver color when blown open. Those are esteemed the finest which have some white hairs interspersed and scattered over the whole surface, and a perfectly white head. . . Otters are sometimes seen many leagues from land, sleeping on their backs on the surface of the water, with their young ones reclining on their breasts. The cub are incapable of swimming until they are several months old. The dam will not leave her young ones in the moment of danger, and, therefore, shares their fate. . . . They are unable to remain under water longer than two minutes."

To-day the sea-otter has almost entirely disappeared from the coast of British Columbia. Writing in 1894, Alex. Begg, in his interesting history of the Pacific Coast Province says: "The number now caught on the coast is very limited."

H. R. Lyon, a Minneapolis millionaire, is being held on a charge of smuggling.

Chosen Too Young.

London, June 8.—Dr. Parkin, interviewed at Cape Town regarding the failure of the Rhodes scholars [illegible] South Africa, said that the fault did not lie in the men themselves, but in the manner of selection. THE WIDOW PEPPER'S TACTICS.

They Brought Quick Results In Two Love Affairs.

By HARRIET WHITNEY.

It was 7 o'clock Monday morning, and the smoke of Louizy Cottonwood's wash fire in the back yard was threading its blue haze into the fresh, early air.

Louizy's father, Lyman Cottonwood, striking out cross lots, lagged a little while he started his after breakfast cob pipe. His gaze dwelt ruminatively upon the big ash hopper a few moments, then traveled back to the form of his daughter just appearing from the smokehouse with a tub in her arms.

"Louizy!"

The young woman turned her head around, set her tub upon a backless chair and came forward, her low, flat shoes patting softly over the short "goose grass." Her figure looked skimp in its blue calico wrapping gown; her locks were hempy in color and not too plentiful; she had gathered them up high and twisted them so tightly that the outer corners of her eyes were drawn upward like those of a Chinese woman.

"Louizy," said her father, leaning an elbow on a corner of the hopper, "I was goin' to tell you an' furgot; the Widder Pepper's a-comin' up today fer a basket of windfall Spy apples to make dumplin's, an' I gotter be at Harris' all day helpin' thrash. You show 'er where the good ones is at, an' don't you sass 'er none. You understand?"

"I ain't carin' how many Spy apples she gathers. Reckon apples wasn't the only thing you an' her was settlin' about yes'day evenin'."

"Wull"—Lyman looked off slantwise across the hopper—"I got 'er penned up es clost es you ever kin pen a woman. The darned contrary birds won't never give you a square out 'yes' tell after the preacher's sent fer. But you kin count on havin' a stepma before pumpkins is ripe."

"I wouldn't think, then, paw"—Louizy's voice became mildly reproachful—"seein' how happy you're a-goin' to be, you'd begrutch me—an'—an'—Sam"—

"Louizy Jane Cottonwood, how many times I gotter tell you that's diffrunt? Now, "listen yere"—he ticked off his points with the forefinger of his right hand in the spread palm of the left—"I told you the whut fors an' why sos yes'day, an' that's nuff said. An' now listen at this: Ef I don't find Sam Dorkins at Harris' thrashin' today it's a sign he's over yere, an' ef he is you'll see me back, an' you'll see me bounce Sam over the fence into the bresh quick enough to jolt his ears crooked. Now, mind whut I've told you."

Louizy shed so many tears over her wash that morning that when the fat little Widow Pepper came with her basket she cast many sharply inquisitive glances at the red rings of the forlorn maiden's eyes.

"Looky here, Louizy Cottonwood," said she at length as the two trudged up to the orchard, "you ain't been actin' the baby 'cause your paw wants to marry ag'in, hev you?"

Louizy shook her head.

"I wouldn't care a speck if he married tomorrow if he'd have the manners to leave me an' Sam Dorkins alone."

"Humph!" said the widow. "What's he layin' up against Sam?"

"Nothin' partickler, but he 'lows there's no sense of me a-marryin' fer half a dozen years er so. He's countin' on takin' a lot of city folks to board of summers after you an' him air married, an' he says two women 'll be needed to cook fer 'em."

"Well, I say!" Mrs. Phebe Pepper brought the exclamation out with a chop. Then she stopped in the path and laughed with a heartiness that threatened to break her apron strings. Mrs. Pepper was short and wide, and her little round, dark face expressed a mixture of good nature, shrewdness and obstinacy.

"He's a curious old plant, your paw is," said she, "but I've jist got this to say: Ef any man o' mine ever takes any summer boarders he'll do the cookin' er else he'll hire it done."

Louizy shook her head dissentingly.

"You'll think different when paw gets you."

"He ain't got me yit," said the widow cheerfully. "Looky here, Louizy, how old air you?"

"Thirty - three," confessed Louizy, with a slight blush.

"The law me! An' you're scared to marry without your paw says you kin?"

The blush widened, taking in Louizy's ears.

"You don't know paw," said she dismally.

"Couldn't more than kill you, could he?"

"Some folks' tongues is worse than killin'."

The widow trudged forward in silent self communion, which lasted until they reached the Northern Spy apple tree. Louizy began to fill the basket with the bright streaked windfalls, but Mrs. Pepper plumped herself down comfortably into the clover.

"Sam Dorkins is goin' on forty," said she meditatively. "He's a sight nigher to my age than yours."

"Oh, I was jest a-thinkin'," the latter observed carelessly, biting juicily into a big apple. "Me an' Sam was allers good friends. Better stop now, Louizy. That's many es I kin pack."

* * * * * * *

Lyman Cottonwood was in the narrow lane between his turnip field and his tobacco patch stopping a gap in the fence when a thudding of feet on the mellow earth drew his attention. A broad shouldered fellow was swinging briskly along with an ax on his shoulder.

"Hello, Unc' Lyme!" he hailed cheerfully.

"Here, you, Sam Dorkins!" Lyman barred his way with belligerent elbows. "This yere lane's a private one, ef you want to know it, an' you's gotter keep 'way from Louizy Cottonwood whether you want to know it er not."

"I ain't a-goin' to tote the lane off with me, ner Louizy either. I wasn't aimin' to stop yere. Didn't know es I'd spile the lane goin' through it to the Widder Pepper's."

"Widder Pepper's!" bawled Lyman frantically. "Whut business you goin' anywhere nigh the Widder Pepper?"

"Come, now, Uncle Lyme," grinned Sam; "don't hev a fit. Reckon I kin go chop a little stove wood fer a good lookin' widder without you floppin' up like a skyrocket. I've knowed the widder a-many a year."

"I don't care a con taked turnip seed whut you've knowed," foamed Lyman. "The widder kin git stove wood without you a-cuttin' it. You take an' let that widder alone er you shuck off yer coat an' watch out fer me."

"Sure now," returned Sam, "you know I'm a younger man 'n you, Uncle Lyme. Better not be too biggoty. You may think you're the only speckled bean in the hill, but widders is notionated an' kin fly about t'other way es easy es a flapjack. An' the country's free, es I've heard say. There's no statute that says two men shan't spark one widder, an' I reckon my chances is good es yourn ef I choose to stake 'em right hearty. You kin fence me off from Louizy, but you can't fence me off from the widder."

"I kin send you flyin' over them rails," declared Lyman wrathfully.

"Well, now, I ain't right shore it 'd be good policy to tackle the job," said Sam argumentatively. "You got right smart of rheumatiz, ye know, Uncle Lyme. [illegible] over an' ye mightn't. Now, I'll tell you what. The widder's in need of stove wood. I shall go there an' cut it fer her an' stay to supper 'r else I'll loan you my ax an' leave you go cut the wood fer her, an' I'll go in an' talk to Louizy a spell. Which'll it be?"

Lyman leaned against the rail fence, his brain whizzing with new battery ideas. The desirability of the widow had increased tenfold since this bold rival had proclaimed himself so determinedly. What was Louizy in comparison? The ideas came to a focus. He stepped forward resolutely.

"Han' over the ax," he said briefly, "an' go 'long in. Louizy's ironin'. You an' her kin be es big fools es you want."

When Mrs. Phebe Pepper, looking from her doorway, saw Mr. Lyman Cottonwood coming up the walk with Sam's ax on his shoulder her black eyes sparkled with fun.

"I 'lowed that would fetch Lyme ef Sam worked it all right," she said to herself, with a smothered chuckle, "an' mighty lucky thing fer Louizy Cottonwood her future stepmaw's got a leetle grain o' gumption, seein' Louizy don't know no more 'n a goslin' how to tend to her own love affairs."

Good Form

Tact is the highest type of good form, and it is a virtue that only needs exercising to become a fixed habit.

A woman of tact is one who feels that the story told to hurt your feelings is essentially bad form and inconsiderate of the feelings of others.

A woman of tact is the one who is courteous to old people, who laughs with the young and who makes herself agreeable to all women in all conditions of life.

A woman of tact is one who makes her good morning a pleasant greeting, her visit a bright spot in the day and her goodby a hope that she may come again.

A woman of tact is one who does not gauge people by their clothes or their riches, but who condemns bad manners.

A veritable woman of tact is the best type of a Christian, for her very consideration makes other women long to imitate her. Remember that to do your work as a woman of tact means more than speaking from platform or assumed elevation.

A woman of tact is one who is courteous under all circumstances and in every condition in which she may be placed. She is the woman who can receive the unwelcome guest with a smile so bright and a handshake so cordial that in trying to make the welcome seem real it becomes so.

A woman of tact is one whose love for humanity is second only in her life's devotion and whose watchword is unselfishness in thought and action.

By making self last it finally becomes natural to have it so.

The Chance Acquaintance.

The question is often asked about recognizing the man or woman whom unconventionality has allowed one to meet. There can be no set rule. For instance, a man may have rendered some great assistance in an accident or have protected you from rudeness in public. In this case it would be impossible to pass such a chance acquaintance without a civil nod or a smile of recognition should you happen to meet him again. But it must be remembered that in all cases an introduction is in order before friendship can begin.

Always remember that you do not know the mere acquaintance. Be cautious and endeavor to swing the conversation into impersonal channels. Men often laugh at the foolish girl who pours out her childish enthusiasms into their unsympathetic ears. Never talk or act in such a way as will cause shame or regret in the calm consideration of the next day.

Relation-in-law Duties.

When a girl marries it is the duty of her husband's family to give at least one reception in her honor, that she may meet their friends and be made welcome.

And it should not be forgotten that, even if the choice is what may be termed distasteful to his family, a man marries to suit himself, and it is a reflection upon all of them if they do not try to make the best of the matter and prevent remarks that are not complimentary. Such a course is far the more dignified for a mother and sisters of the man to take, and at the earliest opportunity it is proper to give a reception, inviting personal friends to meet the new relation-in-law.

Usually such an affair is held at night, in order that the men of those families invited may be present. Then cards are issued in the name of the father and mother of the bridegroom.

The Letter of Introduction.

When one gives a letter of introduction to any one it is always safest and best to write privately in advance of the letter of presentation, giving the person to whom the letter is addressed some idea of the social position, tastes, etc., of the bearer of the note or card.

My Dear Mrs. Black—It gives me the greatest pleasure to present to you Miss R. (Mrs. R. or Mr. R.). She has been a friend of mine for a number of years, and whatever you can do for her during her stay in —— I will consider a favor conferred upon me personally.

Then may follow a few remarks on subjects of common interest.

If one does not wish to write a note the words "Introducing Miss R." may be written across the top of one's visiting card.

Little Points of Etiquette.

It is courteous to shake hands with a guest in your own house, and many hostesses repeat the handshaking when he leaves.

It is only necessary to bow an acknowledgement of an introduction, though shaking hands is cordial and not considered old fashioned, as formerly.

A girl or young woman should rise when an older woman enters the room and remain standing until she is seated. It is customary to rise to receive a guest, whether it be man or woman.

Cookery Points

Rhubarb is at its best at this time of the year, and this product of the garden has many uses not only for the table, but for medicinal purposes, says Marion Neil Harris. The part used the most is the foot stalk of the leaves. The roots take up many acids and are astringent; hence the value of the dried roots as a medicine. Rhubarb is a powerful zest giver. When merely placed in the mouth and left unmasticated there is a rush of the saliva from the glands to deal with the quantity of acid in the mouth. This is excellent in cases where the digestive fluids need stimulation. Any food taken will be absorbed through the pouring out of digestive fluids. Though a vegetable, rhubarb is used in every respect as a fruit. Eaten stewed, so that the acids are tart in it, the stalk acts as a foe to gout and to rheumatism, for it neutralizes the uric acid that causes these things. It is also a specific for the complexion. There are many ways of preparing it for the table, and the following recipes ought to be pleasing:

Rhubarb Sponge.

Line a mold with slices of sponge cake, pressed firmly around the inside. Fill up the mold with stewed rhubarb, not too moist, sprinkle with sugar, covering the top with more slices of cake, cover with a plate and press down with a weight for a few hours, when the juice of the rhubarb will be absorbed by the cake. Turn out very carefully, decorate with little pieces of angelica and serve with a nice custard.

Compote of Rhubarb.

Wipe the rhubarb with a damp cloth and cut it into lengths of four or five inches. Put into a saucepan five pounds of sugar with two pints of water. Bring quickly to boiling point and skim, and then boil till the sirup is quite thick. Then add the rhubarb and simmer gently till soft. Lift each length carefully and lay it on a glass dish. Then boil the sirup a few minutes longer. Let it cool. Then add a few drops of red coloring and pour over the rhubarb. Serve with cream and lady fingers.

"Tried and True Layer Cake."

Cream one and three-quarter cups of sugar with one-half cup of butter, add three eggs and beat the batter hard. Stir in a cup of sour milk into which a generous pinch of baking soda has been beaten. Last of all, whip in lightly three cups of flour that has been sifted with two teaspoonsful of baking powder. Bake in three layers and put together with any kind of icing or filling.

NASAL CATARRH

Wm. Madill Sells the Great Remedy That Cured B. W. Squires

Here is a very simple yet wholly sincere statement of a Norwood, Ont., man who was cured by using Hyomei—the no cure no pay remedy for catarrh, asthma, hay fever, croup, coughs and colds.

"I feel that I can conscientiously recommend Hyomei for the reason that I had suffered for years with catarrh and nothing gave me the same relief as Hyomei. There was a constant [illegible] across my eyes were [illegible] constant and at times there was much difficulty in breathing. The glands were swollen, causing a soreness and stiffness in my neck. I cannot speak too highly of Hyomei and there is nothing that will give quicekr relief for catarrh."—B. W. Squires, Norwood, Ont.

Thousands of just such letters are in existence, and thousands more would be but for the desire to avoid publicity.

If you have catarrh, bestire yourself, and drive it out of your system. Kill the germs. You can do that easily if you use Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me.)

It is a dry, antiseptic and very pleasant air, that when inhaled, quickly relives all forms of catarrhal inflammation, stops snuffles, hawking and blowing. The price for a complete outfit, including inhaler, is only $1.00, at Wm. Madill's.

MI-O-NA Cures Dyspepsia.

For every fly killed to-day there will be 1,728,000 fewer flies in July.

Cookies For School Children.

Hungry school children love oatmeal cookies when they are just right. If mealy and dry they will have none of them; if candied, crisp and sweet they are eaten to the last crumb. Here is a recipe:

Cream together smoothly three-quarters of a cup of butter and one cup of brown sugar. Add to this half a cup of cream or milk and two eggs that have had the whites and yolks beaten separately and very stiff. Beat the whole carefully together and then stir in two cups of rolled oats. Beat again vigorously, and then add one cup of well sifted whole wheat flour.

Add a level teaspoonful of soda, one of salt and one each of cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg and a pinch of black pepper. Beat again and then drop from a large spoon on buttered tins and bake in a fairly quick oven.

The Window Shelf.

The housekeeper who has once learned the comfort of a shelf outside her kitchen window will never again be without one. Where there are outside shutters this should be low enough below the sill to enable them to close easily.

The shelf may be just a plain board, wide enough for pots and bowls, or if in an exposed position there should be a two inch rim around the edge.

For occasional use a shallow box nailed to the window in such a way that the inside of the box faces the kitchen is useful to put articles of food in that will overflow the refrigerator. The top and sides of box keep snow, rain and dust from the provisions, yet a low temperature can be maintained. This could not be used with outside shutters.

Matrimony Tarts.

Matrimony tarts is the odd name to an apple dessert of which there are many varieties. This particular apple tart or pudding calls for one dozen apples, a quarter pound of currants picked, washed and dried; two ounces of candied peel chopped fine, a little grated nutmeg, some sifted sugar and puff paste.

Pare, core and quarter the apples. Put them into a saucepan with a little water and stew them to a pulp, stirring frequently. Then add the currants, the chopped peel, sugar to taste and nutmeg.

Line a pudding dish with puff paste; pour the fruit, when it has cooled a little, into it; cover with crust, press the edges together all around, make a hole in the center and bake.

MR. WM. SMITH RESIGNS THIRTY YEARS OF SERVICE

On the Public Schools Teaching Staff—Board of Education Acknowledge His Faithful Performance of Duty—List of Teachers Re-engaged

After thirty years of service on the teaching staff of the Public schools, Mr. Wm. Smith, has found it necessary to resign his position, through illness. Mr. Smith has for many years been principal of the Central school. Not a few of the citizens of Peterborough received some part of their education under his supervision and they, as well as the pupils of to-day, will regret to hear of the step taken by him and will at the same time extend to him their best wishes for his full recovery.

Mr. Smith's resignation was taken up by the Board of Education at the regular meeting held last evening. There were present the chairman, L. M. Hayes, K.C., Dr. Morrison and Dr. Burnham, Col. Miller and Messrs. D. W. Dumble, John Crane, R. Fair, W. H. Hill and H. Adams.

Mr. W. H. Hill in moving "that the inspector be authorized to secure a substitute for the remainder of the the term and that Mr. Smith's salary be paid as usual to the end of the term," said that Mr. Smith was the oldest member of the staff. No man had endeavored to perform his duty to the people and the Board as had Mr. Smith, and he was respected by both. There were hundreds and hundreds of business men and ladies who had received their education at his hands. Col. Miller seconded the motion and the chairman took the opportunity to express his approval of the motion. Mr. Smith had served for many years, and it was only proper that his services should be recognized. He had been a faithful servant.

The Committee on Appointments also recommended in their report that Mr. Smith be granted a gratuity of the amount of one year's salary.

CAN LEARN TRADE NOW

Willie Duncan Said to be Incorrigible, Will be Sent to the Reformatory

Willie Moffat Duncan, a little boy thirteen years of age, appeared before Magistrate Dumble yesterday afternoon.

County Constable Cochrane and Mr. Henry, of the Childrens' Aid Society, both gave evidence that the boy had been in the Shelter some years, the parents, apparently, not being fit to care for him.

When taken to the Shelter the boy was in a filthy state, being covered with vermin from head to foot. His clothing had to be burned.

The father, William Duncan, is earning $2 a day. He said he was willing to give $1.50 a week for the support of the boy, if he was sent to the reformatory, where he would be taught a trade. The mother would like to have the boy remain at home, if he were not incorrigible.

Magistrate Dumble said the boy would be given a chance at the reformatory to learn a good trade, and, accordingly, he will be sent to the Industrial School at Toronto in a couple of days.

The wedding of Miss Lottie J. Davidson and Holland Blair VanEvery was solemnized this afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, 563 Aylmer street. Both young people were unattended, and the ceremony was performed in the presence of only the immediate friends of the contracting parties.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. VanEvery left on the 4.38 C.P.R. train for the States. Mr. and Mrs. VanEvery will reside in York, Penn., where the groom is employed.

We would also ask that your committee be given authority to dispose of the old frame building at this school to the best advantage.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

CLOSING AND RE-OPENING DATES

Inspector Mowat wrote asking the Board to fix the dates for the closing of this term and the re-opening of next term. The communication was referred to the Supervision Committee with power to act.

TROPHIES FOR SCHOOL LEAGUE.

Mr. W. L. C. Richardson, principal of the King Edward school, and secretary of the City School Baseball League, submitted the constitution of same and asked for a donation for trophies for the senior and junior series. The request was referred to the Finance Committee with power to act.

Mr. D. W. Dumble said he liked the idea of the pupils having their games and of them playing together, but did not like the trophy business. It was rather childish. Let them play for the glory and pleasure of winning, said Mr. Dumble.

SOME TOPICS OF MOMENT IN SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK

Were Interestingly Treated at Anglican Sunday School Convention in Session at St. John's Schoolhouse — Practical Means of Improving Methods of Teaching and Organization

At the opening of the afternoon session of the Anglican Sunday school convention at St. John's church, Mr. J. W. Bickle, of Cobourg, introduced the subject of "Leaflets and Lesson Helps."

In an interesting treatment of his topic he pointed out the necessity of the leaflet possessing the qualities of uniformity, expedience and convenience.

In the course of an able paper he showed how a teacher who was a diligent student of these lines could become proficient.

Canon Marsh, of Lindsay, expressed his approval of Mr. Bickle's sentiments.

Rev. Mr. Barber, the secretary of the convention, gave a well reasoned, lucid address on "Catechising."

He dealt with the Sunday schools and their equipment, and with the vitally important position of the teacher in relation to the pupil, as the instructor in God's word.

In catechism teaching it was necessary to awaken the interest, to arouse the mind and direct the light that is in the child. The child's answers to questions, no matter how ridiculous they might be, should never be treated light by the teacher, when the pupil was serious.

THE FONT ROLL.

Mrs. Sheriff, of Port Hope, in her paper on the "Font Roll," which proved a particularly interesting one, stated that she believed the system could be originally attributed to another denomination. To the Anglicans she believed it was an innovation.

For all the church had to boast of it was a wonder that the system of enrolling newly baptized infants was not as old, or nearly as old, as the Sunday school.

The enrolling of little new beings into the church could not but prove good, if in proper hands.

A sincere religious woman and a "joyful mother of children" should have charge of the "Font Roll."

She could be assisted by little children who could take application cards and return with baptismal certificates.

Their visits were mostly welcome and the children brought happiness to each other, and the little visitors were naturally sincere.

Ald. J. J. Turner spoke in a practical way on Bible class organization, and as an example gave his Bible class in St. Luke's church.

Mr. Turner said that a Bible class offered a most fruitful field of success.

An interesting discussion on the matter brought many excellent ideas.

ATHLETICS AND CADET CORPS.

One of the most appreciated addresses of the afternoon was given by Col. Lloyd, of Cobourg, who spoke on athletics, the cadet corps and clubs.

He pointed out as the assets of an officer, his intuitive faculties and a personal knowledge of his subject.

The personal touch was the basis of all successful work in athletics, and cadet corps, and it was necessary, also, to break down all barriers and cultivate an esprit de corps.

A HOME MISSION AGENCY.

In his address on "The Sunday School as a Home Mission Agency," Ven. Archdeacon Warren gave a learned and instructive discourse.

The speaker showed an intimate association with home missions, and gave evidence of the proper spirit that should accentuate the work. He made a strong appeal for the home mission work to be pushed forward to the utmost in the Sunday school.

SECOND SESSION.

The second session opened last night at 7.30 with devotional exercises and the singing of the hymn, "O, God, Our Help is in Ages Past." Rev. Dr. Langfeldt acted as chairman, in the absence of Rev. Canon Allen, of Millbrook, who was unavoidably absent through illness.

A letter from the reverend gentleman was read, in which he expressed his regret at not being able to attend the convention, and he wished the clergy in charge every success.

THE HOME DEPARTMENT.

Rev. C. W. Holdsworth, M. A., of Havelock, addressed the assembly on the subject of the Home Department in connection with Sunday school work.

He said that he considered the city of Peterborough was equipped with a splendid Sunday school system.

Many thought the Home Department was something new, but it was only a renewal of a very old system.

Jesus Christ instructed the old people and the young also.

The Home Department was beneficial to the clergyman who was anxious to know what his parishoners were studying.

It was very important to the speaker's mind that our people whether or not in touch with the clergy, should know the words of God.

No matter how comprehensive our catechism was or how eloquent the make the Bible, the Word of God, intelligible and interesting to the pupils.

There were many Scriptural quotations which were not understood by the young. It should be the work of the Home Department to explain these difficult passages.

The department wasn't to add strength to the church, but it was for the purpose of reaching out in the homes and teaching the Bible.

To organize a Home Department it was essential to have a person go about and have men, women and children join the Bible classes. When the father and mother took an interest in it their children would imitate them. If the clergymen went about seeking members he would find that the canvassing would be a great revelation to him and would show him how his people were in preparation for their judgment.

In his canvassing he would meet many people who would almost discourage him, but as a general rule, out of every ten he approached nine would become members of the class and assist in the Home Department.

Interesting papers on "Graded Schools" and "The Bible and Missions," were read by Ven. Archdeacon Warran and Rev. Mr. Brooks, Grafton.

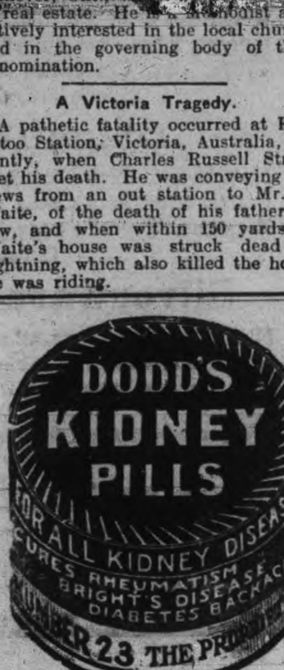
Author of the Miller Bill.

On account of the very general interest aroused throughout the Dominion by the long and hard-fought struggle in the Canadian Parliament over the bill to abolish gambling on the race track, many people who have never met or ever seen the author of the bill, Mr. Henry Horton Miller, M.P., are naturally curious to know what kind of man this is, who has succeeded in putting up such a stiff fight for his measure that the recognized political parties, and even the Ministry itself, have been divided, with a final result that the closest division ever recorded in the Commons was reached, the bill being just defeated by a majority of one, and that although many of the most powerful debaters and strongest party leaders on both sides were against the measure. In personal appearance, Mr. Miller is exactly the type of a man who would be expected to promote such a bill and to fight to the last ditch to secure its passage. Tall, gaunt, rather ungainly in figure and carriage, with a set "dour" face and a heavy, determined-looking jaw, he might pose without make-up for a Cromwellian trooper or a member of the Roundhead Parliament. You cannot hear him speak in Parliament, or engage in five minutes conversation with him, without being convinced that he is a man of cast-steel convictions, and possessed of determination to carry out anything he undertakes to do, if it can be done. He is a good, practical speaker too; not an orator, but a user of plain blunt language which expresses just what he means. The bill was certainly pushed for all it was worth in Mr. Miller's hands, and if he does not bring it up again, and secure its adoption, those who know him well will be surprised. Mr. Miller, who represents South Grey in the House of Commons, is the son of a father of Scotch and American descent brought up in Canada, and of a Canadian mother of Irish descent. Owen Sound was his native place, and he was born in 1861. He lives at Hanover, Ont., where he is a dealer in real estate. He is a Methodist and actively interested in the local church and in the governing body of that denomination.

A Victoria Tragedy.

A pathetic fatality occurred at Kiacatoo Station, Victoria, Australia, recently, when Charles Russell Street met his death. He was conveying the news from an out station to Mr. S. Waite, of the death of his father-in-law, and when within 150 yards of Waite's house was struck dead by lightning, which also killed the horse he was riding.



GOOD IN SPOTS.

One Man Who Discovered That War Was Not Wholly Bad.

Lem Jackson loved to loaf. He lived in the mountains not far from Greenville, Tenn., with his wife and a large brood of children. Lem had a "houn' dawg" that he set great store by, and he spent most of his time lounging in a runway waiting to shoot a deer driven in by old Bose or sprawling on the bank of a stream fishing. In that way he was a good provider after a fashion, but not all the urging, scolding, nagging and broomsticking of his shrewish wife could drive him to work.

Lem led the lazy life of a Rip Van Winkle until the outbreak of the civil war, and then he joined the Confederate army. At the end of six months Lem was shot through the right thigh, and it was long before he was able to limp out of the hospital and back to his regiment. In the second year he was shot in the left shoulder, and when he returned to duty his left hand was bent far back by a shortened tendon, but he was still able to raise his rifle. Early in the fourth year they got him again—a musket ball through the body—but he was back in the ranks long before the fighting was ended. Every one wondered at Lem's persistence in sticking to the terrible trade of war.

Dr. Girdner met Lem hobbling down the street in Greenville one morning in June, 1865, still pale and weak from his latest wound, his right leg short and wabbly, his left hand stiffly bent back.

"Glad to see you alive, Lem," said the doctor. "I suppose you're glad to be home again?"

"Waal," Lem admitted without enthusiasm, "I s'pose I had to git erlong home. Gin'ral Lee he surrindered us down to Appomattox, an' we all had to go home."

"But aren't you glad to be away from the dangers of war?"

"Why, doc, war hain't so bad," cried honest Lem—"war hain't so bad. There's lots of days when you don't have nothin' to do."—Harper's Weekly.

A GAME OF BALL.

How It May Strike a Stranger Who Sees It For the First Time.

Nothing has set America so high in the estimation of foreign nations, says Ellis Parker Butler in Success Magazine, as the adoption of baseball as the national sport. If a foreign spy wanders into America seeking to fathom our real inwardness and sees a game of baseball any feeling of contempt for our newness gives way instantly to awestruck admiration. At his first glance baseball is to him a mystery, and it remains a mystery to him. He sees 30,000 men and women suffering the tortures of the lower regions on hot grand stands. He sees a man pick up a small white ball as hard as a pine knot. Facing him is another man who holds a smooth but deadly club in his hands. Behind this second man is a third man whose face is hidden behind a birdcage. Suddenly the man with the ball raises one foot in the air and shows the man with the bat the sole of his shoe. The man at the bat sees that there are spikes in the sole of the shoe, and it angers him, and he raises his bat to throw it at the man with the ball. But—ah, ha!—the man with the ball is too quick for him. He throws the hard, white ball at the man with the bat with all his strength. The man with the bat waves defiance by swinging the bat in the air. The ball proceeds. The batsman never flinches! Will the ball kill the man or will the impact crush the ball? But, see! The ball finds man unflinching; the ball is panic stricken; the ball dodges around the man; the ball is lost, buried in the huge leather chair cushion that covers the hand of the birdcage man behind the batsman! "Strike one!" says the umpire. Thirty thousand cheers! Why?

Grub Street's Pawnshop.

If the Avant is not the oldest and best known pawnshop in the world it deserves to be. It has been in existence ever since the days of Shakespeare and Ben Jonson. It is in Fleet street—Grub street—and has been the poor writer's uncle for all these centuries and years. It has an old legend something like this: "Old Literary Friends Never Forgotten." There are many souvenirs, sayings and traditions of the greatest men on earth who, going broke, had to patronize it. Outside of its own name it is well known as the Grub street pawnshop.—London Mail.

Unspellable.

The Newfoundland sealers [illegible] reason not given by the St. John's correspondent of the New York Sun describe their greasy spoil as "swoils," and they also say they "spell" an object when they mean to carry it. One can imagine the amazement of the young cleric who on one occasion asked a burly hunter how he spelled "swoils."

"We don't spell 'em; we hauls 'em," was the bewildering reply.

The Retort Courteous.

"I hate to press this bill, Mr. Slowpay," said the tailor, taking a much wrinkled memorandum of accounts from his pocket, "but"—

"Oh, don't bother, Snip," said Slowpay genially. "You don't need to press it. I don't mind the wrinkles in it at all. Fact is, I've got a dozen fresh copies of it at home already."—Judge.

GOT THE EGGS FRESH

They Were Turtle Eggs and Agassiz Wanted Them.

A WILD RACE AGAINST TIME.

The Professor Had to Have the Eggs Before They Were Three Hours Old, and This Is the Story of How the Hunter Made Good His Promise.

When Professor Louis Agassiz was writing a book on the turtles of the United States it became necessary for him to have some fresh turtle eggs. He engaged Mr. Jenks of Middleboro, about forty miles from Cambridge, to get them for him. Mr. Jenks promised that the eggs should be in Agassiz's hands before they were three hours old. Mr. Jenks, who told the tale to a writer in the Atlantic Monthly, had to wait by a certain pond for the turtles to come out and lay their eggs in the sand. Finally, after weeks of waiting, one morning about 4 o'clock a turtle crawled up the beach, partly buried herself in the soft sand and laid her eggs. Mr. Jenks went on to say:

As she did so the distant clock struck 4. There was no train till after 9, and the eggs must be in Cambridge in three hours.

I laid the eggs on a bed of sand in the bottom of my pail, filled in between them with more sand, so with another layer to the rim, and, covering all over smoothly with more sand, I ran back for my horse. He knew as well as I that the turtle had laid and that he was to get those eggs to Agassiz.

I let him out. I shouted to him, holding to the dasher with one hand, the pail of eggs with the other, not daring to get off my knees, although the bang on them as we pounded down the wood road was terrific. We had nearly covered the distance to the pike when ahead of me I heard the sharp whistle of a locomotive.

With a pull that lifted the horse from his feet I swung him into a field and sent him straight as an arrow for the track.

By some stroke of luck I got on the track and backed off before the train hit my carriage. But the maneuver was successful, for the engineer stopped, and I swung aboard the cab—hatless, dew soaked, smeared with yellow mud and holding as if it were a baby or a bomb a little tin pail of sand.

"Throw her wide open," I commanded—"wide open! These are fresh turtle eggs for Professor Agassiz of Cambridge. He must have them before breakfast."

The engineer and the fireman no doubt thought that I was crazy, but they let me alone, and the fast freight rolled in swiftly to Boston.

But misfortune was ahead. We slowed down in the yards and came to a stop. We were put on a siding to wait no one knew how long.

I suddenly jumped from the engine, slid over a high fence and bolted for the street. In the empty square stood a cab.

The cabman saw me coming. I waved a dollar at him and then another, dodged into the cab, slammed the door and called out: "Cambridge! Harvard college! Professor Agassiz's house! I've got eggs for Agassiz!" and I pushed another dollar up at him through the hole.

"Let him go!" I ordered. "Here's another dollar for you if you make Agassiz's house in twenty minutes!"

We flew to Cambridge. There was a sudden lurch, and I dived forward, rammed my head into the front of the cab and came up with a rebound that landed me across the small of my back on the seat and sent half of my pail of eggs helter skelter over the floor. But we were at Agassiz's house. I tumbled out and pounded the door.

"Agassiz!" I gasped when the maid came. "I want Professor Agassiz, quick!"

She protested that he was in bed and threatened the police. But just then a door overhead was flung open, a great, white robed figure appeared on the dim landing above, and a quick, loud voice called excitedly:

"Let him in! Let him in! I know him! He has my turtle eggs."

And the apparition, slipperless and clad in anything but an academic gown, came sailing downstairs. The great man, his arms extended, laid hold of me with both hands and, dragging me and my precious pail into his study, with a swift, clean stroke laid open one of the eggs as the watch in my trembling hands ticked its way to 7 as if nothing unusual were happening in the history of the world.

A Fearful Poison.

From the microbe which gives rise in human beings to the disease known as tetanus, or lockjaw, a poison called tetanine is obtained which is over 100 times more powerful than strychnine. A fragment of tetanine so small as to be invisible to the naked eye would kill almost instantaneously the strongest man. One fifteen-thousandth part of a grain of it has caused the death of a horse 1,600,000,000 times its own weight.—Pearson's.

Fully Informed.

"With all your wealth are you not afraid of the proletariat?" asked the delver in sociological problems.

"No, I ain't," snapped Mrs. Newrich. "We boil all our drinkin' water."—Philadelphia Record.

AN ARCTIC CAMP.

Peary's Canvas Tents, Which Were Absolutely Snow Proof.

"A man's first night in a canvas tent in the arctic is likely to be rather wakeful," says Commander Peary in Hampton's. "The ice makes mysterious noises, the dogs bark and fight outside the tent, where they are tethered, and as three Eskimos and one white man usually occupy a small tent and the oil stove is left burning all night the air, notwithstanding the cold, is not overpure, and sometimes the Eskimos begin chanting to the spirits of their ancestors in the middle of the night. Sometimes, too, the new man's nerves are tried by hearing wolves howl in the distance.

"The tents are specially made. They are of lightweight canvas, and the floor of the tent is sewed directly into it. The fly is sewed up, a circular opening in it just large enough to admit a man, and that opening fitted with a circular flap, which is closed by a drawstring, making the tent absolutely snow proof. An ordinary tent when the snow is flying would be filled in no time.

"The tent is pyramidal, with one pole in the center, and the edges are usually held down by the sledge runners or by snowshoes used as tent pegs. The men sleep on the floor in their clothes with a musk ox skin or a couple of deerskins wrapped around them.

"The kitchen box for our sledge journeys is simply a wooden box containing two double burner oil stoves with four inch wicks. The two cooking pots are the bottoms of five gallon coal oil tins fitted with covers. When packed they are turned bottom side up over each stove, and the hinged cover of the wooden box is closed.

"On reaching camp, whether tent or snow igloo, the kitchen box is set down inside. The top of the box is turned up and keeps the heat of the stove from melting the wall of the igloo or burning the tent. The hinged front of the box is turned down and forms a table. The two cooking pots are filled with pounded ice and put on the stove. When the ice melts one pot is used for tea and the other may be used to warm beans or to boil meat if there is any.

"Each man has a quart cup for tea and a hunting knife which serves many purposes. He does not carry a fork, and one teaspoon is considered quite enough for a party of four. Each man helps himself from the pot—sticks in his knife and fishes out a piece of meat.

"The theory of field work is that there shall be two meals a day, one in the morning and one at night. As the days grow short the meals are taken before light and after dark, leaving the period of light entirely for work. Sometimes it is necessary to travel twenty-four hours without stopping for food."

The Difference.

"Mistah Walkah, kin yo' tell me de diff'unce 'tween a cold in de head an' a—a chicken coop wit' a hole in de rufe?"

"No, Sam; that's a hard one. What is the difference between a cold in the head and a chicken coop with a hole in the roof?"

"De one am a case o' influenza, an' de uddah am a case o' out flew heus, suh."

"Ladies and gentlemen, the vocal wonder, Professor Wabble Izzeers, will now sing the popular ballad entitled 'The Lips That Caress a Stogy Shall Never Touch Mine.'"—Chicago Tribune.

The Cobra of India.

Among the true cobras of India the naja is found all over India and Ceylon, Burma, the Andaman islands, southern China and the Malay peninsula and archipelago. It ascends the Himilayas to an altitude of 8,000 feet. It extends also over Afghanistan and through Persia to the eastern shore of the Caspian. It may attain a length of nearly seven and a half feet, but it is usually not more than a little over five and a half feet long. Najas vary much in color and markings, but have generally the spectacle mark on the back of the neck, which they always distend before making an attack.

Fish In Former Times.

Men of former ages, unless they lived near the sea or a river, had great difficulties in gratifying their taste for fish. The great houses had their fish ponds or stews, but sea fish, such as cod, bream, sturgeon, herring and sprats, were salted, and the excessive consumption of highly salted fish in the middle ages is said to have produced leprosy. Fish was also baked in [illegible] to enable it to be carried for great distances.

A FAMOUS ADMIRAL.

Sir Archibald Douglas Is Canada's Senior In the British Navy.

Admiral Sir Archibald Lucius Douglas, upon whom McGill University is about to confer the degree of LL.D., is Canada's senior representative in the Royal Navy, his distinguished service in which has been a credit to his native country. He was born in Quebec in 1842 in a house on Grand Allee, situated, it is believed, on the line on which Wolfe drew up his army previous to the battle of the Plains of Abraham. His father was George Wellis Douglas, a well-known citizen of Quebec in those days. The future admiral was educated at the Quebec High School, and in 1856, being then fourteen years of age, joined as a cadet the "Boscawen," flagship of the North American and West Indies squadron. Just forty-six years later (1902), he returned to Quebec with the North American and West Indies squadron, this time as commander-in-chief. In the interval he had seen much service, and of a very diversified character in various parts of the world. He served with the Naval Brigade up the Congo and Gambia in 1860, commanded the "Seraphis" during the Soudan campaign of 1884, and later commanded the "Edinburgh," "Cambridge," and "Excellent." He was commander-in-chief in the East Indies in 1898 and 1899, and commander-in-chief North American station, 1902 and 1904. He retired from the navy in 1907. In view of the academic honor about to be conferred by McGill it is interesting to know that as captain of H.M.S. "Excellent," Admiral Douglas for several years was in charge of the navy's principal gunnery and torpedo school and did not a little to place the training of the non-commissioned ranks of the Royal Navy upon a more satisfactory footing. A tribute to Admiral Douglas' interest in the scientific and educational side of his profession was his selection in 1873 to be the director of the Japanese Imperial Naval College. During the three years he held this appointment he had charge of the education of some of the most conspicuous of Japan's naval heroes of the wars with China and Russia. In recognition of his services the Mikado conferred upon him the Order of the Rising Sun, First Class. From 1893 to 1895 Admiral Douglas had the honor of serving as Naval A.D.C. to Her Majesty Queen Victoria.

A Fireless Cooker.

"Have you ever tried a fireless cooker?"

"Yes. We've had one for six months. My wife has tried to fire her, and I've told her to go, but she simply ignores our requests and says she'll scratch the eyes out of any other girl we dare to bring into the kitchen."

Theodore Roosevelt, jr., and his fiancee, Miss Edith B. Alexander, applied in New York for a license to wed on June 20. The bridegroom-to-be is 22.

Combining of Materials and Colors a Feature of the Newest Gowns

BY A. T. ASHMORE.

COMBINING different materials is one of the season's styles that has apparently met with most marked approval. There is much that is practical in the idea, for often the material most satisfactory for skirt and coat is quite impossible for the waist, and a thinner fabric for the waist would be impracticable in a skirt. Foulard and serge, cloth and satin make effective combinations. Voile de soie and liberty satin is another popular combination, and the manufacturers have most kindly furnished the same shades in all leading colors, so that the task of selecting just the right shades is not so difficult as might be expected.

Simple and dainty but smart and becoming is one of the models for a voile de soie and liberty satin gown. The upper part of the skirt and the lower part of the waist are of the voile de soie, while the lower part of the skirt and the yoke, upper sleeves and pleat in the front of the waist are of the satin. The waist line is in its normal position, the belt of crushed satin or velvet, finished with a fancy buckle. All the lines of this gown are exceedingly simple, but it is a simplicity that implies perfection of taste and good dressmaking.

Cloth and chiffon are not a new combination of materials, but this year the method by which they are made up is absolutely new. All the cloths used at present are of the softest, lightest weave, and in truth cachemire de soie is generally chosen in preference if the style of gown demands any draped folds, for the draperies must all fall in soft, graceful lines not possible if any too heavy or thick material is chosen. The body of the waist made in chiffon is so much cooler and more comfortable in warm weather, even though it must be worn over a boned and perfect fitting waist, that it is only remarkable the fashion did not gain stronger foothold long since. A charming model of a cloth and chiffon gown is made in one of the newest shades of deep rose color. Over the silk lining is a plain strip of chiffon. The double overskirt of cachemire de soie or cloth is caught up at the left side with a broad satin ribbon that starts from under the pointed girdle of satin. The waist of chiffon is in the new cut that has sleeve and waist in one. Broad satin bands embroidered in silk the same color as the gown trim skirt and waist, and if all one color is too trying then bands of embroidered heavy cream lace are substituted.

Mauve, blue and gray are three other colors chosen for this model, which has also been copied in black with success.

All black gowns are always smart in summer, when the thin transparent materials in black are in fascinating variety. Again is chiffon combined with cachemire de soie or liberty satin, and most charming results are obtained. Voile de soie is just a trifle heavier than chiffon, but in both materials there are many different qualities, each and all of which combine perfectly with heavier fabrics. Made over white pompadour silk, satin or net or the plain cloth of silver or gold or silver net the most delightfully cool and mysterious effects of coloring can be obtained, so that the all black gown can be varied in many ways. In all black it can be very smart and original simply by combining different materials, while, as before stated, the colored linings add a most unusual and charming color effect. Some women contend the all black gown has a depressing effect upon their spirits. This season they cannot but admit its charm, for not only can the too sombre appearance they object to be relieved by the colored lining, but by a touch of color in the waist or belt, for belts of contrasting color are once again popular.

Elaborate Styles in Favor.

The elaborate and the simple are displayed in sharp contrast this season, but that the elaborate designs are the most popular for the moment cannot be gainsaid, and the woman who rejoices in simple lines and the plainer effects has a hard task to find just what she wants to copy in the latest models that are displayed.

Fortunately there are still remaining conservative tailors who cannot be swerved from their fixed belief in certain regulation styles, that vary surprisingly little from year to year, so that the plain tailor costume is always a good investment, but it must be correct in line and perfect in cut and fit. Coats are shorter than last year, even in the conservative tailor models; skirts have pleats in preference to being absolutely plain and tight fitting, and the belted Norfolk jacket and Russian blouse costumes are exhibited as the latest styles, but, be it understood, not to the exclusion of the regulation plain coat and skirt costumes. Sleeves are larger than last season, and for the more elaborate costumes the three-quarter length sleeve in popular, but with the plain costume only the regulation length coat sleeve is considered correct.

The long shawl rever has given way to the turned down velvet collar and either narrow, short revers or no revers at all. Pockets are rather distinctive of the latest fashions and are edged with a piping of velvet to match the collar, while a contrast in the color is very smart. A light apricot serge or cloth is trimmed with velvet collar and pipings of a much darker shade, even a deep red being used, the same idea being carried out in gray or light tan, with darker gray and brown respectively.

The finish of the waist at the waist line demands close attention in the new gowns; the one piece gown still lives, though there are many more waist and skirt gowns made up than there were last year, but always, be it understood, so constructed that the belt hides the joining of the two. [illegible] normal waist [illegible] fashionable, long waisted effects are not yet popular and the belts are wide and high on the waist.

Draped satin and silk belts and bodices are for the moment popular. Whether they will so continue cannot be told, for it is always the most becoming that is chosen. Then there is more of a full soft effect fashionable this season; all waists show a slight blouse over the belt, indicating rather than outlining the figure. The soft materials are especially effective in these styles, while the heavier are best for the tighter fitting draped waists.

Are skirts more fashionable long or short? is a question anxiously asked of Dame Fashion. Short for the street, long for the house, is the almost too comprehensive answer to such inquiries. The practical, general wear street gown is short, but not exaggeratedly so; the afternoon reception gown is far smarter made long, but again not of exaggerated length. Foulard, voile de soie and gowns of light materials have short skirts, short enough to just clear the ground, but these are not of the elaborate order suitable for formal afternoon entertainments.

It is claimed by the practical woman that a gown with two skirts, one short and one long, is a wonderful investment. The plan is far more feasible for winter than for summer, but can be carried out in summer materials. Another so called practical scheme is the princess gown of liberty satin, over which are worn different coats of lace, chiffon or voile. As this last fashion is best carried out when the coats or overdresses—for such they are—are most costly, ranging from $[illegible]50 upward, it can scarcely be classed with the economical possibilities for the spring and summer wardrobe, but it is smart all the same.

PRACTICAL FASHIONS FOR HOME DRESSMAKING

PONGEE OR FOULARD GOWN.

FOULARD GOWN WITH CLOTH JACKET.

AT the first glance the double skirt as exhibited in the latest fashions presents many difficulties for home dressmaking, but that double skirts are fashionable this season must be admitted, and the problem how to make them must be solved. There must be a perfect fitting drop skirt; this means that the drop skirt must fit smoothly in the front and sides. At the back also there must be no fulness, but there must be sufficient width to prevent the skirt from cutting in below the hips; the inverted pleats at the back will obviate this difficulty. For the tunic overskirt effect there must be a wide band or scant flounce of the material sewed on the drop skirt. This will hang best if not fastened to the hem of the drop skirt but finished by itself; then it is not difficult to make the tunic or overskirt separate.

With the lower cut corset and the looser waist some support to the bust is as a rule necessary to make the waist, unless perfectly boned or fitted, look well, but there are several new brassieres or bust supporters this year that are very well cut and which take the place of a fitted lining. Then it is well worth the trouble for every woman to have made by some dressmaker who can cut well and who knows the customer's lines a perfect fitting lining or corset cover of heavy linen or silk.

REV DR. LANGFELDT PREACHED TO FORESTERS OF COURT ZION

C. O. F. Attend St. Mark's Otonabee—Good Attendance in Spite of Inclement Weather—An Able Sermon

On Sunday, June 5, Court Zion of the Canadian Order of Foresters attended Divine service at St. Mark's church, Otonabee. Although the weather was most unfavorable, yet the church was filled with the Foresters and their friends, who took a reverent and attentive part in the service. Rev. Dr. Langfeldt said evening prayer, and preached an appropriate sermon from the text, St. Matthew 25:16, "The Parable of the Talents." He said that the Parable of the Virgins teaches the lesson of waiting; the parable of the Talents, the lesson of working, and the parable of the sheep and goats teaches what will be when the waiting and the working are all done. The parable of the Virgins is the inner life, the secret oil; the parable of the talents is the outer life, the life which the oil feeds; the parable of the sheep and goats is the future life to which both develop.

The lesson which Dr. Langfeldt wished to impart is: "What is it, to [illegible] How does the increase come? By what wage and by what means do talents double themselves?"

If we were to go out of the world only just as good as we came into it—and many do not even that—or if, at the end of life, we were not any better, and more capable to love and serve God than we were when we were first converted—and many Christian hearts are colder and emptier afterwards than they were in the early days of their religious life—then, having only to present just what we have received, we would be accounted "a wicked and slothful servant, and we would be consigned to the furthermost external range of all created beings, the outer darkness, where because it is the outer circle, farthest from God, and farthest from the Light, and where, therefore, all is misery and impotent vindictive rage, "weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth." It is important to know how we should deal with what God has given us. The one who had received the five talents and the one who had received the two talents were taken exactly to the same place. It depends upon the degree in which we improve our trust. Everyone has received something, which is given him as a stock to cultivate. That "something" is just fitted to him so nicely proportioned to his character and circumstances, and his bodily and mental capacities according to his ability, that if he had had less it would not be enough for his energies, and if he had more it would be an excess on his

Whatever God commits to us, grace or gift, it has either itself a tendency and a necessity to grow: Everything is given to effort, and yet all is grace. Then begins the trading. The secret of all success for the spiritual trafficker is threefold: First, to make the best use of whatever we have; then to make wise investments; and then to look well for our securities.

Dr. Langfeldt illustrated this by giving a few examples: Good thoughts to invest it in a fact; love for God and our fellowmen can be enlarged by doing loving actions.

The power of speech, conversation. What an investment when used to the glory of God! Money given to God's cause. To the poor, the heathen, the sick. Money harvested is laid up for three thieves, man, moth and rust.

Then again, individual gifts, such as talent for teaching, that precious endowment of sympathy; that master influence exercised upon other people's minds; the graces of a beautiful person, all endowments of education, all of which God has entrusted to us, gifts, [illegible] His glory, [illegible] usury when He comes back.

Dr. Langfeldt exhorted the congregation to make good use of whatever God had endowed them with, so that all might be able to say at the Lord's return: "Lord, Thou deliveredst unto me five talents, behold I have gained beside them five talents more."

Waste of Food on Big Liners.

As to food waste the most extraordinary is perhaps found on the big liners that carry three classes of passengers, says The London Chronicle. You might imagine that the elaborate dishes prepared for the saloon would be passed down from class to class and that the poorer would eat of the crumbs that are carried from the rich man's table. Not a bit of it. The second class would resent a "menu" that does not go round, and even the steerage passengers would quarrel if the fare were not the same for all. And so the big liners pitch good food into the ocean.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—In view of the manifest advantages to be derived by the whole community from the presence in the city of a first class set of Chimes, I am rather surprised not to see larger financial support being evidenced by the statements issued to the daily papers. Splendid sums have been given by men outside Peterborough, who may well be thanked for they cannot enjoy the chimes. And there seem to have been many generous gifts coming from within the city as one would expect. But, as far as I can make out, the slow progress of the subscription list results from the great body of our people not having yet come forward with small or medium contributions. And yet one only hears the movement well spoken of as something to be supported. To give this thing a bit of a lift, I am willing to increase my present subscription of $5 to $15, if 19 others will do the same or give the latter sum. I make this suggestion and offer as a citizen having no connection with St. John's. The committee may get my name at the office.

Yours,
PROGRESS.

To the Editor of the Review.
Peterborough, May 26, 1910.
To the Mayor and Council of Peterborough, City:

Dear Sirs,—I desire to enter a protest against the proposition submitted to you by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company involving the closing of Park street and the construction of a sub-way.

Park street is becoming more and more one of the main arteries of the city of Peterborough, and the closing of Park street, even if accompanied by the construction of a subway, will destroy the values of many properties, and greatly depreciate the value of other properties both north and south of the railway tracks.

I submit that any plan which involves the closing of the main highways of traffic, such as Park street, or which involves the construction of subways on main thoroughfares will be prejudicial to the best interests and growth of the city of Peterborough, and that the interests of the Railway Company, as well as that of the citizens of Peterborough will be best protected by a plan which would leave Park street, as well as Aylmer street open, so that the city could extend southward. If it is practicable for the railway to use as a siding from Aylmer street to the Monaghan road, it would be equally as practicable for the railway to extend from Park street west to the same distance beyond the Monaghan road without interferring to any extent with the development and progress of the city southward from the river to Park street. My suggestion simply means that the railway have the rights it asks west from Park street instead of west from Aylmer street. The natural formation of the land on the Monaghan road adapts itself readily to the construction of a subway with little or no injury to the adjoining properties, and in that connection I might point out that the adjoining properties on the Monaghan road are at the present time built up. The plan submitted to your Council involves grave injury to a large number of citizens who have located in the south end of the city, and the injury involved would not in most cases be compensated for under the provisions of our law as I understand it.

I have during the last seventeen years, by hard work, succeeded in creating a large and extensive business and business connection at the corner of Park and Albert street, and the closing of Park street, even if accompanied by the construction of a subway, would not only prevent the development of my present business, but would injure my business to a very considerable extent by making it inconvenient, awkward and, in many cases, impracticable for former customers to deal with me.

While it is right to meet the railways as far as possible, it is not, in my opinion, fair to make the sacrifice fall upon a few of the citizens, and the proposed plan sacrifices not only myself, but many of our hardest working citizens who have built up and invested their earnings in the south end of the town.

I would ask that I have an opportunity of presenting my views at a date convenient to you.

Yours truly,
R. C. BRAUND.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Some few days ago I [illegible] school house S. S. No. 6, Douro. There has to be a new school built and the site has been picked on by the trustees. The meeting began at eight o'clock in the evening. The chairman was appointed, Mr. David Darling. We then took a vote on the site for or against it. It went along all right until a man near Young's Point came to give his vote.

Some reference was made to taxes alleged to have been unpaid by him for six or seven years.

The chairman thought he had no right to vote. Mr. Garbutt and Mr. Moore, the trustees, said it was alright he had a vote, and he did vote. About every other man that voted, the secretary thought they had no right and the chairman having the voter's list with their names on it, said they had no right to declare the decordation, but the secretary acted as chairman and secretary to. When the poll was closed the ballots were counted, having two of a majority against the site. Then G. Garbutt, the trustees said it would be left for arbitration. Then Jim Moore, the other trustee, seconded the motion. I didn't think there was any fairness about it when we beat them by two of a majority. There was no need of any arbitration. Bill Casemant of Lakefield, was picked upon as Garbutt's arbitrator. I hope that Mr. Casemant will do his duty and have fairness in the centre of the sections and not be like he was some few years ago when he was in county council. The school question came up wanting to divide the school at that time and putting one at Pine Grove and another at Broad's Creek. Mr. Roland Strickland handed Mr. Casemant a bill to take to the County Council, to read to them daring them to let their taxes go to Pine Grove. When reading this bill to the Council all he had was Roland Strickland, Mrs. Barlay and Arthur Jury, and neither one had never had a say. Now I would like for Mr. Casmant to have a little sympathy for children who have had 3 1-2 miles to go to school winter and summer, where, if it was at Brand's Corner, they having 6 lots west and others having 8. As you see we are giving them 2 lots where there is only 14 children on Garbutt's side and 50 or over on the other side. Mr. Tighe, and other trustees, appointed Mr. Mantosh, of Monaghan, for the other arbitrator.

Yours truly,
From a Douro ratepayer, S. S. No. 6.

NEARLY LOST FALCONER.

University President Took the Wrong Section of the Train.

President Falconer of Toronto University was banquetted at Winnipeg recently by the graduates of old 'Varsity and was the guest of the Canadian Club at a luncheon. The day the president arrived in Winnipeg, he decided, however, that there must be some mistake in the dates, while the Winnipeg committees in their turn, who had charge of the various functions, were panic-stricken that their guest had not arrived and the caterers were hurriedly called to postpone their preparations. The train got in at noon and the president and the committees spent most of the afternoon endeavoring to locate each other.

In these day of immigration rush to the west the C.P.R. express trains generally travel in several sections. President Falconer arrived on the first section and the committee met the second one. While the committee were scouring the C.P.R. depot and the Royal Alexandra Hotel, the doctor, who had given up waiting for a reception committee, was being shaved in the basement. The 'Varsity banquet was that night and a hurried meeting of some of the graduates was called in the office of James Fisher, K.C., chairman of the Alumni association. Until Dr. Falconer could be located, it was decided to call off the banquet. In the meantime a well-known 'Varsity old boy was sent out as a sleuth. "Are you sure Dr. Falconer is not registered?" he asked the Royal Alexandra hotel clerk.

"I am Dr. Falconer," said a man beside him, "and I am glad to find someone looking for me." Then followed elaborate explanations.

A Descendant of "Jack Horner."

Mrs. Herbert Gladstone, the wife of the newly appointed Governor-General of the South African Union, is in many respects one of the most remarkable women of the highest official circle in England. In the eyes of the English-speaking youth of South Africa, not the least of this [illegible] lies in the fact that through her father, the late Right Hon. Sir Richard Horner Paget, she is actually a descendant of "Little Jack Horner," of Christmas pie notoriety. This hero of the popular nursery rhyme was a steward of Glastonbury Abbey in 1553, and all visitors to the celebrated fane are shown Jack Horner's tomb, etc., etc. Sir Richard Horner Paget, Mrs. Gladstone's father, who in his younger days was for some years in Canada on service with his regiment, H. M. 66th Foot, was one of the great country squires of England, representing various divisions of his native county, Somersetshire, in the House of Commons from 1865 to 1895. He served for a time in the Salisbury Cabinet and was created a baronet in 1886. Mrs. Gladstone is a handsome and charming woman of the characteristic English type, tall, fair and with a fresh complexion, the latter a result of constant outdoor exercise riding, driving, walking, gardening, etc. She is considered one of the most brilliant conversationalists in English society and is an excellent public speaker, often exercising the latter talent at parochial gatherings, school meetings, etc. She is a gifted pianiste and is fond of accompanying her husband, who, having a pleasant and well-trained tenor voice, is often called upon to sing. Her special hobby is gardening, and she is taking a large stock of gardening tools, seeds, etc., to South Africa.

THE INDIAN'S PASSING

FEW POOR THOUSANDS ARE ALL THAT ARE LEFT.

The Wilds of the Northwest and British Columbia Make Up a Large Part of the Aboriginal Population—Reserves Are Usually Much Larger Than Their Inhabitants Would Justify—Victims of Tuberculosis.

Three centuries ago the Indian population of Canada, though never dense, was considerable enough to present a very real hindrance in the settlement of the country by Europeans, writes Emily P. Weaver in London Graphic. What the troops of savages lacked in numbers they made up in extraordinary mobility, and in ferocity weakened by no sentiment of pity even for the most helpless of non-combatants. Thus to the pioneers it seemed that their name was "Legion." Yet neither their fighting qualities nor their almost unexampled powers of endurance could save them from the fate that awaits those unable to readjust themselves to new conditions. The white man's firearms and "fire-water" hastened the destruction begun by their own fearful feuds, and to-day there are in the Dominion only 111,043 Indians.

Nevertheless, taking the Canadian Indians as a whole, their numbers are not now decreasing. The latest census shows some excess of births over deaths, and a somewhat larger general increase accounted for in part by immigration, and additions to the tribes by marriages. On the other hand, besides the Indians so-called, there are in Canada many half-breeds. There are also others, of mixed blood, who have been absorbed in the white population.

The few poor thousands of Indians, representing the savage hordes of old time are divided into a multiplicity of tribes speaking different languages, such as the Micmacs of the east, the Six Nation Indians of Ontario (descended from the redoubtable Iroquois, who proved such a scourge to the early French settlers) and the Crees and Blackfoot Indians of the western plains.

As might be expected, the vast wild province of British Columbia contains more than a fifth of the total Indian population of the Dominion, but (what at first sight is more surprising) the old long-settled province of Ontario contains nearly as many. The explanation is that immediately after the American Revolution large "reserves" were set apart in the newly organized province (then called Upper Canada) for the Indians who had proved loyal. They were not permitted to alienate these lands, or there is little doubt that they would have been despoiled of them long ago, for they have never been a provident people.

The reserves are often of great extent. The Six Nation Reserve on the Grand River, near Brantford (with a population of 4,275 persons), consists of about 444,000 acres, whilst some of the reserves in Saskatchewan and Alberta, set apart for comparatively small bands, comprise from fifty to a hundred square miles. The Government has generally respected the claim of the Indians to the soil, and it has been customary, as a preliminary to opening a district to settlement, for the authorities to make treaties with the Indians, to set apart reserves for them, and to give them compensation in the shape of annuities, rations, grants for education, etc. Quite recently many bands in the west have thus entered "into treaty," and now scarcely one-fifth of the total Indian population (and these chiefly in the extreme north) retain their old status.

Whether under treaty or not, the Indians to some extent receive from Government a kind of paternal care as "the wards of the nation," and are subject to various special laws, such as that, for instance, which absolutely prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquor to an Indian. Doubtless some of the race find these benevolently intended restrictions galling. A few of the more able and industrious, by fulfilling certain conditions, gain their enfranchisement as ordinary citizens, but the agents who have the oversight of the reserves describe the Indians as generally lacking in ambition.

As of old, the intermittent activities of hunting and fishing are more attractive to them than steady labor, though in the more settled districts they are obliged to turn to other occupations (such as farming, lumbering, making tubs and baskets, and fancy articles for sale to tourists), and the agents report a gradual improvement in their methods of work and mode of life. In the west, the red men still depend for their livelihood mainly upon hunting, fishing and trapping, but instead of wearing the [illegible] tering themselves in tents of buffalo skins, they dress in manufactured goods far less warm and durable, and make their tents of cotton, too thin to keep out either cold or damp.

Tuberculosis is very prevalent amongst them, and in some tribes the death-rate from this cause is extraordinarily high, but where they live under fairly favorable conditions they show no signs of dying out.

The more civilized Indians have lost the picturesque (and terrible) characteristics of their ancestors, who turned the early history of Canada into pages of wild romance and blood-curdling tragedy. Chiefs in bearskins, braves in war-paint, tomahawks, peace-pipes, and belts of wampum have been swept from the scene. In their place we have soberly clad farmers, respectable housewives, little wooden houses, churches, schools, and on some reserves even agricultural societies and temperance leagues. Only now and then (as, for instance, on market day in Halifax, when one stands before a group of lank-haired basket-sellers, crouched on the ground with an air of stolid indifference to any possible purchaser) does one realize that even yet the Indian is not quite one with the white communities which till his old hunting grounds.

The fizzy soda water may lost its fizz this summer in Chicago, as the price of carbonic acid gas has gone up.

To us to hear the many kindly appreciative remarks which come to us daily from wearers of the modern glasses which we are now supplying. They are certainly the finest ever produced, and they recommend themselves by whomsoever used. Mr. Browett, Optical Specialist, makes a most thorough examination of the eyes, and is most careful of the adjustment, so that in every particular they are made to suit the exact needs of each eye, and the facial features of the wearer. In fact these glasses are useless unless the examiner has had sufficent experience in refracting and adapting. Accuracy, Suitability and Best Value are foundation principles upon which our Optical Business grows.

BOER GIRL IN CANADA.

Miss Jeanette Van Duyn Here Learning Domestic Economy.

A young woman always optimistic, keen to notice all of an educative nature, and enthusiastic over anything Canadian, and not afraid to show it, is Miss Jeanette C. van Duyn, the Dutch girl from the Transvaal who is now studying at Macdonald College at St. Anne de Bellevue, and will go to Guelph Agricultural College during the fall term. This young woman represents the pioneer educating influence in the establishing of a system of domestic economy among the agricultural classes of the Dutch in South Africa. She has come to Canada as the special representative of the Agricultural Department of the new Government of the Transvaal.

"Dutch people, the women, especially of the farming classes, are most backward in everything pertaining to household economy," Miss van Duyn declared. "That is the reason I was sent here. I had read a great deal of what Canada was doing for her agriculturists at Macdonald College and Guelph, so I got my Government to take up the idea, and they commissioned me to study conditions. I will be in this country nearly two years, then I return to the Transvaal to teach what I have learned. My special object will be to organize a system of women's institutes, which seem to be doing so much for the women who live on the farms of Ontario. It is these women of my country who need looking after; for all these years they have been pitiably neglected.

"Am I native Dutch?" she paused to answer the interjection. Then she laughed one of those infectious laughs. "Oh, yes. Call me a Boer. Indeed, when the war ended I could not speak one word of English. But I soon learned that it would be essential to my future; and I was one of the first to learn the tongue. Finally I got along so well that I was used as translator of important Government documents.

"Canada is so lovely that I cannot realize it at all," she laughed, in answer to a question. "I never saw snow until this winter. And, do you know, when I used to look out of my window in the mornings across the beautiful white fields and far up the ice-locked Ottawa River, all covered with the clear, white crystals, I had to pinch myself to make sure I was not in fairyland. It makes me want to keep on stopping here—for we have nothing that can compare with your scenic beauties. At least I have one firm resolve: The minute I return to my native land my whole ambition will be to start at once to save money for another trip, and soon, to Canada."

Miss van Duyn is undoubtedly the popular girl of the college term. Save for a slightly noticeable accent, a somewhat broken English, there is little to tell the stranger that this young woman is Dutch. She is now quite Canadianized in views and manners. "Snowshoeing! It is great. Skating! It is delightful." Her only complaint is that there is so much to learn that she will not be able to master all before her return.

Miss Van Duyn has proved one of the brilliant science students of Macdonald College this term. She has just been appointed by the Ontario Government to go on a lecture tour of the Women's Institute of the Province during June. For a month she will study conditions in the Department of Agriculture in the Parliament buildings, and with the fall term will enter Guelph Agricultural College.

Dean Weldon Goes West.

Once again the call has come to the east for an educationist, and Nova Scotia, as usual, is to bear the loss. It seems her portion to rear the best and then lose them. Her latest loss, more particularly Halifax,'s, is Dr. A. Stanley McKenzie, Ph.D., professor of physics at Dalhousie University, who has resigned his position in his alma mater, one which he has held for the past five years, and accepted an offer to the chair of physics at the Stephens Institute of Technology, New York. This institute is one of the finest of its kind in America, and was founded by Mr. Stephens, who highly endowed it. The university has an attendance of some five hundred students.

Dr. R. C. Weldon, Ph.D., dean of the law faculty of Dalhousie University, has received an appointment on the British Columbia University Commission. The commission will consider a site and plans for a new university, which will be supported by the Government of British Columbia. It is understood that Dean Weldon will be chairman of the commission

FUNERAL TO BE PUBLIC

Change Made in Arrangement and Burial Will Take Place Saturday.

Toronto, June 9.—A public funeral on Saturday afternoon, in deference to requests from various influential bodies, but with simple ceremonies, as was his own expressed wish, will be accorded the remains of Goldwin Smith. There will be no selected pallbearers and those in charge of the arrangements are desirous that there should be very few floral tributes.

Friends may view the remains in the Grange library to-morrow from two to four p.m., and in order to give the public opportunity to attend the funeral there will be a short simple service in Convocation Hall on Saturday at three p.m. The casket, however, will be finally sealed before it leaves the Grange at one p.m. Mr. Haultain had not fully completed the details last evening, but said the officiating clergymen would probably be Rev. Robert J. Moore, vicar of St. George's Anglican Church, and Rev. W. Harris Wallace, pastor of Beverley street Baptist Church.

Interment will take place in St. James' Cemetery at 4.30 p.m.

The Grange was besieged by sympathetic friends yesterday and many telephone calls were answered. Very few, and only very personal friends, have yet been permitted to see the body. Requests for plaster casts of the face are numerous, among them being from Cornell University, Toronto University and the local art museum, and the task was yesterday entrusted to Walter S. Allward, the sculptor.

COULD NOT PROVE CASE

Hamilton, June 9.—The County Court jury, before whom the case of Frank Anderson, charged with stealing a purse from Miss Edith Sauer, and with assaulting her, was tried, struggled for three hours yesterday afternoon to reach an unanimous decision, and failing, was discharged by Judge Snider. Anderson was sent back to jail to await the fall sessions. The evidence was contradictory. Miss Sauer positively identified Anderson as the man who stole her purse by his features, but would not swear to the clothes he was wearing. She said she thought he had on a blue coat sweater and blue trousers. The defence proved through the prisoner's wife that he had never owned such a sweater.

SMUGGLING AT WINDSOR

Windsor, June 9.—Special officers will be appointed by the Customs Department at Ottawa to patrol the river from near Windsor, if a recommendation by Dr. Smith, collector of customs, is approved by the Department.

A customs officer claims to have information that there is no small amount of smuggling, and that undesirables who have been turned back by the immigration officers at the Windsor dock in many cases find their way into Canada by crossing the river in row boats or launches.

STOLE MARCH ON COLBORNE

Goderich, June 9.—The Ontario West Shore Railway, building from Goderich to Kincardine, stole another midnight move on the Township of Colborne, and laid the track again Tuesday night at the Dunlap crossing, which the farmers tore up last Saturday night.

Reeve Kernaghan appeared on the scene with a number of farmers to stop proceedings, but the railway people were well fortified, and it would have required a regiment of armed soldiers to dislodge them.

The railway people have a locomotive here, which they purpose placing on the laid track to prevent the farmers tearing up the track again.

GEN. FRENCH AT HALIFAX

Halifax, June 9.—Gen. Sir John French began his inspection here yesterday morning. He embarked at the King's wharf at 9 o'clock and proceeded to one of the outer harbor forts to witness the combined naval and military force attack on the fortresses from land and water. This lasted until noon. Yesterday afternoon he inspected Sandwich, Hugonin and Ives Point batteries and Fort Clarence. In the evening he was the guest of honor at a military dinner at Wellington Barracks.

The review of the permanent and local troops takes place on the common this afternoon.

Saw Went Through Body.

Penobsquie, N.B., June 9.—Edward L. Bowser of Sackville was instantly killed in his portable mill here last evening. He was standing about twenty feet from a big saw, which slipped off and crashed through his body. The saw went twenty feet after passing through Bowser's breast and head, striking on some timber. Bowser was horribly mangled, his body and skull being split open. His younger brother was standing nearby at the time.

ROUND-TABLE CONFERENCE

On the Veto Question is Highly Probable.

London, June 9.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Chronicle announces that a round-table conference on the veto question is highly probable. It says there is reason to believe the King earnestly desires that a resolute effort to find a peaceful solution of the crisis should be made by both parties. The Laborite strongly oppose a conference, on the ground that the Government's proposals represent an irreducible minimum. They will firmly demand that both the veto and finance legislation go on. A factor favoring such a conference is the fear that both parties have in the present mood of the country of appearing in any way to force a contest. It is reported, and with some authority, that though a conference may be held, nevertheless its success is extremely problematic.

Walter Long's announcement that any suggestion of a conference on the constitutional question by the Government would meet with a ready, willing and patriotic response by the Opposition, coupled with last evening's intimation in the House of Lords that Lord Rosebery's reform resolutions will not be proceeded with immediately, has again raised hopes of a settlement without an election. These hopes, however, are not strongly held. The Liberal demands are clear-cut, and undoubtedly the majority of the party are with the Irishmen.

JAMES McEWEN DENIES REPORT

Toronto, June 9.—A letter was received yesterday from James McEwing, M.P.P., (West Wellington) by Messrs. Proudfoot, Duncan, Grant & Skeans, solicitors for the legislative press gallery, denying absolutely the statements attributed to him in a report of his address at a meeting of the Liberal Association at Fergus on Thursday of last week.

In the letter received from Mr. McEwing, he denies emphatically that he ever used the words or insinuations attributed to him, and adds that personally he never had any complaint to make in regard to the fairness and accuracy of the work of the members of the press gallery.

INVESTIGATING U.S. RAILWAYS

Washington, June 9.—After a call at the White House yesterday with Senator Aldrich, to learn the President's views on various of the subjects at issue, Senator Elkins announced yesterday that he would call a meeting of the conference on the railroad bill to-day.

The President believes that the ten months allowed the Interstate Commerce Commission in which to investigate rates before acting on them is entirely too long a period. He thinks six months would be a better period.

Whatever influence the railroads have will be used to secure the shorter period. As to the supervision of the issuance of stocks and bonds, however, the railroads will vigorously oppose the putting of any such provision in the bill.

PUBLIC ELEVATORS ARE PROGRESSING

Winnipeg, June 9.—Applications from fifty different districts throughout Manitoba have been received up to the present by the provincial elevator commission for the erection of grain elevators.

The commission has a staff of 12 experts on the road investigating facilities and possible sites for public elevators.

The engineering department has been inaugurated with E. P. Steller as chief engineer. He is engaged at present in drafting a new elevator system for Manitoba. The Commission expects in a short time to have applications from sixty per cent. of the grain growers of Manitoba for the installation of the public elevator system at principal points in the province.

CONVOCATION AT TORONTO

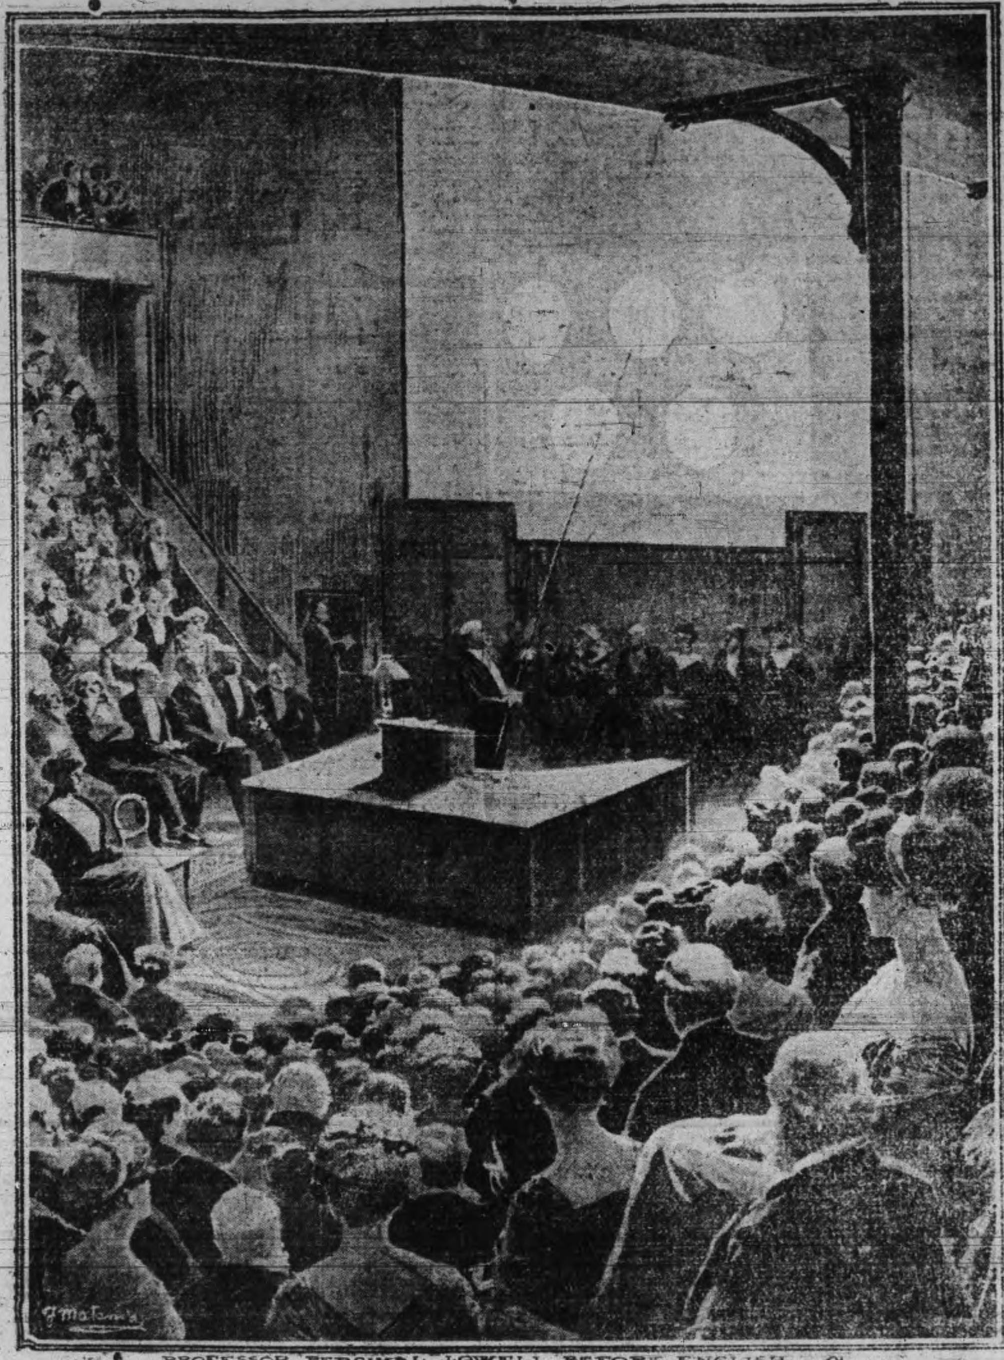
Toronto, June 9.—The annual commencement exercises of Toronto University begin to-day. As a preliminary, the Alumni Association will hold its meeting in Convocation Hall at 4.30 in the afternoon, and at the same place in the evening President Falconer will deliver his annual address to the graduating class, after which a reception will be held.

Convocation will be held on Friday afternoon, when the conferring of degrees will take place. Departing from the usual custom of presenting a large number of names for honorary degrees, the senate of the university have decided that no honorary degrees will be granted this year.

Unemployment Insurance.

Melbourne, June 9.—Premier Fisher, replying to an influential deputation from the Anglican Church, who pleaded for the early formulation of a compulsory scheme of national insurance against unemployment, promised that it should have the early consideration of the Cabinet. He regarded insurance, however, as only a temporary expedient.

AN AMERICAN LECTURES IN ENGLAND ON MARS



PROFESSOR PERCIVAL LOWELL BEFORE ENGLISH SCIENTISTS. — FROM THE SPHERE.

Professor Percival Lowell lectured on Mars before an exceptionally crowded audience, including the Earl of Halsbury, at the Royal Institution in London recently. He threw images of the ruddy planet on the screen. These images were not drawings made from visual observation, but were actual photographic records in which there was no personal intervention. The images were necessarily small, as the planet was some 40,000,000 miles distant from the plate when photographed, but they showed linear markings such as Schiaparelli and Professor Lowell have seen with their eyes.

PRESBYTERIAN ASSEMBLY DISCUSSES HOME FIELDS

Rev. Dr. E. D. McLaren's Report on Home Missions Recommends That the Salary of an Ordained Missionary be Raised to $1,000 and Manse.

Halifax, June 9.—Dr. E. D. McLaren, Toronto, yesterday finished, after a long and patient waiting, his report on "Home Missions." It recommended, for the catechists in the western division of the church an increase of $100 a year, and that the salary of an ordained missionary be raised to $1,000 and a manse. It was also proposed to borrow $25,000 from the reserve fund of the church, to be used to assist the building of manses, where the congregations are not able to come up to the regulation requiring that they provide 50 per cent. of the cost.

Two telegrams arrived from the Orange Order, asking the assembly to declare itself regarding the oath to be presented to His Majesty King George at his coronation. The moderator appointed a committee, consisting of Rev. Dr. J. F. McLaren, Owen Sound; Dr. D. D. McLeod, Barrie; Dr. J. A. Turnbull, Toronto; Walter Paul, Montreal, and Prof. Lyle, to deal with it.

Dr. C. W. Gordon, Winnipeg, spoke on the lack of students for the ministry. "When the students go back to college this fall," he said, "we will have 750 places of worship practically closed in the west. The Peace River district is quickly opening, where a population can go larger than all we have now west of Winnipeg. Are our colleges doing the business we expect of them? They have failed to dig up men. Ought we not to dig them up?

"No one would hesitate longer than I to lower the standard of ministerial education, but is it reasonable to allow classics or some other science to put a good, useful man down and out of any hope of becoming ordained?"

Dr. George Arthur of Vegreville, spoke of the opportunity to the church in doing her duty to the Ruthenian population.

"We have for long years assisted in the education of the foreigners," he said. "Now the Roman Catholic Church has got men from France and Austria to go to Galitia, study their language, and have come out to get them back to the Church of Rome. Their plan is to consolidate immigration of the French-Canadians and Ruthenians together, so that both may be Romanized in a block. We want schools. We are asking the assembly for permission to canvass for a building."

Dr. D. G. MacQueen of Edmonton said: "There are three men in my congregation who have guaranteed $10,000 each for the new college. The Roman Catholic Church is building a large boys' school, to stand prepared to grapple with the 'Galician problem.' Is the Presbyterian Church to stand by and look on?"

Rev. Wm. Beattie, Cobourg, said: "I cannot conscientiously support this. One church cannot support eight colleges."

Rev. D. Reid, superintendent of home missions, Alberta, said: "If, in one part of our church, we have three colleges in thirty miles, surely one can exist where it is 800 miles from the nearest of them. Union is not a fact yet."

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Mrs. Ruth Brislin died at Chantry, aged 102 years.

Earl and Lady Grey left Ottawa for England yesterday.

Rev. A. M. DePencier, formerly of Toronto, has been elected Bishop of New Westminster.

By the agreement made between the canner and the wholesale grocers canned goods are expected to be cheaper this year.

J. G. Desbarats, Deputy Minister of Marine, has been transferred to a similar position in the Naval Department, and Mr. Alex. Johnston of Cape Breton, ex-M.P., succeeds him.

Farmers' Excursion

The Farmers' Institute excursion to Guelph was largely patronized by the agriculturalists of this vicinity. The trip is for two days.

CONGREGATIONS SHOULD ASSUME MORE REVERENTIAL ATTITUTE

Toronto, June 9.—The twenty-seventh session of the Toronto Methodist conference commenced yesterday in Elm street Methodist Church, with a large attendance of both local and visiting clergy. Discussions on the qualifications of probationers, at the ministerial session, and the meeting of the Laymen's Association in the afternoon, were the features of the day's proceedings. The conference proper will commence to-day.

The probationers received for ordination in full church connection are: C. Jefferson McCombe, J. C. McClelland, Richard E. Morton, E. G. Sanders, Wm. E. Wilson, Stanley Trotter, Ernest H. Payne. At the request of the Alberta conference, John W. Miller and Edmund Barnes will also be ordained. The conference passed a resolution of sympathy with Rev. Dr. Sutherland in his illness.

Upwards of 100 members of the Laymen's Association of the Toronto conference were present. Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: President, C. H. C. Fortner, Toronto; first vice-president, Dr. W. E. Willmott, Toronto; second vice-president, Hon. Thomas Crawford, Toronto; third vice-president, H. H. Shaver, Cooksville; secretary-treasurer, A. B. Powell, Toronto.

That congregations should assume more reverential attitude during divine service and especially during prayers is the unanimous opinion of the Laymen's Association. A resolution to this effect was passed to ask the general conference to change the discipline so that the congregation will be expected to kneel in prayer, or at least bow their heads during prayer. In building of new churches, J. W. L. Forster was of the opinion that the architecture should be arranged to foster the kneeling habit.

The general conference will be petitioned to appoint one lay delegate for each probationer or minister, whether the latter be in active work or not. The formation of a department of "Christian Stewardship" in churches was also recommended by the Laymen's Association.

Sat Till Midnight.

Trenton, June 9.—The Bay of Quinte conference came to a close on Tuesday night about midnight.

The conference condemned the action of the Minister of Justice in the case of Skill and King, immoral book vendors. His resignation was demanded by a number, but the matter was not put to a vote.

TRAINS IN SMASH-UP

Chatham, Ont., June 9.—A smash-up occurred on the C.P.R. at Tilbury yesterday afternoon about half-past three o'clock, in which the passengers on the eastbound express had a very narrow escape from injury. A catastrophe was only averted by the presence of mind of the engineer of the express.

A freight train was shunting at Tilbury, when the express approached at a high rate of speed. The freight conductor saw the approaching train, and, the most of his train being on the main line, he saw that he would be unable to get off the main track in time to prevent a collision. His engine and a couple of cars were on the siding and his attempts to get them off to make the siding clear, so that he could switch the express on to it. The express was coming too fast, however, and in turning off on to the siding struck one of the freight cars. In the smash-up which followed, one freight car and a sand-loading apparatus were completely demolished. The passengers of the express were badly shaken up, and some of them were thrown from their seats.

The engineer of the express luckily saw the danger in time, and applied the emergency brakes, otherwise there would have been a rear-end collision with the main part of the freight. As it was, traffic was delayed only a few minutes and the tracks were soon cleared.

NO JURISDICTION OVER STEEL TRUST

Washington, June 9.—Attorney-General Wickersham has advised Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, that the Department of Justice has no jurisdiction over the assaults, batteries and acts of oppression which are alleged in the federation's charges against the U. S. Steel Corporation. These acts, the Attorney-General declares, are within the jurisdiction of the separate states in which they may have been committed.

An investigation of the legality of the Steel Corporation, which the federation charges to be a monopoly in restraint of trade, the Attorney-General declines to undertake, if at all, until the Supreme Court of the United States has determined the Government's cases against the Standard Oil and the American Tobacco Co.

BOMB FOUND ON THE BAR

New York, June 9.—Two broken windows in a Brooklyn saloon yesterday caused Policeman Timothy Daley to make an investigation. Entering the place he saw a bomb with sputtering fuse attached lying on the bar. Daley dared the danger, and, jumping behind the bar, he found a bucket of water and threw the bomb into it. Then he carried it to the middle of the street. Examination proved the bomb powerful enough to have wrecked the place and imperilled the lives of numbers of persons who lived in the building.

The owner of the place had recently received several letters threatening harm unless money was given the writers.

To Kill Bridge-Playing.

Baton Rouge, La., June 9.—Representative De Rouen has given notice of a bill in the lower House for "the absolute suppression of the playing of bridge whist."

"I am introducing this measure," declared Mr. De Rouen, "for the benefit of the children of my state, who rarely have an opportunity to know their bridge-playing mothers.

"It is also for the benefit of husbands who hardly have a speaking acquaintance with their bridge-playing wives."

Coronation of George V.

London, June 9.—It is reported that the coronation of King George will probably be set for June 21 or 28, 1911.

Donation for Children's Aid

The Children's Aid Society received $3 from the Ladies' Aid Society of the Gilmour Memorial Baptist church.

FRENCH BIRTH RATE DECREASES

Paris, June 9.—Vital statistics made public yesterday show a decrease in the birth rate in France. The births during 1909 were 770,000 against 792,000 in 1908. Since 1851 the population of the republic has increased 3,000,000 only, while the population of Germany in the same period has been increased by 30,000,000.

Mad Mullah Reported Shot.

CASTLE FELL ON THE TOWN

Was Shaken From Hilltop by an Earthquake.

Calitri, Italy, June 9.—The ruins of Calitri and adjoining villages were inspected yesterday by King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helena. Most of the houses in Calitri have been destroyed and the people who escaped from the effects of the earthquake are camping in the fields. Thirty-two bodies have been uncovered, while eight or ten more are thought to be still under the fallen walls. Two were taken out in the presence of the King.

One section of the town is almost completely buried under the walls of a feudal castle, which was toppled over by the first heavy shock and came crashing down the hill, crushing the houses below. The work of excavating is being carried on rapidly by the civil authorities and soldiers, but contrary to the experience at Messina and Reggio, no one is being unearthed alive. A two-year-old baby, however, was found close beside a heap of wreckage, unharmed.

The Sovereigns did not rest or sleep for thirty-six hours. When they departed last night for home there were touching demonstrations, many of the women kneeling before the Queen. The visit of their Majesties has done much towards restoring order and confidence.

BOUGHT MORE COAL MINES

Edmonton, June 9.—The Cardiff Commercial Mines at Morinville, embracing 500 acres of a surface and coal rights, have been sold to J. Anderson of O'Grady & Anderson of Winnipeg, acting it is understood, for Rod Mackenzie, a son of William Mackenzie of the Canadian Northern, for $300,000. The mine has a capacity at the present time of one thousand tons a day. Its plant is valued at $125,000. The purpose of the purchasers is to capitalize the new concern at $750,000 and to float the bonds in the old country.

GROCERS' GUILD ELECT OFFICERS

Montreal, June 9.—The Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild adjourned at noon, to meet next year at Toronto. Officers were elected as follows:

Simons, Halifax; Manitoba, H. B. Gordon, Winnipeg; Alberta, W. Georgeson, Calgary; British Columbia, Robert Kelly, Vancouver.

Five Killed In Mine Accident.

Dover, N.J., June 9.—Five men were killed in the Richard mine, near here, Tuesday night, according to news received here yesterday afternoon, by the overturning of a car in which the men were being drawn to the mouth of the mine. The five miners fell a distance of 75 feet down the shaft.

DETROIT WILL BE TERMINUS

Windsor, June 9.—Beginning June 27, Detroit will take the place of Walkerville as the terminus of the Canadian division of the Pere Marquette Railway.

Under the new arrangements the trains will be moved across the river on transfer boats, landed at C.P.R. dock, Windsor, and sent around belt line to Walkerville Junction, at which point they will connect with a plug train running between Walkerville and the Junction.

Tariff Changes Contemplated.

Ottawa, June 9.—An order-in-council will shortly be issued placing on the free list a number of articles for manufacturing purposes.

Holland is to be added to the countries with which trade agreements are to be made, and it is announced that such alliances with it, Belgium and Italy are to become effective on June 10.

First License Board.

Victoria, June 9.—The recent civic election in Prince Rupert, being fully indicative that the citizens favor licenses and regulation of the liquor traffic, as elsewhere in the province, the Government appointed Ald. Vernon Smith and Joseph Merrifield as license commissioners; these, with Mayor Stork constituting the first license board of Prince Rupert.

Cook to Sue Peary.

Berlin, June 9.—According to Lokal Anzieger, Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the Arctic explorer, has instituted suit in the Berlin court against Commander Robert E. Peary. The paper says that Cook seeks to recover $10,000, which he alleges to be due him in payment for bear skins and other polar products delivered to the commander.

THE BARRIER AT THE GATE

The Laurier Government forgets that Canada is a British possession, and any attempt, as the present one, to place barriers in the way of honest men and women seeking to find in this country the opportunities denied them in the older lands, is a direct and deliberate blow to the unity of the Empire. The Laurier band plays the loyalty tune loudly, but ever and anon a jarring note of discord rings in.

If Mr. Oliver is really anxious to introduce a policy of "hand picked" immigration, he must drop these American notions and put into force regulations which, while rigorous, are fair and just. To insult a stranger at our threshold is barbarous, and to permit officials to have such sweeping powers as now exist under the new act, is little short of folly.

The west is crying out loudly and constantly for hired men. Ontario is in the same boat, and throughout the length and breadth of Canada there is a need, in some districts acute, of the brawn and muscle of the old land.

Then the question arises: Why spend hundreds of thousands of dollars in advertising Canada as a land of promise, as a country overflowing with milk and honey, with fields of golden grain, and trees groaning under fruity burdens, if the gate is locked to the would-be settler as soon as he knocks thereat for admittance!

The whole thing is the height of absurdity.

THE STRONG RIGHT ARM

Any young gentleman who is anticipating becoming a lawyer, bank manager, doctor, editor, moulder, printer, barber, baker, clerk, minister or bookmaker had better quit right now.

Become a bruiser, knock some one out, go on the stage and make a barrel of money.

If he does get knocked out it will not make much difference, so long as he has a good press agent, who will issue plenty of challenges and keep him in the glare of the calcium.

He will never make more than five thousand a year, it is likely, so long as he sticks to regular business, but if he hits a fellow on the jaw and knocks him down in the prize ring for ten seconds, he is liable to make enough to keep him in style for all the rest of his life, and think of the money in the moving picture films of the mill, and how he can have the centre of the stage in a play written specially for him.

The world gapes at the bruiser who has won a championship, but passes the fellow who has saved a life, written the song or the book, unnoticed.

It is expected that 50,000 seats will be provided for the Jeffries-Johnson fight to be pulled off in California on July 4th, when this star attraction for the descendants of the Puritan fathers will take place, with prices running from $5 to $20 for a seat. Figure it out. Perhaps $75,000 made by a lucky punch. Quit your planning, gentlemen, and become a bruiser.

THE BLUSHING BRIDE

The June brides of Nyasaland in Central Africa do not bother much with a trousseau. Glass beads about the neck, and a pair of bracelets about her wrist complete the costume. She does not fear the rice getting down her back.

Last June a groom across the line in departing was met with the usual shower of rice and a grain lodged in his ear, inflammation set in, and the bride became a widow almost ere she had worn all her new clothes. The wedding was a quiet one as usual, for it is only once in a while when the Salvation Army have a wedding, that there is any noise.

But Bedlam breaks loose with the going and the blushing, bewildered bride and nervous groom are the butt of missiles, according to the mind of the wedding party.

However, in Nyasaland, the bride goes quietly to the home of her husband and starts the new life. But then, they are only Africans.

A DIAMOND SET DOG COLLAR

Yesterday in London, England, Miss Margaretta Drexel, an heiress of Philadelphia, fell down at the shrine of nobility and was married to Guy Montagu George Finch Hatton, Viscount Maidstone. The wedding presents exhibited were valued at $500,000.

Yesterday in London, England, thousands homeless, wandered hungry, hapless, hopeless and wretched. Destitute written on their rags, want traced on their faces, despair in their eyes.

The scene at the wedding was a brilliant one—a dream. The scene among the poor was hideous, a nightmare.

One of the gifts was a dog collar set in diamonds—can one wonder that socialism is growing?

THE FLORAL TRIBUTES

The grave is very blind and doesn't know a rose from a cabbage head. The piling of flowers on the casket and filling the room of death with a sickening odor, is often but an apology too late, for kindnesses undone and pleasant words unspoken. This hour, this day, this very moment, is the time to play fair in life's great game, and is the opportunity to make the man next door happy with deed, word or smile. Do not wait to buy flowers for the coffin. Buy them now.

THE POINT OF VIEW

ETHICS.

Life

Ethics is a set of rules formulated by the sophisticated for the unsophisticated, and called moral because nobody knows what "moral" means. Ethics, therefore, like justice, may mean almost anything.

THE ASHMAN.

Vancouver Sunset.

The ashman was raising a can of ashes above his head to dump the contents into his cart, when the bot- Ethel saw it and ran in and told her mother.

"I hope you didn't listen to what he said," the mother remarked.

"He didn't say a word to me," replied the little girl; "he just walked right off by the side of his cart, talking to God."

FROM THE WILDS.

Sudbury Star.

There is a moose with a huge set of magnificent horns prowling about in this community. It seems to be tame and is willing to hold its own against the other animals that make rushes upon it. The moose made its first appearance on Thursday morning and seemed to be on its way to the main part of the town when it turned back.

NOT A ROWBOAT BETWEEN THEM

Saturday Evening Post.

Former Senator Dubois, of Idaho, who has been in Washington for a time this past session, heard an argument out in Boise City between two Irishmen concerning the advisability of a great navy. It was at the time of the Japanese scare, and the people in the far western country were all wrought up.

"I'm wid Teddy on this," said one. "We must have a big navy. The bigger the better, say I. No nation can be thruly great without a navy. No nation ever has."

"Whist!" put in the other Irishman. "No nation has ever been great without a navy? Look at Ireland an' the Jews, an' thim widout a rowboat bechune thim!"

A STORY OF FORREST.

The Actor's Encounter With an Impertinent Critic.

Many years ago Edwin Forrest, the celebrated actor, when in New York was in the habit of dining at Windust's, a noted restaurant on Park row that was a favorite resort of actors and literary men. It usually happened that Forrest would be joined by friends and that the little group would sit together at one table. On one occasion it chanced that an Englishman with a reputation for conceit and impertinence, who had scraped acquaintance with the tragedian, was one of the group.

Early in the course of the dinner the Englishman began to make criticisms which he considered pleasantries about Forrest's conception of certain roles. Encouraged by his own appreciation, he gave full play to his humor and concluded each of his impertinences with "Pardon my freedom, sir—it's my way."

To the astonishment of all who knew Forrest's irascible disposition he bore the Briton's offensive remarks patiently and seemingly ignored them as far as possible. When, however, the nuts were brought in by the waiter he took several cracked walnuts in his hand and, walking over to the Briton's place, jocularly snapped them successively in the face of that individual, lightly saying after each shot, "Pardon my freedom, sir—it's my way," and snapped him out of the restaurant.

SPEED OF WAVES.

Over Seventy-eight Miles an Hour Has Been Recorded.

Interesting facts about waves were given by Dr. Vaughan Cornish in one of his lectures. In the north Atlantic, he said, waves had been measured, the largest of which was somewhat more than forty feet high, with a length from crest to crest of 560 feet. It was in the southern Indian ocean that waves attained their fullest development, and they had been measured there with a length of 780 feet.

In the Atlantic it had been found that waves attained a speed of thirty-eight miles an hour in a wind of about forty-four miles an hour. Speaking of the swells in the waves that run freely on the surface of the sea after the wind has ceased, Dr. Cornish said that during a storm in December, 1898, he recorded breakers near Bournemouth which moved at sixty-seven miles an hour and had a length from crest to crest of 1,900 feet. In February, 1899 he observed breakers on the same shore which had a speed in deep water of not less than seventy-eight and a half miles an hour.—London Family Herald.

When Kissing Was Costly.

The case of the people against Murline, heard by the governor of New Haven colony in council on May day, 1660, indicates the attitude toward unlicensed kissing in those times. It appeared that Jacob Murline and Sarah Tuttle had been caught kissing each other. Jacob tried to throw the blame on Sarah, saying he thought she had "with intent let fall her gloves." Sarah denied the intent. Jacob then admitted that he "tooke her by the hand and they both sat down upon a chest, but whether he kyssed her or she kyssed him he knows not, for he never thought of it since until Mr. Raymond told him that he had not layde it to heart as he ought." The stern governor, after duly lecturing the guilty parties on the enormity of their offense, decreed that "the sentence therefore concerning them is that they shall pay either of them a fine of 20 shillings to the colony."

Khartum.

Khartum owes its existence to an oriental form of treachery. When Khedive Mohammed Ali invaded the Sudan in 1820 he marched triumphantly to Shendi, where his troops were entertained at a banquet by the submissive natives. But while the khedive's high officials were seated at the feast they shared the fate of the viands and were themselves reduced to funeral baked meats. Full of fury, the army fell on Shendi and demolished it. Marching south, the invaders reached the junction of the Blue Nile and White Nile. With the conqueror's instinct they recognized that the strip of land, with its few fishermen's huts of straw, formed ideal strategical headquarters, so Khartum finally grew into the most sensitive part of the Sudan organism.

Doubling Up.

A boy of eight years was asked by his teacher where the zenith was. He replied. "That spot in the heavens directly over one's head."

To test his knowledge further the teacher asked:

"Can two persons have the same zenith at the same time?"

"They can."

"How?"

"If one stand on the other's head."

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, June 8.—(Special.)—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market, the offerings of live stock this morning were 600 cattle, 400 sheep and lambs, 850 hogs and 1400 calves. Prices for steers were well maintained, but the feeling in the market for cows and bulls was weaker, and prices show a sharp decline. Choice steers sold at 7¼c to 7½c; good at 6¾c to 7c; fairly good at 6¼c to 6½c, and fair at 6c per pound.

The top figure realized for cows was 5¼c, and sales were made from that down to 4c per pound. Bulls were somewhat of a drug on the market, and top quality stock only brought 6c, and the lower grades sold as low as 4c per pound.

The undertone to the market for small meats was strong, and prices generally were higher. The supply was a little larger, but the demand was very good, and in consequence a fairly active trade was done. Sheep sold at 4¾c to 6½c per pound, lambs at $5 to $7 each, and calves at $4 to $7 each.

The condition of the market for hogs was unchanged from Monday, prices being firm. Supplies were larger, and sales of selected lots were made at $10 to $10.25 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market there were 300 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 600 hogs and 150 calves. A fair trade was done in all lines, and the prices realized were much the same as those quoted above, with the exception of hogs, for which $10 was the ruling figure for selected lots, weighed off cars.

Farmers Are Prosperous.

Chatham, June 9.—The prosperity of the farmers of Kent was forcibly exemplified to the county council yesterday when it was reported that there were scarcely enough taxes overdue to justify a tax sale, which will be postponed until next year.

The county council decided to petition the Ontario Government to pass more stringent regulations regarding the preservation of the natural gas in the Tilbury field. It is claimed that many of the drillers for oil are allowing vast quantities of the gas to escape into the air that they may drill deeper for oil, thus depleting the gas area.

HIS REVENGE.

[M]an Was First Ruined, Then [M]ade Rich In a Peculiar Way.

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN.

[Copyri]ght, 1910, by American Press Association.]

[J]ohn Emsley and Peter Fogg were [youn]g men in the wool business [in Lond]on. Emsley was a fine, open [hearte]d man, who preferred to do [busin]ess on generous principles, while [Fo]gg was a shaver.

Emsley, being of a speculative turn of mind, took risks, lost and got himself involved financially. He had done his partner many favors. Indeed, Fogg was indebted to him for all he was. Emsley therefore looked to Fogg to help him out. He owed Fogg a thousand pounds, but looked to him not only to give him time on the amount, but lend him money to tide him over with his other creditors. Fogg not only declined to lend, but forced Emsley into bankruptcy on his own claim. A week after Emsley had been ruined there was a change in the wool market that would have made him rich.

Emsley went to Australia, where he endeavored to recoup, but luck was against him, and nothing that he touched brought him money. He sank lower and lower in worldly goods till at last, being discouraged and having a fancy for the water, he turned fisherman.

He never forgot Fogg's ingratitude, constantly brooding over the many substantial favors he had done Fogg and the fact that when the turning point of his own life came and a little assistance was needed the man he had made unmade him. He lived in a cab[i]n by himself on one of the points that [in]close Sydney harbor. He would be [ou]t all day on the water and while [wa]iting for fish to take his hook [he w]ould think how delightful it would be could he be revenged on Fogg—not that he ever seriously considered such revenge as possible; it was a sort of monomania with him.

One night after going to sleep, his mind given over to these desires for revenge, he dreamed that he was out on the bay and was pulling in a large fish. He had much trouble landing it, but when he did so and cut it open he found within its belly an enormous diamond. He was familiar with the size of the famous diamonds of the world and knew that this one of his dream was worth a great fortune.

"I will sell it," he said, "go to London and use it to revenge myself on Fogg."

He awoke with the disappointment usual to persons who have had delightful dreams that have turned out to be dreams only. Going out on the water as usual during the day, a shark swallowed the bait on one of his lines. He killed the shark and was about to cut his line that the fish might drift away when he remembered his dream. Yielding to an impulse, he towed the shark ashore and cut him open. In his stomach he found a London newspaper. Taking it into his cabin, he dried it and that night before going to bed opened its sheets to read the news from home. On the first page he saw in large letters the words:

"War declared between France and Germany."

There was then no cable to Australia, and this shark had brought the news faster than the steamer carrying the mail that would doubtless soon arrive. Where had the shark swallowed the paper? That the shark itself only knew. Possibly it had been thrown overboard from a ship that had received it at a port where it had been sent by rail.

It did not require a long time for Emsley to see in this news that he alone possessed the diamond of his dream. When the next steamer arrived with it the price of wool would take an enormous jump. Emsley went to a wealthy wool dealer whom he knew and told him the story of the shark, withholding the news found in the paper, but asserting its importance.

"When the next steamer arrives," he said, "the price of wool will undergo an important change for the better or worse. Agree to buy or sell as I direct and pay me 75 per cent of your profits and I will produce my newspaper." The merchant stood for better terms, but Emsley threatened to take the matter to another, and an attorney was called in who wrote a contract between the two men. Then Emsley produced his paper, and the merchant bought up the season's clip, averaging 9 pence per pound. The very next day a steamer arrived with the news of war between France and Germany. Wool jumped in price and continued to rise till it reached 3 shillings, when the wool purchased under the contract was sold. The transaction cleared for Emsley £3,000,000.

A few months later Mr. Fogg was sitting in his office in London. He had sold out his wool business which he had formerly owned in partnership with Emsley for a handsome sum and had become what is commonly called a scalper on the stock exchange, buying odd lots of stock and selling them for a very small profit. Looking up from his desk, he saw his old partner Emsley looking at him.

Fogg was an older man than Emsley, and since their parting his hair had whitened. There had been no quarrel between the two men. Indeed, Emsley had never uttered a word of reproach to his partner. Fogg stretched out his hand, and Emsley took it, though he did not grasp it heartily.

"I've come back," he said, "with a few pounds to make a new start."

Fogg, who had always regretted his action in precipitating his partner's failure, offered him what little assistance was in his power and asked him to come to his house and renew his acquaintance with his family.

"Is your little daughter Gladys there?" asked Emsley.

"Little! Gladys is a woman, nineteen years old."

"Oh, I forgot!" replied Emsley. "I remember her as a child who used to sit on my lap with her arms about my neck."

Emsley had imposed a condition of secrecy on the wool dealer in Australia as to his connection with the transaction that had made them both rich and was known to his friends in London as a poor man. He was still thirsting for revenge upon his former partner. One day he remarked to Fogg that stock of the Excelsior Gold Mining company of Australia that was selling at a very high figure on the exchange was worthless. Emsley said that he had lived in the region of the mine and there was no gold there. Fogg, seeing a chance to make money when the bubble should burst, sold a large number of shares to be delivered in the future, intending to buy them when they were selling for a song and make the difference in price.

The shares of the Excelsior Mining company, notwithstanding the tip given Mr. Fogg by his former partner, continued to advance. Emsley advised his partner to sell more. "The higher the price the greater will be the fall," he said. And so Fogg continued to sell while the price continued to rise. The speculator began to grow uneasy. It was rumored that there was no Excelsior stock for sale. Fogg had agreed to deliver his shares on a certain date, and if he could not buy them to deliver he would have to go into bankruptcy. He did not know that the man he had ruined had them all locked up in his vault.

Emsley had shrunk from visiting the family of the man he proposed to ruin. He had put off his appearance at Fogg's home until Fogg showed that he noticed his virtual refusal of hospitality, then made the call.

Crimes have been committed for love, but many a hand has been stayed by the same cause. Indeed, by love the world has been drawn from barbarism. Emsley was received by Gladys Fogg. When he saw her advancing toward him with outstretched hand, a smile on her lips, a warm welcome in her eyes, his scheme of vengeance tumbled like castles in the air. Gladys was the only being from whom before leaving England he had received any evidence of affection. The difference of many years then between them had melted away now that she was a young woman, he a middle aged man. In the soul that came out to him through the smile and the eye he saw something to make life worth living.

One day there was an exciting scene on the exchange. The price of Excelsior gold mining stock was going up ten or twenty points with every bid. Fogg had contracted to deliver the shares he had sold the next morning. To pay the market price for them would ruin him. When the exchange closed with 500 bid for the stock and none offered Fogg went home knowing that he would not be able to keep his agreement. In other words, he was a ruined man.

The next morning Emsley appeared at Fogg's office. Fogg looked up at him, then bent his eyes again to the floor.

"You would like some Excelsior stock, I suppose?" Emsley remarked unconcernedly.

Fogg looked at him again, but did not speak.

"How many shares have you sold?" asked Emsley.

Fogg named the number of shares. Emsley took a fat envelope from his pocket and threw it on Fogg's desk. Fogg opened it, took out a number of stock certificates, looked at several of them, then turned his eyes inquiringly on Emsley.

"Use what you need of them," said Emsley, "to make your deliveries today; tomorrow the bubble will burst."

Fogg met his contracts with the stock lent him and when the collapse came the next day purchased what he had sold, clearing a handsome profit.

When Emsley appeared under his true colors as a multimillionaire Fogg called on him to speak his gratitude for what he could not understand.

"Your thanks are not due to me," said Emsley, "but to the little girl whom we both love."

SOCIETY WOMEN'S HAIR

A Simple Treatment that Will Make it Truly Fascinating—Wm. Madill Guarantees It

Nowadays every up-to-date woman has radiant hair.

What a foolish creature a woman would be if she lost the opportunity to add to her attraction.

Yet in Canada to-day there are hundreds of thousands of women with harsh, faded, characterless hair who do not make any attempt to improve it.

In Paris most women have beautiful hair, and in Canada all women who use Parisian Sage have lustrous and luxuriant hair.

And any woman reader of the Review, can have attractive and lustrous hair in a few days' time by using this great hair rejuvenator, Parisian Sage.

Wm. Madill sells a large bottle for 50 cents and he guarantees it to banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

The Woman and the Serpent.

P. T. Barnum and his wife were very fond of the gifted sisters Alice and Phoebe Cary, who often visited them at Bridgeport. To a friend the famous showman once remarked: "Alice was the more thoughtful, while Phoebe was always bubbling over with good spirits and wit. I never knew a brighter woman. One day I was taking her and some friends through my museum. At the head of the stairs was the cage containing 'the happy family,' which included owls, cats, mice, serpents and other creatures generally mortal enemies, but all living in perfect harmony, mainly because we kept them so stuffed with food that they had no temptation to prey on one another. The cage stood directly at the head of the stairs, and just as we reached the top a big serpent stretched its head toward Phoebe. Forgetting the glass that separated them, she was so startled that she uttered a scream and would have fallen backward down the steps had I not caught her. Looking up to me, she said: 'Thank you, Mr. Barnum! But remember that I am not the first woman that the serpent has caused to fall.'"

An Infantile Composite.

"Well, really, I can't say that I think that he looks just like any one in particular," said the mother of Master George Herbert Sanderson Spriggins, four weeks old, to a caller who was having the privilege of seeing George Herbert Sanderson Spriggins for the first time. "I don't think that he has his father's chin, and his nose is just like my father's, and his eyes remind me of my sister Helen's. The shape of his face is a good deal like his father's brother Joe's, and sometimes when he laughs he reminds me of my brother Ted. Often when he is asleep I think that he resembles my uncle George, and again he has a way of half closing his eyes that makes me think of his grandfather Spriggins. I think he is growing to look more like my side of the house excepting for the upper part of his face, and that reminds me of his father's family. Still, I can't say that he really looks just like any one but himself unless it is my sister Eva's little boy. Strange how family resemblances crop out in mere babies, isn't it?"—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

AN AMBITIOUS MUSICIAN.

Donald Heins of Ottawa Has Toiled Hard.

It is quite natural to suppose that the winning by the Ottawa Symphony Orchestra, three years in succession of the Earl Grey Musical Trophy will arouse much curiosity as to the individuality and methods of Mr. Donald Heins, the organizer and conductor of the orchestra. Mr. Heins is an Englishman, not yet forty years of age. His musical education was acquired in England and on the continent of Europe. His speciality is the violin, and before he came to Canada, some eight or ten years ago, his services were much in requisition in London as a soloist. He is also a capable organist and pianist, and almost ever since going to Ottawa he has been organist of Knox Church, which has one of the largest Presbyterian congregations in the capital. Of late years, with an augmented choir and full orchestra, he has given one of the standard oratorios in the church each spring. He is best known in Ottawa, however, by his work in connection with the Canadian Conservatory of Music, which is affiliated with the Ottawa Ladies College. The present symphony orchestra, in which, by the way, Mrs. Heins plays leading violin, is the outcome of a string orchestra organized in a modest way, but with great ambitions, no longer than four years ago, with Mr. Heins' pupils as a nucleus. The ambition of Donald Heins is to become a great conductor. For the achievement of his goal he has both instinct and determination. Having collected a nucleus, as explained, he proceeded, according to his own language, to "lick them into shape" by the method that spells success in every sphere. He first breathed into the organization enthusiasm and the desire of achievement, and then he made it work. Practice, practice, and then more practice, was what he preached. The entire week before his orchestra went to Toronto to take part in the Earl Grey competition, Heins set aside all his professional engagements and devoted every morning, afternoon and evening to rehearsals of the orchestra.

Here is an example of Donald Heins' thoroughness. For rounding off the strings in an orchestra, a certain number of wind instruments are needed. Now the best "wind" players in Ottawa as in other Canadian cities, are all professionals and belong to the musical union. So Heins had difficulty in getting wind players accustomed to the class of music played by his orchestra. He had to draw them from the military bands. To facilitate his work, therefore, it was desirable that there should be at least one military band in Ottawa from which he could recruit the sort of players he needed. If that military band could be conducted and trained by himself, might he not be able to train up players suitable for his orchestra? Heins accepted, with all the drudgery and time it represents, the leadership of the brass band of the 43rd, Duke of Cornwall's Own Rifles. This was only a little over a year ago. The band was then in a state of disorganization, but he has already brought it up to a high standard, but what is more to the point so far as Mr. Heins is personally concerned, he has already obtained for his orchestra much greater wind efficiency. Heins has shown himself such a good military band conductor that an American city recently offered him a position as band leader at a salary equal to what he is making for all his work in Ottawa, providing he would confine his attention to the band. Heins declined. It was a side trail away from his desired goal.

A Heroine of the Boer War.

Lady Sarah Wilson, who with her husband and party, recently passed through Canada on her way home from Australia, was, it will be remembered, one of the heroines of the one of the popular heroines of the South African War. By the way, the newspaper despatches have been somewhat mixed up as to the composition of the party, speaking of Captain Wilson as Lady Sarah's husband and mention that Col. Wilson is "also one of the party." As a matter of fact, Lieut.-Col. Wilson is her ladyship's husband, having obtained two grades of promotion from the captaincy he held at the time he served on Baden-Powell's staff during the defence of Mafeking. He is in his forty-fifth year and is the eldest son of the late Sir Samuel Wilson, M.P. He entered the Royal Horse Guards in 1887 and was twice mentioned in despatches for his services on the staff in South Africa. His wife was such a popular heroine during the war that the fame won by her soldier husband was somewhat overshadowed. Lady Sarah (Isabella Augusta) Wilson is the sixth daughter of the seventh Duke of Marlborough and is consequently an aunt of Winston Churchill, whom she resembles in venturesome disposition. It will be recalled that during the South African war she was taken prisoner by the Boers outside Mafeking and was later exchanged for a Boer prisoner. Her book, South African Memories," was one of the brightest, literary products of the great war.

Where Is Tecumseh's Grave?

Considerable interest has been added to the discussion over the whereabouts of the grave of the great Indian chief Tecumseh, by the story which comes from an old British soldier now living in England, to the effect that Tecumseh was buried in the bottom of McGregor's Creek, near Chatham. Indians were often known to bury their fallen braves in water to keep them from being scalped by their enemies.

It is said that Tecumseh's body has never been taken up, so that the stories that he was buried at Moraviantown, Wallaceburg, or Stanne Island cannot be true. The old soldier who is responsible for the story was a long time member of the old Twenty-fourth Regiment of Chatham. An effort is now being made to get into communication with him.

FILLING CREAM PUFFS.

The Salesman Learns Something of a Long Admired Industry.

"From the time I was a very small boy until I began to sell cream of tartar," said the ex-salesman, "I had an overwhelming curiosity to know how they got the filling inside the two articles of diet which as a youngster I liked best in the world—chocolate eclairs and cream puffs. Now that I know I can't understand why with all the thought I gave to the subject I didn't figure it out for myself. It's so simple.

"Of course you don't have to be a baker to know you can't bake an eclair with the filling in it. It's got to be made separately and put in after you've got the shell all made and baked. When I got selling cream of tartar and used to go behind the scenes of the bakeshops I found out how they did it. They use a force pump. The pump has a needle-like spout and is filled with soft custard. You stick the point into the eclair, push down your pump handle and the thing is filled. Easy, isn't it? It's such a little hole that you never see it.

"I never got tired watching them work in the bakeries. There would be a big pile of fresh baked shells of eclairs and cream puffs. A man would seize the little pump and in a minute or two have them all filled. Another man would be shaping pies so fast that it made you dizzy. Along would come another man with a wagon full of fillings and fill the pies as fast as the other shoved them along. It's the same way with everything—so different, you know, from mother's methods.

"As for the baker's oven, if you have never seen one you've got a surprise coming. There's only one oven to a bakeshop generally, and it's as big as a room. How do they get things in and out? Easy, again. They use long poles with a shovel-like arrangement on the end. They put their cakes, or whatever the batch may be, in this, and if they want to they can deposit them on the farther side of the oven, fifteen or twenty feet away. In the same way when a thing is done they reach in over whatever else may be baking and shovel it up."

"BATHTUB TRUST" LATEST COMBINE

A $10,000,000 Combination according to Wall Street Reports—Householders Will be Seriously Affected by the Rise in Prices.

Special to the Review.

New York, N.Y., June 9.—According to Wall street reports to-day a $10,000,000 combination is being formed which, if perfected, will doubtless be called the "Bathtub Trust." Already the new combine has ordered a rise in the price of its products from 20 to 30 per cent., which will mean something like a $25,000,000 annual tax upon the peolpe of the United States. Sixteen companies are involved.

They manufacture not only tubs, but also almost every other kind of sanitary enamelled device. The rise of prices would affect every householder wh olives according to the holder who lives according to the

The corporations in the combination control 95 per cent. of the total output.

FATHER WILL PRESS CLAIM FOR DAMAGES AGAINST CITY

Mr. A. Ashcroft, father of Arthur Ashcroft, says that his little son did not climb the fence that fell and injured him last Monday week.

Mr. Ashcroft claims that the fence was in bad repair and that when the boy leaned on it it gave way. The falling of the fence injured young Ashcroft so badly that 12 stitches were necessary to close an ugly wound in his lip. The injury will be visible for life.

The doctor's bill was $10, $5 for chloroform. Other incidentals will bring the amount up to $20 more. Mr. Ashcroft will press his suit against the city for damages on behalf of his son, who has plenty of witnesses to show that he was not on the fence when it fell.

THOROUGHLY PLEASED WITH PROGRESS OF CONVENTION

Rev. Dr. McLean of Colborne Speaks Highly of Hospitality of Peterboro Anglicans and Those of Other Denominations—A Gratifying Stimulus to Rural Sunday School Work

Rev. Mr. McLean, of Colborne, the joint secretary, and inaugurator of the convention in progress at St. John's school, is very highly pleased with the success of the convention and says he cannot speak in too cordial terms of the hospitality of the Anglicans of Peterborough and those of other denominations as well.

"The churchmen of Peterborough have thrown open their doors to the delegates," said Mr. McLean, in an interview with the Review this morning, "and citizens outside the church have also been most generous and considersate. If it were not for this hospitality the convention could not have been a success.

"In answer to your question as to the results I may say on behalf of those interested that they have been very satisfactory and excellent practical progress has been made, especially in view of the fact that the convention is the first one to be held in the Archdeaconry of Peterborough.

"One of the most gratifying facts is that the rural man has been reached. In rural communities Sunday school work has not been taken up with interest by all the members of the different congregations, but a great deal has been left for one or two to do and in some cases the schools have been neglected altogether.

"As the result of the convention I feel sure that a lively and necessary interest will be created in the work of the rural Sunday schools.

"Of course everything in the convention has not proceeded in absolute harmony, but those who understand affairs of this character think the arrangements have been well carried out.

"The convention committee is very much indebted to the local hospitality committee. The chairman, Mr. James Edgar and Mr. R. J. Devey, the other member of the committee, have performed their duties with dispatch and in a way thoroughly satisfactory to all the clergy and the delegates."

SECOND SUMMER CONFERENCE OF THE CANADIAN Y.M.C.A.

First of all it is a Summer Conference, when the voice of nature would call us from town and business to the country, the "Summerland of Muskoka," a paradise of lakes and island and forest. Happy are those who can obey the voice of nature, calling them to herself; happier those who know that the voice of nature is calling them on to nature's God.

And then a conference presents such a delightful feeling of friendship and comradeship. For we are asked to meet together for discussion, to learn not only from God Himself, but from one another. There will be morning and evening sessions. The programme will consist of Bible study, mission study, conferences on various phases of association work, inspirational and missionary addresses.

Among the speakers expected at the conference are President Falconer, University of Toronto; Principal T. R. O'Meara, Wycliffe College; Prof. Gilmour, Rev. J. A. Macdonald, of the Globe, Toronto; Rev. John McNeill, Toronto; Rev. S. Woodsworth, Winnipeg, and others, among them a number of returned missionaries.

The afternoon will be given up for recreation. A special committee plans for launch trips through the lakes, bathing, boating, picnics, tennis and other sports.

Who may attend the Y.W.C.A. Summer Conference? All members of both city and student associations, and all other girls who would spend an enjoyable and profitable ten days' vacation on Lake Joseph, being in sympathy with association ideals and purpose. Miss McCalla will be glad to hear from those who would like fuller particulars regarding the conference.

IMPORTANT CONVENTION OF MISSIONARY WORKERS

The women of the Missionary Society of the Methodist church will own Peterborough for three days next week, when the Bay of Quinte branch of the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist church of Canada will meet in Charlotte street church. There will be 150 delegates here. It will commence on June 14 and end June 16th, 1910.

The Y.W.C.A. will have a hand in this. They will feed the visiting delegation on Tuesday, giving them a spread.

All manner of missionary topics will be discussed.

This will be the 17th annual meeting.

FREE BOARD FOR THIRTY DAYS

Mr. Matthew Little, of Belmont, and Mr. C. E. Sager, of town, had an altercation over a buggy on Tuesday last, and when the dust had settled Mr. Sager had sustained a severe scalp wound from the butt end of a whip and painful bruises from the business end of a fence picket. The sequel took place before Magistrate Edmison at the police court here on Tuesday afternoon, when Little was fined $5 and costs, amounting to $17.25 in all, or twenty days in jail. He took the latter and will reside at "Castle Nesbitt" in Peterborough during the next three weeks.—Havelock Standard.

Rev. J. P. Wilson to Stay

At the Bay of Quinte conference of the Methodist church, held in Trenton, very few changes were made in the second draft of stations. In connection therewith it will be learned with pleasure by the congregation of Cambridge St. church and the citizens generally, that Rev. J. P. Wilson will remain in Lindsay, notwithstanding the fact that an effort was made to secure his services as pastor elsewhere.—Lindsay Post.

Wm. Laburtis, a colored man, of Woodstock, aged 70, took his life by shooting.

ABSORBING ADDRESS ON CHILD PSYCHOLOGY FEATURE OF TRAINING SCHOOL SESSION

Practical and Illuminating Treatment of a Primarily Important Subject by Dr. Park of the Normal School Staff -- Other Topics Handled With Authority by Interesting Speakers -- A Review of the Proceedings.

Yesterday afternoon saw the opening at St. John's school house of the teachers' training school, being held in connection with the Anglican Sunday school convention of the Archdeaconry of Peterborough.

The two day's session of the convention on Monday and Tuesday was most successful, the different topics being presented in an original and very instructive way.

A feature of the convention and of the opening day of the school was the keen interest showed by the delegates. The large attendance and the enthusiasm of the audience were most inspiring to the speakers and showed a full appreciation of the splendid presentation of their subjects.

The prime mover in the convention, Rev. J Russell McLean, of Colborne, deserves abundant praise for his splendid methods of organization and also for his well directed efforts in the immediate work of the convention. The progressive secretary, Rev. F. L. Barber, of Bobcaygeon, has also been a most interested and efficient officer. The hearty co-operation of the other clergy and the laity were essential features in making the convention an emphatic and encouraging success.

At the opening of the teacher's school yesterday afternoon addresses were given by Rev. H. R. Trumpour, Rev. C. V Pilcher, Rev. J. Russell McLean and Rev. C. H. Brooks.

ORDER AND DISCIPLINE.

Rev. H, R Trumpour, rector of All Saints', in his address on "Order and Discipline," stated it depended on many things, among them the personality and perserverance, the personality of the teacher, the method of teaching and an understanding of the child.

In speaking of the superintendents Mr. Trumpour stated it was necessary that they attend regularly and in order to maintain discipline that a superintendent be punctual and regular in his presence at the session of the school.

If the superintendents weren't at school in time the speaker found it an excellent practice to have somebody who could take his place pro tem in order that the school might commence on time every Sunday.

Singing brightened up the Sunday school and made it more interesting for the children. Mr. Trumpour thought that even an orchestra might be used in Anglican Sunday schools.

It was well for teachers to take scholars who did not conform to discipline into their confidence and tell them when they did of their faults on succeeding Sundays.

PREPARATION OF LESSON.

Rev. C. V. Pilcher spoke in an enlightening way on "Preparation of the Lesson."

He stated that teachers should have a knowledge of the whole Bible to give thoroughly satisfactory lessons.

The human point, the spiritual point, one point and a compact point: these were the essentials of successful Sunday school instruction.

The boys and girls from 16 to 19, could be retained as active Sunday school students, if the older people would make it a point to visit the schools on succeeding Sundays. These would form a barrier between the pupils and the door.

PRINCIPLES OF TEACHING.

The speaker on this subject, Rev. Mr. McLean, said it was such a vast one that he could little more than scratch the surface, metaphorically speaking.

The information was not drawn from the teacher to the scholar, the information had to be presented by the teacher. And the teacher should endeavor to build up the child's character, not merely to tell the children something that had been memorized.

To the speaker's mind all teaching was interpretation. The teacher stood between the lesson and the pupil.

Teaching was in the first place a matter of personality. Carlyle said Frederick the Great was great in personality. He had force of will-power and strength of character. Personality did not necessarily mean a thing that was born with a man and something that could not be developed.

If the teacher set out to develop personality he or she would acquire it by honest and serious effort.

Unless the teacher was given to prayer, unless that teacher was in communication with God there could be no force in what that teacher said. A teacher had to have holiness of character.

It seemed a truism to say that a teacher had to know his subject. But it was a fact that teachers did not always know their subjects as thoroughly as they should and this made convincing presentations of them impossible.

Mr. McLean made his subject more vivid and interesting by blackboard illustrations.

HOW TO TEACH MISSIONS.

Rev. C. H. Brooks. of Grafton, the speaker on the subject of "How to Teach Missions," said the background of mission teaching was a most attractive and picturesque one.

The histories and different religions and modes of living of the various people were most interesting to the receptive young mind.

The wonderful journeys of St. Paul, the apostle, should prove, even in the hands of an unimaginative teacher, a most fascinating tale.

The speaker told of numerous other famous early and latter day missionaries whose lives were full of gripping interest and thrilling events.

The stories of these outstanding figures in religious history could not fail to command the attention of any healthy-minded boy.

There were men and women going forth from our homes who were to be missionaries and early and comprehensive instruction in mission work was necessary. The children should primarily know the cardinal teaching of the first great Missionary.

Mr. Brooks' address was rich in practical suggestions and historical value and interest.

A MODEL LESSON.

At the evening session of the school Mr. R J. Devey, superintendent of St. John's Sunday school, was the first speaker. He gave a splendid illustration of actual class work on catechism study using the adopted chart very effectively.

His class consisted of ten boys from St. John's choir and their responses were prompt and accurate.

Mr. Devey spoke appreciatively of the splendid addresses of the speakers at the convention and training school and was sure that their remarks would be of great value to Sunday school workers and teachers.

A vote of thanks to Mr. Devey was moved and heartily supported for the striking examplification he had given the catechism and also for the energy and ability he had used in connection with his prominent part in the interests of the convention.

CHILD PYSCHOLOGY.

Dr. Park, who spoke on this subject, remarked on the practical and clear cut lines on which the convention was conducted.

Dr. Park is an authorative speaker on physchology, on which subject he is instructor at the Normal School, and his address was received with close attention.

He complimented Mr. Devey on the effective manner in which he had conducted the model lesson.

Dr. Park said his subject could be appropriately named "Literature in Relation to the Child." Literature in the day school and literature in the Sunday school was a most important agency in the formation of the child's character.

Literature, in a recent opinion of the teachers at the Normal School, was the subject that it could be least afforded to drop from the curriculum of the school on account of its strong ethical tendency.

The speaker proceeded to show what kind of literature was most suitable for the impressionable child at the various stages of his growth and development.

The subject matter of literature was as wide as the universe. This was true also with regard to its medium. All the languages of the world might be used either written or orally in the expression of literature.

The main end of poetry surely was pleasure. Pleasure, it was true, of a very high and novel kind.

The highest artistic pleasure was litrature, said Goldwin Smith. Goldsmith claimed that the aim of all good literature was innocently to amuse the imagination.

The aim of literature was to give artistic pleasure. Its chief purpose was not to convey information or express the purpose of inculcating morality or ethics. Literature picked from the whole of nature, preferably from human nature, for its subject matter. It was quite natural, was it not, that man should want to read something colored with human interest.

Matthew Arnold said literature was a criticism of life.

It was all right for the hard-headed man to make fun of the poets moonings and day dreamings. But the poets had told of the realities of life.

There was nothing that a good writer could not take hold of and produce from it a type form.

It was worth while stopping to think of the ideal characters in literature as compared to the real characters in life. If we asked ourselves which effected us most strongly we would say the literary characters—the ideal characters.

This was because the literary man who was not bound down by any restraint, could present his characters to us without imperfections.

In real life, while men might have good qualities, they had faults which to some extent deprecated their charasters.

The dropping out of our lives of the famous and later works of literature would leave a gap that could not be filled from any other source.

Was it not common to read of young boys who started out for some imaginary country—some wild and wooly west—whose pockets had been found full of cigarettes, knives and revolvers, and more than all, of yellowback literature. This was the effect of bad literature.

It was not necessary simply that literature should be good, it was also necessary that it be fitted to the child's different stages of development.

Something had to be known of child nature to know what would be appropriate to the child's powers of understanding.

The child's interests, distinguished from those of the adult, were selfish, irrational, individual and immediate. While the adult would follow out a related train of actions pointing to one ultimate end, the child could not be expected to do so. In the training of the child, qualities had to be cultivated.

The human child was the most helpless of all created. All lower animals were better equipped to meet the difficulties of their existence than the child was.

The speaker very interestingly traced the characteristics and peculiarities of a child's life from his early years.

"What earthly meaning could the terms 'right' and 'wrong' have on a child at that particular stage," said speaker, in referring to the child of very tender years. The child had no conception of morality or immorality.

Morality was a growth, and it was a mistake to try to bother with a child with these things when he was at that age.

If the child at that age told a lie the mother might give him a switching with a shower of worldly abuse thrown in. The restraint of the child and making him realize that it was because he didn't tell the truth on a former occasion that he couldn't be trusted, was the effective method of procedure, and left an impression on the child's mind, and would be the start of his moral growth.

After the age of six or seven years up to the age of twelve, the child's development is not characterized by new interests so much as the development of the older ones. He would still want to give way to his appetites and desires, but he could be taught to subordinate these immediate selfish interests and to learn to exercise his voluntary attention. He could be expected to be engaged in more complicated games, and to know something more of right and wrong. His ethics, however, would still be those of external authority.

As to the third stage, from the age of puberty, the child manifested a widening interest.

At the age of puberty he began to take an interest in the opposite sex.

There would be questions of dress and adornment that didn't affect him much before.

His moral and intellectual understanding began to widen out, and he began to question his relation to other beings of the world and his Creator.

In Biblical, as well as in other kinds of literature, it had to be chosen to suit the capacity of the child.

General literature, to be suitable to the young, should be simple and human, and not too imaginary, for this would excite suspicion and doubt, and the child's alert mind would refuse to accept it.

PICKED TEAM WILL PLAY T.A.S. AT RIVERSIDE

City League Double Header on Saturday June 18th to be Withdrawn—Benefit Game For Jack Pilling

At the meeting of the City Baseball League at the Y.M.C.A. last evening, it was decided to put on a benefit game for Mr. Jack Pilling, who was injured in last Saturday's game at Riverside Park. Mr. James Doris, of the T.A.S. Club, made the suggestion, and it met with the unanimous approval of the other representatives.

The games scheduled for Saturday, June 18th, will be withdrawn, and a picked team from the West Ends, P.A.C. and Strathconas will play the T.A.S. An exhibition such as these two teams will provide, should attract a large crowd, and baseball fans, as well as others, will no doubt fall in line. The admission for gentlemen will be 25c, ladies 10c, and boys 5c.

The T.A.S. will not go to Cobourg Saturday, and will be on hand to stack up against the West Ends in the second game of the weekly double header.

BASEBALL

The West Ends and Straths worked out at the Oval last evening for four innings, and in that time the players got busy with the bat, the score being 11—7 for the West Ends.

In future City League players will not be allowed to practice in front of the grand stand at Riverside Park, during the progress of a game.

The usual double header will be played Saturday with the P.A.C. and Strathconas and T.A.S. and West Ends.

Rochester, in defeating Toronto yesterday, advanced to third place and sent the Leafs down to second place.

Buffalo opens at Toronto to-day. Lungren or Smith will pitch for the Kelleyites.

Thirteen runs, seventeen hits, is the story of the Cleveland-Philadelphia game. The Naps didn't have a chance.

The Cubs gathered fifteen hits at Philadelphia.

French, of the Chicago White Sox, went from first to third twice on sacrifices.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

All members of the Track and Field Club are requested to be at the Oval to-night, where special work will be held. Any others who are interested in athletics are welcome. Get in line.

Say, boys, are you all ready for the "Peanut" hunt on Saturday morning? All who are going on the "Hike" should be over at Riverside Park after school and see the physical director. Get in on this hike. The time of your life.

At the Sunday morning class which meets from 9.30 to 10.30 in the Y.M.C.A. parlor, the subject of, "A Heroic Decision" will be taken by one of the young men.

IS MACKENZIE KING IN BOOK?

Mrs. Humphrey Ward's Hero Strikingly Like Labor Minister.

Mrs. Humphry Ward's novel of Canadian life, known in England as "The Canadian Born" and in Canada as "Lady Merton, Colonist, is attracting especial attention in Ottawa because the leading characters seem to be drawn from the personal traits and incidents in the career of Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Minister of Labor. The probability of this is heightened by the fact that Mr. King met Mrs. Ward when some years ago he had a traveling fellowship from Harvard and was in England. When she visited Canada on a trip that inspired the story Mr. King gave a tea for the eminent writer in Ottawa.

The book is called "Lady Merton, Colonist," in Canada in compliance with the requirement of the Canadian copyright laws that books written in England bear a different title in Canada. It deals with a trip over the Canadian Pacific Railway of a titled Englishwoman of wealth, a widow, with her brother, a semi-invalid. They travel in a private car, and where the line is blocked she meets a young Canadian, George Anderson, in the employ of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who has all the physical and mental attributes that a hero should have in a new country and who eventually saves her brother's life.

George Anderson is a westerner. Therein the character bears no similarity to Mr. King, who is from Toronto. Mrs. Ward gives Anderson a pioneer grandfather. Mr. King is a grandson on his mother's side of William Lyon Mackenzie, who led the revolution of 1837.

The hero of the novel is about to run for Parliament, with assurances of success arising from successfully averting for the railway company a strike which would have caused much financial loss and industrial suffering. Mr. King got his foothold for a rapid rise in Canadian public life by settling a serious coal miners' strike in Lethbridge. He was then Deputy Minister of labor, but, of course, Mrs. Ward could not follow the simile that far, as a deputy minister's job is at a desk in Ottawa, and he could never have devoted his time, even in a novel, to conducting a private car party through the adventures to which several hundred pages are devoted.

An English suitor joins the party car at Winnipeg and is told off by Mrs. Ward as a foil for the young Canadian, with whom Lady Merton is beginning to fall in love. As the state of Mr. King's heart is not bared to the public it cannot be said what similarity exists in this part of the story.

The inevitable love test is provided when Mrs. Ward gives George Anderson a thoroughly disreputable father, who is supposed to be dead, but who turns up and robs a train just when the heart theme has reached a critical point. There is no similarity here, for Mr. King is handsomely provided as to a father, his being an eminent professor of law at Osgoode Hall.

The train robbery in which George Anderson's reprobate father is providentially killed shows the stuff Lady Merton is made of, for it serves only to draw her closer to the man she loves. She induces him to withdraw his resignation of a mission of enquiry to England on certain labor and immigration matters. This brings the character back to the Minister of Labor again, for he performed with eminent success special missions to London, India and China on immigration questions and the regulation of the opium trade.

Mrs. Ward's character is endowed with magnetism, agreeable manners, friendship with the Governor-General and an intense spirit of Canadian nationality. Mr. King has all these. George Anderson marries Lady Merton. Mr. King is still a bachelor.

Col. Rogers' Little Joke.

Lt.-Col. S. Maynard Rogers, of the 43rd Rifles, who in the last militia general orders was gazetted to the command of the 8th Infantry Brigade, was the hero of one of the best Canadian stories of the South African war, and what is somewhat to the point, this story is positively true. Lt.-Col. Rogers went to South Africa in command of the first Canadian contingent. During a brief period of inactivity in the campaign there was a very swell military banquet at Pretoria, at which Col. Rogers found himself seated among a number of officers of Imperial Yeomanry and some of the more select colonial corps. In the conversation at table, it transpired that most of the officers at that particular spot, in civil life were professional men—physicians, lawyers, civil engineers, architects, etc. Naturally much of the conversation turned on professional topics and various opinions on all sorts of subjects were expressed. Lieut.-Col. Rogers, not be[illegible] particularly silent nature of [illegible] his say, but he carefully steered clear of professional topics and was consequently about the only one present who had not revealed his business. As a matter of fact, he is an undertaker, having succeeded to the extensive business founded by his father who, Canadians will remember, had charge of the funeral of Sir John A. Macdonald. In course of time some of the Canadian officer's newly-made friends became curious as to his sphere of usefulness in civil life and one of them asked him what profession he belonged to. With characteristic readiness, the gallant colonel replied:—"Oh! I follow the medical profession." No one saw the joke, but Col. Rogers admits having had to use considerable adroitness during the ensuing conversation to keep out of some technical discussions which arose among the doctors present.

Rubies Are of Good Quality.

Since last November a strong company has been at work on a property on the 15th and 16th concession of Ashby, in Renfrew county, and it is now said that they have a mine rich in ruby gems. Ruby corundum of the higher grades come for the most part from upper Burmah, and Harry McMaster, mining engineer, who examined the property on behalf of the syndicate, states in his report that the formation is identical with that which obtains in the ruby fields of Burmah.

PAPERING THE HOUSE

When a Weak Play Appears In a New York Theater.

PROPPED BY FREE TICKETS.

The Judicious Distribution of "Complimentaries" by the Manager Secures Well Dressed Audiences and Saves the Appearance of a "Frost."

Long before the curtain goes down at the end of a new production the manager has decided, nine times in ten, whether he has a success or not. But he does not mean to be caught napping in either event. If he believes the play is a "frost" or even a semi-success the house for the next few nights must bear every outward evidence of prosperity.

In other words, he must "buck the line" of adverse criticism by "papering the house." For a week at least he must make a "front" in the orchestra chairs, no matter if there is desolation in the box office. Let him make the public believe the new piece has attracted a large number of patrons for six or eight performances and there is a chance of enough business to prop up a forced run of a few weeks, which may help things on the road. This means that "paper" or free tickets must be judiciously distributed.

Every manager of a theater has a large circle of friends. This may be due partly to his possession of a genial personality, but undoubtedly the business he is in has in itself an attraction for many. A majority of these people will accept passes when they are offered; some are not above asking for them, while still others—but these are rare—will buy tickets when complimentaries are not tendered.

When the manager has a play that is in danger of going to pieces for lack of patronage he sends tickets to all these friends of his and, whenever possible obtains a promise that they will be used by the persons to whom be gives them. It is not difficult to extract such a pledge. Being on terms of more or less intimacy with the manager, the favored ones know he will be likely to see them in the theater or if they are not there that he will take note of those who do not use the tickets. He keeps a record of the seat numbers opposite the names of those who should occupy those particular chairs and can tell at once when his hospitality has been abused.

Another class which sees many plays in New York city gratis is to be found in department stores. Nearly every director of a theatrical company—as distinct from a theater manager—is on cordial terms with the heads of departments in large retail mercantile establishments. Each of these heads will accept from six to a dozen pairs of tickets occasionally to distribute among his subordinates.

Often it is possible to get rid of 200 tickets or more in a day in this way, and when this is repeated in four or five stores the manager is sure of the attendance of an appreciable number of well dressed young women in the newest millinery and style of coiffure, each with a respectably attired cavalier and all on their best behavior. These people may not be ultra fashionable, but they will not disgrace their environment.

Unless the theatrical man is acquainted with the department heads, however, it is not an easy matter to give away tickets in such an establishment. The average clerk in a large store, especially of the feminine gender, is suspicious. She does not understand such open handed generosity, and there must be a lot of explanation to convince her that in offering something for nothing the manager has not some sinister design. As for the male clerks, if he gives them any directly they are sure to tell every one what a pull they have with the manager and pester him for tickets ever afterward, particularly when he has a success, with "the free list absolutely suspended."

It is far less of an undertaking to buy a hundred dollars' worth of low priced goods than to make a present of two tickets apiece to a dozen persons behind the counter. The telephone girls, stenographers and manicurists look askance at free tickets from a stranger, although when their confidence is won they will generally accept them with due gratitude.—Theater Magazine.

Purdie's Panacea.

Tom Purdie, an old manservant in Sir Walter Scott's household, used to talk of the famous "Waverley Novels" as "our books" and said that the reading of them was the greatest comfort to him.

"Whenever I am off my sleep," he confided to James Skene, the author of "Memories of Sir Walter Scott," "I have only to take one of the novels, and before I have read two pages it is sure to set me asleep."

HOW IT HAPPENED.

The Explanation of the Automobile Driver and a Climax.

After the victim of the accident was carried to the sidewalk the automobile driver turned his machine and came back and explained how it happened with considerable warmth.

"This woman," he volubly remarked to the policeman, "was entirely to blame. She ran around from ahead of the street car and deliberately put herself in my way. After she had dodged the coal cart it was too late for me to stop. I couldn't tell which way she was going, and when I saw that she was dazed and foolish I jammed on the brakes and tried to pass to the left, but of course she had to run the same way, and the consequence was that in endeavoring to avoid a baby carriage with twins in it and an old man who was walking with a crutch I suppose I must have hit her. But I wasn't going more than two miles an hour, and any woman who would dodge around in that foolish way and lose her head shouldn't be permitted to go on the streets without a bunch of guardians."

The policeman nodded.

"Come over to the sidewalk," he said, "and take a look at her."

So the driver went to the curb with the officer and looked at the unfortunate creature who had so actively contributed to her own disaster.

And, lo, it was only a dressmaker's dummy that had fallen off the rear of a delivery wagon! — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HIS ONLY REGRET.

The Sorrow That Consumed Bichat When He Was Dying.

Over a century ago died Xavier Bichat, the famous physician and anatomist, author of "L'Anatomie Generale." He probably dissected more human corpses than any other man in the world's history. He established a record when he opened 625 bodies during one winter.

Of his nerve a tale is told. When he lay on his deathbed he called his colleagues to him and said: "Dear friends, I am done, but what comforts me is the fact that my case is a remarkable one. I have had unusual symptoms for some days which I have analyzed. They have greatly surprised me." The doctors sought to reassure him. He answered that he was under no illusion with regard to himself. "I shall die fairly satisfied with my life and go to the grave with only one regret, one great sorrow."

"What is that?" he was asked. "I am distressed that after death I cannot dissect my own body. I could, I am certain, have made some beautiful scientific discoveries." Then he sank back, murmuring: "I must not think about it. It won't bear thinking of."—Westminster Gazette.

The Pearl Hunters' Superstition.

The pearl hunters of Borneo and the adjacent islands have a peculiar superstition. When they open shells in search of pearls they take every ninth find, whether it be large or small, and put it into a bottle, which is kept corked with a dead man's finger. The pearls in the vial are known as "seed pearls" or "breeding pearls," and the native Borneose firmly believes that they will reproduce their kind. For every pearl put into the vial two grains of rice are thrown in for the pearls to "feed upon." Some whites in Borneo believe as firmly in the superstition as the natives do, and almost every hut along the coast has its "dead finger" bottle, with from nine to fifty seed pearls and twice that number of rice grains carefully and evenly stowed away among them. That no results follow does not dim the superstition.

The Wonderful Toad Bone.

All early writers attribute wonderful qualities to toads and frogs and the various parts of their bodies. Pliny believed, for instance, that if a toad was brought into the midst of a mob or other large and unruly concourse of people "silence would instantly prevail." A small bone found in the right side of toads "of the proper age" was also believed to have powers over the various elements. "By throwing this bone into a vessel of boiling water," says Pliny, "it will immediately cool it, the water refusing to boil again until the bone has been removed. To find this bone, expose the dead toad on an ant hill. When the ants have eaten her all away except the bones, take each bone separately and drop it into boiling water. Thus may the wondrous toad bone be discovered."

An Ancient Astronomer.

About 500 B. C. Anaxagoras of Ionia was born. When he "grew up in wisdom" he was the first to teach the course and cause of both solar and lunar eclipses and to give his followers rules whereby they could distinguish planets from fixed stars. He was punished for declaring that the sun was not a god.

RUB THE OTHER EYE.

And Let the One In Which the Bit of Cinder Lodges Alone.

Nine persons out of every ten with a cinder or any other foreign substance in the eye will instantly begin to rub it with one hand while hunting for a handkerchief with the other. This is all wrong. The right way is not to rub the eye with the cinder in it, but to rub the other as vigorously as you like.

A few months ago I was riding on the engine of a fast express. The engineer threw open the front window of the cab, and I caught a cinder in my eye, which gave me intense pain. I began to rub the eye desperately, when the engineer called to me:

"Let that eye alone and rub the other one."

Thinking he was chaffing me, I only rubbed the harder.

"I know the doctors think they know it all, but they don't, and if you will let that eye alone and work on the other one you will soon have the cinder out," shouted the engineer.

I did as he directed and soon felt the cinder down near the inner canthus and made ready to take it out.

"Let it alone and keep at the well eye," again shouted the engineer.

I did so for a minute longer, and then, looking into a small glass the engineer handed me, I saw the offender on my cheek. I have tried it many times since, always with success.—Chicago Record-Herald.

He Got Off Easy.

An elderly darky was charged with the theft of some chickens. The negro had the misfortune to be defended by a young and inexperienced attorney, although it is doubtful whether any one could have secured his acquittal, the commission of the crime having been proved beyond all doubt.

The darky received a pretty severe sentence. "Thank you, sah," said he cheerfully, addressing the judge when the sentence had been announced. "Dat's mighty hard, sah, but it ain't anywhere near what I 'spected. I thought, sah, dot between my character and dat speech of mah lawyer dat you'd hang me shore!"

The Bundle of Hay.

"How is this, Herr Wirt?" exclaimed the amazed traveler, going over the items of food and drink on his bill. "You have me charged with a bundle of hay."

"Quite right, quite right," responded the jolly German landlord readily. "you complained last night of the mooing of a cow in the adjoining stable, and I gave her a bundle of hay to quiet her."

THE NEW SUMMER WRAP

This Season It's Going to Be the Shawl That's Modish.

Every summer there is a wrap for cool evening wear that takes precedence over all other models. This year it's going to be the net shawl, and the illustration shows how graceful this accessory is when worn by a tall, slim girl. The small, plump maiden should beware of this fascinating wrap, for it's not for her. The tall and Juno-like beauty is the person to carry off the wrap to perfection. The idea seems to be to evolve these shawls from bright colored nets—a tone that gives a dash of daring to an otherwise toneless costume—still, in white, with a band of silver galoon, the effect would be charming. A mourning shawl would be chic made of coarse Brussels net bordered with crape. But the variations are endless, and in all guises this shawl will take the place of the scarfs and long cloaks of last summer.

A CANADIAN TRAGEDY.

Author of The Runaway of David Keith Unknown to Fame.

Ten years ago a Toronto dramatic critic had submitted to him for criticism a tragedy entitled "The Runaway of David Keith." The production was absolutely bona fide, and permission was given to publish it by the author, O. H. Jackson who at that time lived in Heckston, a hamlet of the St. Lawrence valley. So much interest did the drama create when first published, that a stock company resident in Toronto gave a private performance of it. The critic who published it was one of the judges of manuscript plays in the recent Earl Grey competitions. He has never heard from Mr. Jackson since, but he is inclined to think that he wrote one or two of the dramas submitted in that competition. The text of the tragedy is herewith reprinted by request:

The Runaway of David Keith.

Father (in father's house, in a mad fit)—"Where were you to-day? I left you at home."

Dave (afraid)—"I was to the show, mother said I could go!"

Father (mad with mother)—"I left Dave to stay here and work; you had no business telling him he could go."

Dave—"Why didn't you stay yourself?"

Father (kicking Dave)—"I'll learn you for to do such tricks and then be so saussy."

Mother (stepping between them)—"James, you must not use him so; he has been a good boy, works hard and never spends a cent, but you drink up all you get."

Father—"I am my own boss and his too; I will make him do as I say; not as he likes."

Mother—"He shall have a day once in a while, I say!"

Fother (taking off his belt)—"Come here, David, I will learn you; I will take the Devil out of you."

Dave (stepping out)—"Don't you dare hit me or you shall pay dear for it."

Father (hits him)—"So you mean to disobey!"

Dave—(draws a revolver)—"Don't hit or I will shoot you as dead as a door nail."

Father hits.

Dave (shooting him in the leg)—"Take that, you old devil; I will learn you to beat me so!"

Mother (runs to the door)—"Dave, Dave, what have you done? Killed your father? You will be hung!"

Dave—"He is not dead, but wounded, and I want my clothes packed and I go to-night."

Mother—"Go where, my child? You have gone crazy, my child."

Dave—"Go to Canada, where every man is free and can do their own work!"

Mother (crying)—"You shall not go, but you shall have $100 for your work and then $8 per month for as long as you stay."

Dave—"I will never stay in this house over night. Do up his leg before it bleed too much."

Mother—(looking at the leg which was wounded)—"You are not hurt, James, your leg has never bled; it is all right."

Dave gets his clothes and is gone.

Father (getting up and looking for him)—"Dave, Dave, come and receive your pay and promise to be faithful and obedient and you shall have whatever is right."

Mother (in a fright)—"There goes Dave up street on the run with a bundle."

Father (starting)—"I will send the police after him and bring him back."

Police (seeing Dave)—"Dave, I have a letter for you!" And handing him out a letter, Dave takes the letter and the police put handcuffs on him and walk him to his home.

Father (holding out the money)—"Here is $150, do take it, and then, if you want more, I will get it, but stay with me, Dave."

Dave (in an awful rage)—"Let me free! I will be free!"

Police (taking off the chain; then leaves for home)—"There, Dave, good-bye, be good!"

Dave (pulls revolver, shakes hands with brother, mother, and father, then shoots himself—"I am free or die! Goodbye!"

The Halley Comet Hat Is Here.

The forerunner of the famous sky visitor, Halley's comet, which has been traveling through space for, lo, these many centuries, has arrived this spring in the guise of a stunning hat. This comet hat is the chicest turban shape you ever did see, and the illustration gives only a faint idea of its real beauty. The hat is of dark blue straw trimmed with velvet a shade lighter. The comet effect is carried out with the cabuchon of velvet on which is mounted a silver star. A feathered aigret of mingled tones of gray and blue symbolizes the tail of the astronomical phenomenon.

Ideal Kitchen.

An ideal kitchen is one that has two windows at least and three if possible. There is plenty of room to move about and everything is properly stored. It has hardwood floors, which are easy to keep clean, and the walls and ceiling are painted instead of papered. The sink is built quite high, and there is ample room for two tables, and, lastly, the ideal kitchen is one that hot water would not hurt.

Wentworth County Council voted militiamen of the county some $500 to go to camp.

Woman's World

A NEW OPERATIC STAR.

Countess Cassini, Niece of Former Ambassador, to Sing In Paris.

Since she first dawned on Washington society twelve years ago, at the age of seventeen, Marguerite Cassini, as she was then, has been a live wire in every community in which she has mingled. The announcement she is to make her debut shortly in grand opera in Paris serves merely to keep her as prominently as ever in the public eye. When Miss Cassini first went to Washington she found her position somewhat indefinite, for she was only the niece of the Russian ambassador, Count Arthur Cassini, and the ladies of the other embassies rather balked at yielding her precedence. These formal difficulties were cleared away, however, when the czar of Russia made Miss Cassini a countess in her own right.

The young countess was a close friend of Mrs. McKinley, and when Roosevelt succeeded to the presidency her intimacy with Alice Roosevelt, who was not then the wife of Nicholas Longworth, made her social standing in Washington still stronger. But when Count Cassini was transferred to Madrid, a change which many believe was due to the social jealousy entertained by the family of the British ambassador, Sir Mortimer Durand, against the young Countess Cassini, the situation became complicated grievously with the receipt of a quiet hint that the Spanish court, which is second only to that of Austria in exclusiveness, would not receive the Countess Marguerite. As a result Count Cassini went to Madrid alone, and the countess, his niece, has just completed a period of study in Paris which all who knew her in this country hope may lead her to the topmost heights of success on the operatic stage.

American Women.

"The American woman's intellectual characteristic is curiosity," says Marcel Prevost in Harper's Bazar. "One feels she would like to have ten pairs of eyes so as to see everything, ten pairs of ears so as to hear everything. When I sit down at table beside an American woman of Paris she immediately asks me: 'Have you seen such and such a play? Have you been to such and such an art exhibition? What do you think of this novel or of that philosophical or historical book recently published?' And I am forced to admit that I have not seen the latest play; that for more than ten years I have not set my foot inside the annual 'salons;' that I read slowly and carefully and am therefore forced to read but few books. And I know my American neighbor feels great disdain for my inculture. Still I have infinite sympathy for her charming and universal intellectual curiosity.

"There is consequently an abyss between the way most American women I have met conceive intellectual culture and my own way. Far from me to pretend that I am right. And I give thanks to heaven, which sends us in the American women of Paris the most wonderful public for books or theaters or lectures.' But if I had the honor of being professor of French to young American girls I would begin with the following truthful anecdote:

"A compatriot of theirs, speaking to the poet Francois Coppee, asked:

"'Do you speak English, monsieur?'

"And Coppee answered modestly:

"'Non, madame. I am still learning French.'"

Tetrazzini Met Patti.

During her year as chatelaine of the Mansion House Lady Truscott, the lady mayoress of London, has acted as hostess to 25,000 guests.

"The most brilliant event of my year," says Lady Truscott, "was the great concert last May in aid of the National Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, an organization in which I am deeply interested. A charming incident occurred in connection with this concert. Mme. Tetrazzini wrote to tell me that she had never heard Mme. Patti sing and would give anything to hear her. I invited Mme. Tetrazzini, and I had the great pleasure of bringing the two prima donnas together in my drawing room. Mme. Tetrazzini fell on her knees and kissed the hand of Mme. Patti, in homage, she said, to the greatest singer of the age."

Hon. Frank Cochrane will lay the corner stone of the new Methodist church at Burk's Falls, on June 13.

Points for Mothers

"Those who bring sunshine to the lives of others cannot keep it from themselves." This is a mothers' motto surely. Sad to say, however, there are mothers who do try to bring sunshine to others, but fail utterly and envelop themselves in black clouds, with never a silver lining in sight. Others seem contented to dispense "sunshine" without getting even a small sunbeam in return. Happily some seem to be veritable "sunshine batteries," sending out little currents to those with whom they come in contact.

One poor mother is faded and careworn. She darns her daughter's stockings and mends all her clothes and even makes her party dresses. This mother loves her daughter dearly and regrets that "the child" is so selfish and apparently so unappreciative, thinking only of her own frivolities and giving never a thought to or doing a kindness for her mother. She longs to be her daughter's confidant and is often jealous of her daughter's girl friends. She is irritable and fretful (because overworked and tired) and worries over things that do not really matter, and her daughter misunderstands her and usually considers that "mother is unreasonable" and has "queer ideas."

The "sunshine" mother is younger looking, happy and more "up to date." She teaches her daughter to darn her own stockings and to mend her own clothes and even to make her own party dresses, but is always ready to help and plan and discuss. She enters into her daughter's pleasures with real interest and makes friends with her daughter's friends; talks over little secrets and softens, molds, influences and advises. In fact, "mother" is considered "one of the girls" and is in great demand as chaperon.

The secret of it all is that she has adapted herself to the ideas of the next generation, although retaining and remembering her own girlhood.

Old Dutch Cradles.

Baby's bath is now mounted on tresties so as to save stooping on the part of the nurse, while the cot and basket are almost always of the folding variety, draped with hemstitched and embroidered lawn threaded with satin ribbons or with embroidered net.

Occasionally a reproduction of an old Dutch cradle will be used, and this will be lined with quilted satin. The newest quilts are stuffed with a vegetable fiber or wood wool which comes from Sweden. These are beautifully light and porous and are recommended for hygienic reasons.

When baby takes his daily constitutional it is in a perambulator with silver fittings, a crest or monogram on its white enameled surface. Sometimes the carriage is even upholstered in white, and the cover may be of fine linen trimmed with real Irish crochet, while in winter it will be of opossum or Tibet goat.

Cure For Warts.

A wart is essentially an outgrowth of the scarf skin. It may be brought about by friction. Hence it may be found on the quite healthy skin of a healthy person, just as a corn may be found. But warts sometimes come without friction, and they come numerously, so proving that there must be some internal cause. Wart crops are specially apt to appear between early childhood and the sixteenth year. They are found most usually in children of poor physique. They have been known to make sudden appearance when the child has fallen into poor health and to go away when the health has improved. Small doses of calcined magnesia in water taken daily during many weeks or months have been found effectual in getting rid of these warts.

Dolly Party Game.

A "doll hunt" is a delightful way to entertain the little folks at this season. Arrange in the center of the parlor a cabinet with bright colored strings. Attach to each string a card bearing the name of the doll to be found. After much intricate winding each child is to find a doll. In another room hang a clothesline, where each little girl is to find a dainty frock to fit her new found treasure. Let the little ones dress their dolls and afterward serve simple refreshments.

Hamper For Nursery Made of Parasol.

The daintiest nursery hamper imaginable is made from a plain white linen parasol turned upside down and fitted to a small modern standard.

A tiny lace frill is placed around the edge, and linen pockets are sewed across the sections inside for soap, powder and other toilet articles. It may be easily carried about by the handle. On one side embroider baby's monogram in pink linen thread.

Hard on the Baby.

Here is some advice that appeared in a paper for mothers the other day: "The bottle must be kept perfectly clean. When the babe has finished drinking it should be unscrewed and laid in a cool place under the tap."

One feels rather sorry for any babies thus treated.

Wit Saved His Neck.

A story is told of a prisoner before Lord Justice Fitzgibbon, at the time when the latter was one of the Justices of Appeal of Ireland, whose ready wit probably saved his neck.

Lord Fitzgibbon was holding assizes in Tipperary County, when a man was brought before him on indictment for murder. The case was proved that the victim came to his death by being hit with a stick in the hands of the defendant; but the doctor testified that he had what they called in medical parlance a "paper skull."

The case looked dark for the prisoner, however, and the jury returned a verdict of guilty. As the man was brought before the court for sentence it was noticed that his lordship had his black cap in his hand.

"Have you anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced upon you?" demanded Lord Fitzgibbon.

The man looked for a moment and then said, "No, your lordship, I have nothing to say; but I should like to ask one question."

"What is that, my man?" said Fitzgibbon.

"I should like to know what a man with a head like that was doing in Tipperary?"

The black cap was put away and a prison sentence imposed.

The First Skaters.

It is very doubtful which race first skated, for traces have been found among prehistoric remains all over northern Europe indicating that the art was practiced by primitive people. The Eskimo of the farthest north are also found to be in possession of runners carved from whalebone. Skating is mentioned by a Danish historian about 1134, and Fitzstephen in his "History of London" says that in the twelfth century young men fastened the leg bones of animals under their feet by means of throngs in order to slide along the ice. This statement is confirmed by the pair of bone skates of the period now in the British museum. It is likely, however, that these early Londoners got the idea from Holland, probably via Lincolnshire, where skates have been used on the frozen fens from very remote times.

LIVE NOTES FROM NORWOOD

Special to the Review.

Norwood, June 7.—Messrs. J. J. Turner & Son, of Peterborough, have been engaged on the buildings of the John Finlay & Sons Company, painting attractive signs. One sign already completed on the end of the main building facing the C.P.R., with large white letters shaded with black, which gives the name of the firm and the class of work turned out will be a good advertisement. The men are at present occupied on the roof of the large lumber sheds, which, when finished, will look very attractive being done in yellow and black, and white and black.

Mr. Livingston, travelling agent for the National Manufacturing Co., is in town to-day.

Miss Spence, of Tyrone, is visiting friends in the village.

Mr. W. C. Harrison has several men at work under the direction of Mr. W. H. Harper, installing the new incandescent lamps on the streets. These will take the place of the present arc lights. Mrs. (Rev.) W. B. Tucker and son, Albert, are visiting friends in Peterborough.

SUSPICIOUS FIRES.

In view of the suspicion that some of the fires that have recently occurred in the village were not exactly due to spontaneous combustion, children playing with matches, and other such causes commonly attributed to fires, the village council at the urgent request of a large number of citizens, have engaged Constable Wm. Dickson, of Westwood, as night watchman. The villagers now feel that they can now lay themselves down to rest at night with a feeling that their interests are being guarded.

A number from here attended the excursion from Bridgenorth to Bobcaygeon on Thursday. They report a pleasant time.

A very interesting service was held last Sunday morning by the Epworth League here. The president, Mr. Eugene Switzer, was chairman of the meeting, and after the song service and devotional exercises were over, Miss Ida Switzer gave a brief history of the league since its organization and Mrs. G. McCague gave an address on the "Bible." Miss Olive Switzer then sang "Holy Bible" after which Mr. Ira Switzer gave an address on "Forward Movement Work." This was followed by a quartette selection entitled "He Leads the Way."

A collection was taken at the close and a very enjoyable and profitable morning was spent.

The service here next Sunday evening will be held as the Sunday school anniversary.

We hope to see a large crowd in attendance. And on the following Tuesday, June the 14th, the annual picnic held under the auspices of the Sunday school will be held in the woods across from the church. Bryans, when their eldest daughter, Eva May, was united in marriage to Mr. H. Roche, C.P.R. agent at Havelock, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Roche, of Wilbur, Ont. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. W. Holdsworth, M.A., in the presence of only the immediate relatives and friends. The bride, who was given away by her father, was attired in a gown of directoire satin with gold trimmings, and carried a bridal bouquet of white roses. Miss Anna Bryans, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and wore a dress of mauve shantung silk, and carried white and pink carnations. The wedding march was played by Miss Nettie Roche, sister of the groom. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. John Roche. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid and pianist were gold rings set with three whole pearls, and to the groomsman a pearl tie pin. A wedding supper was afterwards served in the dining room, which was prettily decorated with ferns and flowers. The young couple left on the midnight train for a trip to the Pacific Coast, and on their return will reside on George street. ATLAS GETS SIX YEARS

Toronto, June 10.—Convicted of forgery and theft, "Rev." G. M. Atlas was yesterday sentenced by Judge Winchester to six years in penitentiary, three years for each offence. A three-year term for uttering the forgery runs concurrently.

"Nothing, my lord," he said when asked if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed, and smiled afterwards. His counsel's request for postponement to September was refused.

"Ever since he has been in Toronto he has gone about as a missionary and has associated with weaker men, and has always dominated them," said Crown Attorney Baird. "He got in with many clergymen; they, too, were simple-minded and weak-minded and were willing to do anything he said. At his bidding they attacked the officers of the crown. They attacked Mr. Walter Duncan viciously, a man who has worked for the country for many years. Atlas has done everything he could, has even suborned perjury.

"They say they are going to bring more witnesses from Macedonia. I know these people do not exist.

"Now, I want to warn, not threaten, but I'll indict and prosecute everyone who subscribes to the fund if they attempt to bring out any more perjured evidence. I am going to stop that hateful crime."

"You have lived a double life for years, if the evidence is true," said Judge Winchester, in reviewing the charges.

"You pretended to be a missionary, yet in the witness box you astonished the jury by using words that should only be used in all reverence. I had to stop you."

Convicted of conspiracy to defraud in the flotation of the "Canadian Eatables, Limited," Athol Robertson, promoter, was sentenced to one year in the Central Prison, and Joseph Gurofsky to one year. Sentence on Milton De Lhorbe was deferred till autumn. Robinson had been convicted of fraud on another charge, and for this was sentenced to two years.

"You do not appear to lead a very good moral life," said the judge.

James A. Haggett, aged 22, for shooting with intent and obstructing the police, and housebreaking while on bail, was sentenced to four years.

"I am afraid he has started out on a criminal career," said Judge Winchester.

WHITE SLAVE PRESENTMENT

New York, June 10—John D. Rockefeller, jr., who is foreman of the special grand jury appointed Jan. 1, to investigate the white slave traffic, walked into Judge O'Sullivan's court yesterday at the head of a special committee of the grand jury, to offer a presentment. The judge refused to accept it, and cut off Mr. Rockefeller when he attempted to speak. What the presentment contained was not disclosed.

There have been no unusual revelations. The work of the jury has so far resulted in the conviction of two persons in an isolated case which, so far as was shown, had no connection with any organized business of dealing in young girls, which it had been said was carried on here.

NO REDUCTION IN ARMAMENT

Paris, June 10.—Premier Briand, in a Ministerial declaration in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, said that in spite of France's attachment for peace, its rank in the world depended upon its material strength and its duty to its ally and friends imposed upon the republic the maintenance of the military power in a high state of efficiency.

Consequently the Government, he added, would insist upon an early vote on the proposed new naval program.

OPPOSITION FOR SIFTON

Vermillion, Alta., June 10.—The Conservatives [illegible] million have called a convention for Monday evening at Manville for the purpose of considering the advisability of nominating a candidate in the interests of the party to succeed Archie Campbell, late member in the local Legislature. T. McAllister, president of the association, will, if any at all, be likely the man chosen to oppose Sifton.

Inroads of Standard Oil.

Vienna, June 10.—The Austrian Ministries of Finance, Commerce and Railways have decided upon joint administrative measures for the protection of the home petroleum industry against the formidable inroads being made by the Vacuum Oil Co., the Austrian branch of the Standard Oil Co.

Three Killed In Railway Accident.

CONNAUGHT AFTER ALL

So Says Well Based Rumor in Official London.

London, June 10.—The Canadian Associated Press has every reason to believe that it is intended that the Duke of Connaught shall be Governor-General in accordance with King Edward's expressed wish. It is unlikely that an official announcement will be made yet, for the Duke of Connaught opens the South African Parliament at the end of the year. It is improbable he would go to Canada in midwinter. Therefore it is proposed that Earl Grey should remain in office till the spring of 1911.

The Chronicle, anent the Governor-General, says there are obvious difficulties in the way is apparent to the appointment of the Duke of Connaught, but there would be general satisfaction if the King's Ministers should not deem them insuperable.

Asquith will state the course of business on Monday. An announcement as to the Government's intention to modify the royal declaration, it is expected, will be then made.

The Duke of Connaught is the only surviving son of the late Queen Victoria. He was born in 1850, was educated at the Royal Military College at Woolwich and passed through all the grades in the army, being grazetted field marshal in 1902. He saw active service during the Fenian raid in Canada in 1870, and with the Egyptian expeditionary force in 1882, when he commanded the first brigade of the first division. He was present at the action of Mahutma and at the battle of Tel-el-Kebir. He was thrice mentioned in despatches while in Egypt, and on his return was thanked by Parliament for his work. From 1886 to 1890 he was Commander-in-Chief in Bombay. From 1893 to 1898 he was in command at Aldershot. He commanded the forces in Ireland from 1900 to 1904. For the next three years he was Inspector-General of the forces, and in 1907 went to Malta as Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean forces and High Commissioner of the Mediterranean. He retired from that position last year. The Duke of Connaught visited Canada with the duchess in 1890, and was welcomed at Quebec just twenty years ago yesterday.

His Royal Highness has one son, Prince Arthur, who visited this country in 1906, and two daughters, Princess Margaret, Crown Princess of Sweden, and Princess Patricia.

BEDDOE DECLINES TO SUE JOURNAL

Ottawa, June 10.—W. A. Beddoe, recently appointed Canadian Trade Commissioner to New Zealand, leaves to-day for the Antipodes. He declines to take action for libel against The Ottawa Journal, which last night said editorially: "An attack by The Journal two weeks ago upon the appointment of W. A. Beddoe as Canadian trade commissioner to New Zealand, produced last Friday a letter from Mr. Beddoe, in which he gave his explanation of the result of the legal action in Dawson City in which, having been charged with what is practically blackmail, Mr. Beddoe brought action for libel against his accuser and failed in his suit."

THEO. ROOSEVELT LEAVES ENGLAND

London, June 10.—Theodore Roosevelt's visit to England ended this morning.

Col. Roosevelt deprived Londoners of the opportunity of giving him a send-off. Before the people were aware of his intention, he had quietly left the city, not half a dozen persons knowing the time or the manner of his departure.

The ex-President had to decline the invitation of the mayor of Southampton to a public luncheon in his honor to-day. He also expressed regret at his inability to lay the cornerstone of the memorial to be erected on the spot where the Pilgrim Fathers sailed for America.

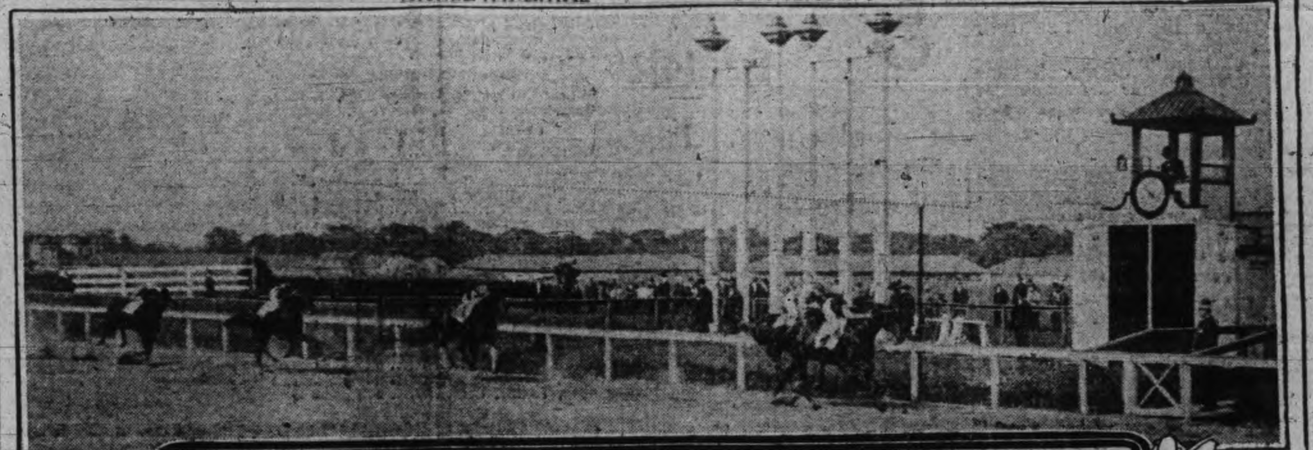
PRINCETON UNIVERSITY'S GOOD LUCK

Princeton, N.J., June 10.—As a re[illegible] of the board of trustees of Princeton University yesterday, the institution will acquire about $1,150,000 in gifts. The bulk of this comes as a renewal of the offer made by Wm. Cooper Proctor of Cincinnati, and brings to an end the controversy over the site of the graduate college.

Mrs. Russell Sage, it was announced, has given $150,000 to add to the dormitories already donated by her, and to build a great memorial tower 160 feet high in the northwest part of the campus.

RECORD FLIGHT OF TWO FRENCHMEN

Paris, June 10.—Officers Marquonnet and Feguant of the French army aviation corps, flew from Chalons-Sur-Marne to the gates of Paris, a distance of 105.6 miles, in two hours and fifty minutes, without a stop yesterday. This constitutes a distance record for an aeroplane carrying two persons. One took observations and photographs, while the other piloted the machine.



FINISH OF THE BROOKLYN HANDICAP. FITZHERBERT WINNING.

CROWD AT THE TRACK.

FITZ HERBERT, DUGAN UP, RETURNING TO JUDGES STAND.

New York, June 9.—Fitz Herbert won the twenty-fourth running of the Brooklyn very handily at Gravesend for Samuel C. Hildreth, while the same owner's King James was winning the $5,000 Toronto Cup for him in Toronto. The great Ethelbert colt carried 130 pounds, the highest impost ever borne to victory by a Brooklyn Handicap winner.

He practically made his own pace, and ran his own race, while his jockey sat still. No competitor ever seriously threatened Fitz Herbert from post to finish, but when he heard the rattle of Olamtala's hoofs at the end of the mile the Hildreth colt of his own volition sprang away and ran the ninth furlong of his race in the astonishing time of twelve seconds. He came home well in hand, almost loafing through the last furlong.

MONTREAL MAN ELECTED CHAIRMAN

Rev. Frank A. Day Will Preside Over Congregational Union.

Cobourg, June 10.—The Congregational Union of Canada spent a very busy day. The opening address in the morning was by Prof. Cook of Montreal on "Humanity and Religion," was full of point, scholarly, broad and progressive.

Rev. Frank J. Day, M.A., was elected chairman for the coming year by a very decisive vote. The election is popular and well deserved. Mr. Day is the only son of Rev. B. W. Day, St. Andrew's, Quebec, was born at Stouffville, Ont., taught school in Lanark, but opened a bookstore in Stratford for a short time, and was the first Y.M.C.A. secretary in that city. From there he went to the Congregational College in Montreal, where he graduated after exceptionally clever courses in arts and theology, securing gold medals in both courses. His first pastorate, a very successful one, covered ten years at Sherbrooke, Que., which he resigned to spend a year and a half in study in Europe and in the United States. On his return he became pastor of Zion Church, Montreal, where he has been most active in all denominational and Christian work.

The statistical report by Rev. H. G. Rice, M.A., Forest, was in the main encouraging, except in the Province of Ontario, where the progress has not kept pace with that of the other provinces. Bright ten-minute addresses were given by Rev. F. J. Day and Mr. Cushing for Montreal, Rev. W. T. Gunn for Calgary, Rev. S. W. Anthony for St. John, N.B., and Rev. E. Tippett, Hamilton, on behalf of the immigration department.

DUTY ON PULP HAS GONE UP

Washington, June 10.—Pulp and printing paper manufactured from wood cut on crown lands in the Province of Quebec prior to May 1 last is subject to the countervailing duty of 25 cents per cord, or its equivalent of 35 cents a ton in the manufactured state as print paper, as provided by the new tariff law, according to a decision of the Treasury Department yesterday.

Like products manufactured from wood cut on crown lands in Quebec after May 1 are not subject to the countervailing duty.

The tariff law provides that if any country imposes an export duty of any kind whatsoever on wood in the manufacture of wood pulp, such duty shall be added by the United States on importations.

DE LESSEPS WILL AVIATE IN TORONTO

Toronto, June 10.—This city is to have an early opportunity of witnessing the latest developments in aerial science. Early next month an aviation meet is to be held, either at Exhibition Park or Scarboro Beach, at which the greatest experts on the continent are to be engaged in competition for prizes aggregating $75,000.

There will also be here Comte de Lesseps, who last month successfully navigated across the English Channel, outrivaling the feat of Bleriot. The comte is a grandson of the famous engineer who built the Suez Canal, and for his daring trip across the channel from Dover to Calais, was awarded The Daily Mail cup and prize of $2,500.

He has just made the announcement that he will be present at the Montreal meet, and will then come to Toronto. It is understood that he will bring a Bleriot machine with him, and he will undoubtedly be ready to make an entry in the competition for the most successful trip across the lake. The Toronto meeting will be held directly after that in Montreal, and will last a week.

Dr. Bryce presented the report of the committee appointed to answer the dissidents recorded relative to the action of the assembly regarding union. In answer to Dr. Sedgwick that adequate time for discussion was not given, it stated that the time (two sederunts) was quite in proportion to its importance.

When the matter regarding the status of permanent clerks of assembly came up, it was decided to send it down to the presbyteries simpliciter.

Dr. Campbell supported the overture re the reformation in Scotland, in the absence of Dr. Mowat. "Three hundred and forty years ago," said he, "a nation was born spiritually in a day." The idea was to ask the ministers of the church to call the attention of their people to this remarkable fact. August will be the anniversary month. The overture was adopted.

The special committee on the coronation oath reported an agreement to submit a resolution for the approval of the assembly. The resolution was to the effect that while holding that the constitutional principles, which the coronation oath were intended to guard should be duly preserved, they are of the opinion that it is inadvisable for the assembly to take any action at present. The resolution carried and the clerk was instructed to notify the Orangemen.

Rev. F. H. Robinson was appointed assistant to Dr. Shearer, and Rev. Dr. Patterson, Philadelphia, formerly of Toronto, was appointed an evangelist at a salary of $3,000.

FRIDAY, JUNE 10 1910.

THE BATHTUB TRUST

They have formed a bathtub trust in the United States, according to a wire received yesterday in this office. The capital will be ten million dollars, and the corporations in the combine will control about ninty-five per cent. of the output. This is an outrage. Cleanliness is next to Godliness, and it's hard work to keep clean as it is.

The American's plight in a big city is an unenviable one. He arrives a tiny pilgrim, and a glass trust sucking bottle with a rubber trust nipple is put before him, filled with trust milk before he is scarcely able to wiggle his legs, or play with his toes. If he wails he is fed on trust medicine. If he grows he is put into a cradle fashioned from trust made lumber, nailed with nails from the nail trust, and painted with paint from the paint trust. Is he afraid to sleep in the dark? Then mother scatters the darkness with trust oil, fed to cotton trust wicks in glass trust lamps. When he discards milk he eats trust killed meat, drinks his tea sweetened by trust made sugar. He cools his lemonade with trust gathered ice, and wears clothes stitched with trust made thread.

Then he dies and the funeral service is read from trust made paper, printed by trust made machines.

His coffin is trust made, of course, and his remains will be placed in a grave dug by the Grave Diggers' Union in trust grounds.

THE HUMAN MILL

They have turned out another batch and the Toronto press has had columns of names of glad graduates, those who have passed their final examinations at Toronto University. Each year the fifty-five professors, thirty-one lecturers and two hundred and thirty demonstrators of the University of Toronto, and University College say many things, talk much in foreign language, in dead language, in Hebrew, Greek and Latin, make many experiments, some profound, some commonplace. And the students watch and listen. If it is the fall they also attend the football matches. If it is a special occasion they make their presence felt and test the strength of the policemens' clubs as they parade the streets.

Each year thousands attend these great schools of learning, absorbing. Some absorb veterinary science, some dentistry, others music, law, pedagogy, pharmacy or forestry. A few absorb morphine, whiskey and other things. But out they go, men and women flushed with their degrees, to conquer. But where do they go? Of the thousands who have spent years in study of these branches mentioned, how many amount to more than the ordinary?

Nearly all are swallowed up in the swirl.

Nature is avaricious of her great things. We have the seven wonders of the world, and for every great tree in the woodland we have a hundred pigmies, and for every perfect apple in the orchard we have any number of seconds, thirds and culls. To-day, amid the white life of competition there is the exceptional chance for the man who will, whether he be a graduate of the college or the farm.

But the fact remains that, in spite of the magnificent buildings that grace the university and college sites of Toronto, it is only once in a while that a man is turned out that will cause more than a passing comment.

There are over five thousand young men and women attending, and hundreds leaving yearly, graced with degrees. But, where do they go?

OUR FAN TAN FRIENDS

Wong Hing, Gee Thomas, Loo Chin, Wong Num and James Rene Wong all of the city of Toronto, have received the big seal of Ontario, and have formed the Hong Kong Club, Limited. Wow, wow. This club is for the social entertainment and amusement of the members and their guests. Wow, wow.

This is nothing but right. Toronto has several clubs for the amusement of persons who do not work half as hard as the Chinaman, whose horizon is usually bounded by dirty shirts or clean. There is the Toronto Club, where the blue bloods disport. The National, where the eminently respectable also gather. The Germans have their Liederkranz, and the Tories the Albany, the Grits have their hive, the printers their home of mutual resort, why not the Chinamen?

No more, it is hoped, will they be startled by the policeman's step and rattle at the door. No more will they be lugged off to jail in the patrol wagon.

For they have the big red seal of the secretary of the Province of Ontario, and the public notice has been published by authority in the Ontario Gazette. Wow, wow. Is it fan tan they will play? Well, what's the difference? White men play poker.

REVELATIONS

Dr. J. G. Rutherford, Dominion Veterinary General, has during the past twelve months, condemned nine thousand carcases that were unfit for food.

Of the nine thousand, over four thousand were of cattle that had tuberculosis, two thousand five hundred veal carcases, were of calves prematurely born, and other kinds of meat were variously diseased. Some of the carcases were infected with abscess, tapeworms, dropsy, jaundice, lumpjaw, pneumonia, skin diseases, tumors and erysipelas. Isn't that rotten?

These animals were condemned at Government inspected packing houses where extraordinary care is supposed to be taken in purchasing the animals to be slaughtered.

Boards of Health in the province have a live question concerning dead carcases if they will only awake to its importance.

It is rather a ghastly thought that one may perhaps by accident be eating a piece of diseased beef, or sheep, or calf, to say nothing of our morning comforter, that piece of breakfast bacon.

A very instructive film was shown upon the white wall in a Peterborough Nickelodium on Wednesday. It dealt with that pest, the fly. This miserable mite was exhibited in detail and magnified many diameters. The audience saw how it was laid, an egg in filth, became a maggot in a few hours, and then buried itself in earth, and later emerged wingless to soon proceed to fly and multiply. A fly sipping at a spitton and soon after on the family sugar bowl, then feasting on rotten fish, and later on milk, revealed it in true light. Besides being a nuisance, it is a danger. Born in dirt it lives best in dirt and in dirty places. Swat it whenever you get a chance.

THE POINT OF VIEW

POWER.
Exchange.

In the matter of water power the commission finds that in Canada there is a possible 16,696,279 horsepower available and only 514,890 horsepower development. Apart from the soil, the flowing waters are the greatest and most valuable undeveloped natural resources. They can never be exhausted; on the contrary they can be increased. They can bring light, heat and power to wast numbers of the population, and abolish many forms of waste and discomfort.

A CONFERENCE NECESSARY.
Ottawa Free Press.

The editor of the Toronto Globe and its business manager ought to get together and have a conference upon policy. While the editor is denouncing the sale of classical literature, the business manager is advertising a bargain sale of works by Balzac, Smollett, Fielding, Wilde, and others whose books would seem to come under the ban of the clerical editor of the paper.

DRANK EVIDENCE.
Guelph Mercury.

A Utah jury drank the whiskey offered in evidence. It was willing to absorb all the information, anyway.

HEAR! HEAR!
Montreal Gazette.

Heathen Chinese disturbers at Nankin are calling on the people to rise and slaughter the Christian foreigners who reside among them. This is a wrong thing for the Chinese disturbers to do. They should imitate their Christian betters and only call on their Government to make laws to keep the white men in their heathen country.

CAUSE FOR MURDER.
Calgary Herald.

A man down in Ontario has a chicken with four feet. The man next door to him who has a garden will surely kill that fowl.

LATE SIR JOHN A. MACDONALD.
Kingston Standard.

Vanity, vanity, all is vanity! The greatest statesman Canada ever had lies sleeping in his grave in Cataraqui Cemetery, just beyond the confines of this city, and on the nineteenth anniversary of his death a brief dozen lines in the paper suffice to tell of the wreath sent to be placed on his grave in remembrance of the days and the times and the deeds that were. "As for man his days are as grass; as a flower of the field so he flourisheth."

THE SALARY QUESTION
Ottawa Free Press.

In the Montreal Methodist Conference only 46 ministers are receiving salaries of over $1,000 a year; 65 get from $750 to $1,000; while 62 get less than $750. With a prospect like that there isn't much inducement for a young man to take up the good work.

THE DULL RAZOR.

Mother's voice from next room: "Willie, come here! you must never listen to your father shaving."

THE NEW IRELAND.
Busy Man's Magazine.

There is new life throbbing everywhere in Ireland. The old social order, semi-feudal and ecclesiastical, still lingers, as the old skin of the serpent lingers while the new skin is forming below. It is nearly ready for the sloughing. The new order is economic, co-operative and social. The priest is still honored and held in high esteem, but he is no longer, as in former days, regarded as the oracle of omniscience on all questions, even on those about which, poor man, he admittedly knew nothing. The process which has dethroned his reverence as ultimate arbiter of cream separators and artificial manures, and replaced him by the practical expert, is natural and wholesome.

THE RETURN FROM THE DERBY

(A Recollection of England.)

Yesterday was "Darby" day,
And I didn't go, so I stayed away,
For I've suffered on Darby day of yore,
And I hold the crowd is a dreadful bore,
But, at six o'clock, or it might be more,
Though I'd stayed away, as I've said before,
And, although I was many a mile away,
I met that rapid old Darby day;
I met that rackety Darby day,
With a rattle of hoofs in grand array,
In an army of chariots, driving home,
Which started me going to write this "pome."

There was everything that runs on wheels;
There were murderous mobs of automobiles,
Red, and yellow, and green and white,
Big and heavy and small and light,
All of them kicking up the sand,
And all of them going to beat the band.

This was the clan that led the van,
With a maddening hoot of horns they ran,
And, in between, and on behind,
Came every build of every kind,
Of vehicle born to the human mind;
Since Pharoah's chariot was designed,
With every quadruped that's bred,
At least the sort on oats that's fed,
From a thoroughbred to a humble Ned,
Doing its dead to beat its head.

And, with clattering hoofs in chorus gay,
Of every color the tongue can say,
Sorrel and chestnut, brown and bay,
Dapple and piebald, roan and gray,
They all came thundering down the way
In a cloud of dust;
For 'twas Darby day.

There were reins of roses red and white;
There were whips beribboned with streamers bright;
There were damsels rare, both dark and fair,
With every possible color of hair;
There were duchesses, driving with their dukes;
There were other ladies who might be cooks;
There were "persons," pencilled and rouged and chalked,
With all their wrinkles carefully caulked;
There were hats of most prodigious size,
A frame for faces far from wise;
But every face had a saving grace,
For each and all of them loved a race.

And still they came and on they sped,
In reeking rags and royal red,
A cavalcade to call the dead,
In coster's cart, to break your heart,
And four-in-hand, and phaeton smart,
And broom that's small, and gig that's tall,
And tandem, fit to jump a wall,
And spanking pairs, a splendid show,
With twenty builds that I didn't know.

And still they came and on they rolled,
A hundred times a thousand fold,
Of every kind the world doth hold,
A boxer brave and a bishop bold,
A laughing lass and a wrinkled scold,
A betting man and belted earl,
The House of Lords and a ballet girl;
The men and women who're all the rage,
The queen of song, the wit, the sage,
The pen, the brush, the sword, the stage,
The names that live in history's page;

For high and low, we're out on show,
The upper [illegible] below,
And many it wouldn't be wise to know,
The world in brief, beyond belief,
The tares and wheat in a careless sheaf,
The bar, the bench and the branded thief;
The best that is and the wicked worst,
The last of men and the easy first,
The haloed saint and the sinner curst.

For every sport in the town was there,
And they cocked their hats with a knowing air,
And they laughed to think of the bets they'd won,
And they winked in fun at the sinking sun,
And their hearts were gay as a morn in May,
With pleasure and play, and —
"Hip hooray!"
They all came thundering down the way,
And they cracked their whips;
For 'twas Darby day.

BERTRAND SHADWELL.

Congress asked the Inter-State Commerce Commission for statistics on which to base new R. R. legislation.

Wit Saved His Neck.

A story is told of a prisoner before Lord Justice Fitzgibbon, at the time when the latter was one of the Justices of Appeal of Ireland, whose ready wit probably saved his neck.

Lord Fitzgibbon was holding assizes in Tipperary County, when a man was brought before him on indictment for murder. The case was proved that the victim came to his death by being hit with a stick in the hands of the defendant; but the doctor testified that he had what they called in medical parlance a "paper skull."

The case looked dark for the prisoner, however, and the jury returned a verdict of guilty. As the man was brought before the court for sentence it was noticed that his lordship had his black cap in his hand.

"Have you anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced upon you?" demanded Lord Fitzgibbon.

The man looked for a moment and then said, "No, your lordship, I have nothing to say; but I should like to ask one question."

"What is that, my man?" said Fitzgibbon.

"I should like to know what a man with a head like that was doing in Tipperary?"

The black cap was put away and a prison sentence imposed.

The First Skaters.

It is very doubtful which race first skated, for traces have been found among prehistoric remains all over northern Europe indicating that the art was practiced by primitive people. The Eskimo of the farthest north are also found to be in possession of runners carved from whalebone. Skating is mentioned by a Danish historian about 1134, and Fitzstephen in his "History of London" says that in the twelfth century young men fastened the leg bones of animals under their feet by means of throngs in order to slide along the ice. This statement is confirmed by the pair of bone skates of the period now in the British museum. It is likely, however, that these early Londoners got the idea from Holland, probably via Lincolnshire, where skates have been used on the frozen fens from very remote times.

Dean Weldon Goes West.

Once again the call has come to the east for an educationist, and Nova Scotia, as usual, is to bear the loss. It seems her portion to rear the best and then lose them. Her latest loss, more particularly Halifax,'s, is Dr. A. Stanley McKenzie, Ph.D., professor of physics at Dalhousie University, who has resigned his position in his alma mater, one which he has held for the past five years, and accepted an offer to the chair of physics at the Stephens Institute of Technology, New York. This institute is one of the finest of its kind in America, and was founded by Mr. Stephens, who highly endowed it. The university has an attendance of some five hundred students.

Dr. R. C. Weldon, Ph.D., dean of the law faculty of Dalhousie University, has received an appointment on the British Columbia University Commission. The commission will consider a site and plans for a new university, which will be supported by the Government of British Columbia. It is understood that Dean Weldon will be chairman of the commission.

HANDICAPPED

This is the Case With Many Peterborough People

Too many Peterborough citizens are handicapped with a bad back. The unceasing pain causes constant misery, making work a burden and stooping or lifting an impossibility. The back aches at night, preventing refreshing rest, and in the morning is stiff and lame. Plasters and liniments may give relief, but cannot reach the cause. To eliminate the pains and aches you must cure the kidneys.

Booth's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Can you doubt Peterborough evidence?

W. Wonnington, of 121 Brock street, Peterborough, Ont., says:—"I had suffered with rheumatism for over three years. I found little or no relief in any of the remedies I tried. I became so stiff and sore that I could scarcely turn in bed, and had to lay off from my work. The urine was highly colored and filled with a heavy sand-like sediment which plainly told the disordered state of the kidneys. I tried Booth's Kidney Pills through an advertisement at Wm. Madill's drug store, and was surprised to see how quickly the urine cleared. The kidneys were soon active and the uric acid went from my system. The rheumatism gradually became less severe and finally left me. I am better than in years previous and could not hesitate to recommend Booth's Kidney Pills."

Sold be dealers. Price 50 cents. The R. T. Booth Co., Limited, Fort Erie, sole Canadian agents.

A. J. McPherson, of the Saskatchewan Department of Public Works, has been appointed one of Regina's Municipal Commissioners at a salary of $6,000.

UNDERGROUND NEW YORK.

Quicksands That Make Trouble In Building Operations.

The rock surface of Manhattan Island slopes from north to south and passes below the tide level at about Tenth street. From this point south and below the water level the island consists of a great blanket of sand and silt deposits, built up on the underlying rock by the tides and currents of recent geologic times. Beds of clay and sand vary in thickness, and in some places the clay does not appear at all. The sands vary to a considerable degree, from the coarsest gravel to the most treacherous quicksands.

To give an idea of the fineness of this sand some samples were passed through sieves with meshes of various sizes and finally through a 200 mesh sieve, the openings of which are about .035 of an inch in width. From 20 to 37 per cent passed through the 200 mesh sieve. Little may we wonder, then, that such fine material when saturated with water should flow as readily as water itself, passing through every crevice and seeking its level just like any liquid. Herein lies the reason for the difficulties encountered in excavating in quicksands, for should pumping be resorted to in order to drain a pit of water this fine material will invariably be pumped with the water and if the pumping be continued will finally be drawn from under adjoining structures, eventually undermining them.

What is probably the oldest piece of wood in existence was found overlying the bedrock at a depth of about forty feet below the street level on the site of the United States Express building in Greenwich street and was covered by a stratum of hardpan about eleven feet thick, above which was a layer of quicksand and muck about thirty feet thick. The specimen of wood is slightly brown in color and is believed to have belonged to a now extinct species of cedar. As there was no way in which the wood could have been brought into this niche in the bedrock after the hardpan stratum had been deposited by the glaciers it is evident that the tree of which this specimen formed a part had been growing before the glacial epoch.—Harper's Weekly.

Electrically Cured Meat.

A Cleveland packer explained a new process of curing meat recently to a convention of packers. With electricity, he said, he could do in from three to twenty-five days what under the old salt pickle system takes from 25 to 105 days. The discovery came about in this way: About ten years ago a man was testing an electric motor, using a vat of salt and water as a makeshift rheostat. One of the electrodes in the vat was weighted down with a brick, which after the test crumbled in the hand like dry cake. The electricity had driven the salt particles into and through the brick. As he was interested in the packing business, the experimenter wondered if electricity couldn't drive salt into meat. He tried it, and a great meat curing plant has been erected in Cleveland.—Collier's.

A Taxicab Economy.

"I'm pinning on my braid," said the young woman who had been called to the telephone. "Oh, about twenty minutes, I guess."

"That is a trick," she said, "that came in with taxicabs. A man going anywhere with a woman in an old fashioned cab would have squandered half a week's salary before he would telephone to her about the stage of her toilet. But with taxicabs it is different. They eat up money faster than the old cabs, and it is nothing unusual now for an escort to ask how much longer it will take to get ready. Within fifteen or twenty minutes of the time set he calls a taxi and gets here just as you are going downstairs. Not very romantic, no, but it's sensible and saves money."—New York Sun.

Umbrella Sails.

Experiments have been made in England with a new kind of sail for boats. The sail when spread resembles a large umbrella. The mast, occupying a position similar to that of the stick in an umbrella, turns upon a pivot at the bottom. It is usually inclined about forty-five degrees to the horizon, but the inclination can be adjusted to suit the force of the wind. The inventors claim that with this sail "heeling of the boat" can be avoided, while at the same time the sail tends to lift the boat and thus enables it more easily to mount the waves.—Harper's Weekly.

Doesn't Sigh For Youth.

A person who would stand before you and advise you to get the most out of youth—that it is the happiest season of your life—is not telling you the truth. You grow happier as you get older. As I stand before you young folks I don't envy any one of you your youth. I had as fine a time as you when I was young, but I would not go back to my youth for anything. I'm much happier now. I really believe that by the time I'm eighty I'll be having the time of my life.—Professor William Lyon Phelps of Yale.

The Housefly.

Concerning his experience while studying the life and habits of the housefly, Henry Hill, a lecturer, states: "I wish I could explain why a fly never walks down, but always up, a clean window pane and why, on the other hand, it will walk down the slanting glass front of a picture. It is also a mystery to me why a fly always rests head downward on a wall. These are habits of the housefly which offer a field for interesting study."

A QUEEN OF FINANCE

HETTY GREEN IS ABOUT TO RETIRE FROM BUSINESS.

The Richest and Shrewdest Woman Money-lender In the World Thinks It Is About Time to Settle Down to a Quiet Old Age—Some of Her Queer Characteristics—Was Grandfather's Secretary.

Mrs. Hetty Green, celebrated for years as the richest and shrewdest business woman in the world, will soon retire from active life and turn over the handling of the bulk of her immense fortune of $60,000,000 to her daughter, Sylvia, now Mrs. Matthew Astor Wilks. Mrs. Green is now 73 years old and for months past her health has been failing. Rarely does she appear at her office in the Chemical National Bank, New York, and when she does her feeble appearance indicates that her physical powers will soon be inadequate to the handling of her vast property interests. She lacks the snap and dash in managing her affairs that characterized her in the past, although her shrewdness is still on guard. One of the regrets of the aged woman, whose whole life has been devoted principally to the accumulation of dollars, is the non-inclination of her son, E. H. R. Green, to become as famous a financier as herself. Sylvia, the daughter, or to give her the name by marriage she bears, Mrs. Wilks, takes more after her mother in financial matters and hence will have control of the bulk of the fortune.

Hetty Green's name will long survive in the world of finance. She was born with a gold spoon in her mouth. Her father was Edward M. Robinson, a master whaler of New Bedford, and when he died in 1865 he left Hetty $1,000,000 in her own right and $9,000,000 in trust for his descendants. Hetty was much sought after in the matrimonial market. Finally she married Edward A. Green, a millionaire by virtue of his trading operations in the East Indies, and she carefully made an ante-nuptial agreement, under which her husband must support her and their children and must not touch a dollar of her money. She felt that she could attend to the handling of her money and she did attend to it, with a judgment, caution and self-reliance which have won the praise of the greatest financiers. And it was well for her that she did. Her husband eventually lost practically all his fortune, the direct avenue of loss being stock operations. His health failed him, so that for years he continued a chronic invalid in the Green homestead at Bellows Falls, Vt., where he finally died in 1902.

Soon after her marriage Mrs. Green's fortune was increased through the death of an aunt, who left her $4,000,000, and with this and the $1,000,000 left her by her father she has accumulated at least $60,000,000.

Mrs. Green is noted for many things, chief among which are her parsimony and her litigious spirit. She dresses shabbily, or at least shabbily for a person of her means, and lives on homely fare. When her son was a lad he had to wear clothes which were patched and his mother always required him to sell the morning paper after it had been read. Hetty has a horror of paying taxes. She has never been on the tax roll of New York, because the assessors could never find her residence. To avoid taxation she moves from pillar to post, no matter at what inconvenience, and has often lived under assumed names the better to protect her wealth. Latterly she has been occupying a $19 flat in Hoboken and probably thinks that this monthly rental is too high.

All her life Mrs. Green has been involved in one lawsuit or another, many of them being in connection with the estate left by her father. Her suits have extended from ocean to ocean and she has met and defeated more men, light-weights and heavy-weights, in physique and intellect, than all the living pugilists from Sullivan to Jeffries. She boasts that she is the only woman in the country who ever won a suit against the late C. P. Huntington. Of all the lawyers in the country, she hates most "Joe Choate," as she calls the ex-ambassador to England. Mr. Choate has figured prominently in litigation against her, and he has always managed to get a certain amount of rather unchivalrous humor out of her clothes. Being a woman, she has not forgotten this. Hetty was reared a Quaker and says that she was taught that to condone a crime is to share the responsibility of evil-doing. Hence her fighting spirit.

Hetty has been connected with financial matters since her babyhood. As soon as she had learned to read she reeled off stock reports to her grandfather and at the age of ten was acting as his confidential clerk, writing his letters and attending to some of his business. He was a man of many investments, and he told the child what was good and why. His poor health and bad eyesight, succeeded as they were by similar weaknesses on the part of her father, served to make her develop [illegible] a young girl into a practical business woman.

Easy to Arrange.

The poor but honest young man had bearded the millionaire in his den.

"Well," he said, "I want to marry your daughter."

"Impossible, sir, impossible!" exclaimed the old man. "Why, I would rather give up every pound I have than part with my only daughter."

"Oh, very well," calmly rejoined the diplomatic youth; "if that's the way you feel about it I won't be too heavy on you. Just write me out a check for a hundred thousand and we'll let it go at that."

Somewhat Suspicious.

"Why did you refuse me an interview, Mr. Gotrox? I only wanted to ask you how you earned your first thousand dollars."

"Excuse me, young man; I thought you wanted to know how I got that last million."

General Sir William Francis Butler, author of "The Great Lone Land," is dead in London.

THE COLORADO DESERT.

Its Stunted Tree Forms and Its Petrified Forests.

In places in the Colorado desert are stream beds where perhaps once in several years heavy rains in distant mountains will cause water to flow for a short time. In these dry water courses several varieties of stunted tree forms are often found. The desert willow, which resembles the willow with which we are familiar, though smaller in size; the val verde, or green tree, a tree which is a bright green from trunk to tip of limb in every twig, and the ironwood, so dense in fiber that it turns an ax's edge, are the principal varieties. They are rarely above twenty feet high and, like all desert vegetation, have not a leaf.

They are apparently outcasts from the two great tree divisions, deciduous and citrus, for they have leaves neither to lose nor to keep. These may be called the living dogs of the tree family. We will find here also the dead lions.

Not far from the mountain range we will come upon the remains of what were once extensive forests of gigantic trees, now turned to stone and lying as they fell centuries ago. The great trunks, perfect in grain, knot and bark fiber, cumber the ground in tangled confusion in those places which have been protected from the drifting sand, giving evidence that what is now a desert was once upon a time a tropical wilderness.—Travel Magazine.

Why He Was Sad.

Jones' rich grandmother died, and Jones seemed unnaturally depressed and sad. His friend tried to cheer him.

"She left a last will and testament, I suppose," said Jenkins carelessly.

"Ah," chimed in Brown, "you were always a friend of hers! Of course your name was mentioned?"

"Yes," answered Jones, bursting into floods of tears, "my name was mentioned, boys. I—I am to have"—

They hung expectant, while more sobs choked back his words.

"I," he declared at last, "am to have the testament!"—London Scraps.

WARNINGS ISSUED FROM THE MAGISTERIAL CHAIR

A citizen who rode his bicycle on the sidewalk instead of on the road was relieved of $2 at the police court to-day. His was the first prosecution of the season, but there will be others if those who have been in the habit of using the sidewalk persist in breaking the law. The police have been instructed to keep a sharp lookout for offenders.

BURN IT.

Trouble will also be forthcoming to merchants, messenger boys and others who throw paper and such like on the streets. This practice is going to be stopped and the warning comes direct from Magistrate Dumble.

STOP COASTING.

The small boy takes great pleasure in coasting down a steep sidewalk with his cart, turns corners on two wheels and doesn't consider pedestrians at all. This is another offence to which the police are going to give their close attention.

THE EVANGELIZATION OF THE ARAUCANIANS OF SOUTH CHILI

Described in Illustrated Address by Anglican Missionary to South America --Papers on Sunday School Work on Closing Day of Teachers' Training School for Archdeaconry of Peterborough.

Some excellent ideas as to the superintendent's part in the Sunday school were given at Wednesday afternoon's session of the teacher's training school at St. John's school by Rev. H. R. Trumpour and continuing yesterday afternoon he spoke on order and discipline with regard to the teacher's relation to the pupil.

The first two things a teacher had to see to in obtaining discipline in a class were regularity and punctuality.

Privacy among the classes was necessary and if it was not possible to have class rooms, screens should be employed that each class might be a private assemblage.

The greatest amount of discipline could be done outside the class by careful preparation of the lesson and by contact with the scholar and scholar's home.

The speaker then gave several individual points. The teacher was not to have too high expectations; should be full of little devices of language and persistence; should cultivate a humorous insight into the exasperating side of things; should deal in private with the individual boy who made trouble, and should trust boys and girls more than half way.

The secret of the teacher's success lay in personality, but the teacher should study not to override this personality, but to develop the quality of love and the practice of prayer.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ORGANIZATION.

By the wide scope suggested by the title of this address by Rev. C. V. Pilcher it will be readily understood that the interest was a very general one and Mr. Pilcher handled his topic in masterly style.

Mr. Pilcher is a strong advocate of promotion in Sunday schools as an incentive to the best efforts on the part of the pupils. A special promotion day should be chosen and study for promotion should be encouraged by good prizes.

He also emphasized the idea that every Deanery should have a section composed of clergy and laity and each one an expert in his special subject, for the purpose of giving special instruction to the children. Promotion day might then be made an important feature of Sunday school life in the church.

The special purposes for which the offertory was taken should be made known to the children and it should be the purpose of the treasurer to see to this and encourage systematic giving.

PRINCIPLES OF TEACHING.

This subject was presented convincingly by Rev. J. Russell McLean. Every teacher must be systematic in regard to his subject. The speaker said his own classical education had not been as full as it should have been, because he had a teacher who thought he was a good scholar, had no sympathy or poetic temperament.

Maudlin sentiment, however, didn't pay in Sunday school teaching. There had to be an element of firmness and the pupils had to realize that the teacher was their master. At the same time the teacher had to have a loving and tender personality.

The subject had to be seen by the teacher. It could not be a mere abstract. If we wished to communicate any idea we had to apprehend that idea correctly and to make the children do so also.

"MAKING OF MISSIONARIES."

Rev. H. A. Ben Oliel, of Cobourg, dealt with this subject in an eloquent and very clear way. The full text of the subject was:—"The making of missionaries in the Sunday school."

This was to be done in two ways—first by cultivating the missionary spirit in the scholar and secondly by feeding that spirit by information.

And it had to be made known to the child that we were Christians not simply in a parochial sense, but for the world wide spread of the Kingdom of Christ.

A vital step in the birth of the missionary spirit was the sending out of the scholars to get other pupils for their classes.

In his own parish the system of boys bringing in new scholars by this missionary method had proved very effective.

The other phase of the question was the giving of missionary information and this information should be something that is real, something that is vivid and is almost tangible. Mere appeals to sentiment would not have the desired effect.

EVENING SESSION.

After an effective and attractively presented model lesson in catechising by Rev. F. L. Barber at the evening meeting, Rev. Dr. Langfeldt announced that he would withdraw his address on "Relation of the Teacher to the Child" in order that Miss Louy Thomas might have the full complement of time in which to deliver her illustrated lecture on missionary work in South America.

Miss Thomas, a former Toronto resident, and now home on furlough, is a missionary worker in the Araucanian Mission in South Chili and her lecture was full of special interest to the session of the training school. The Araucanian Indians are the aboriginal race of Chili.

South America, Miss Thomas stated, was known as "the neglected continent," and the title was an apt one. Civilization had not extended very far inland and it was only practically where civilization had penetrated that the work of evangelization of the heathen had been introduced.

The strange customs of the people, their places of dwelling, the unkempt huts or rookas—the handiwork of the women and the rude implements of agriculture were depicted on the canvas in splendid slides.

The Indians believed in one spirit, the missionaries found, but didn't profess to know much about that being.

A feature of particular interest was the descriptions and illustrations of the heathen religious customs of the continent to the far south.

With these people as with all heathen, there are strange traditions and the speaker's long residence has made her so thoroughly familiar with them that she was able to tell about them in a most entertaining way.

The way of the missionary in South America is not a primrose path and the speaker told of many difficulties that were met with in pioneer and more advanced missionary work.

The general education of the children was looked after well by the missionary interests and pictures were shown of substantial and well appointed schools where the children were in charge of competent teachers. Besides religious instruction the pupils of both sexes were given a splendid domestic education.

The boys were taught agricultural gardening and other practical arts while the girls were instructed in cooking, sewing and household duties.

The preachers in charge of the work are capable and energetic and the system of religious training is excellently organized.

COURT CHEMONG DELEGATES TO HIGH COURT APPOINTED

G. N. Brown D.H.C.R. Belleville, Tells of Benefit of I. O. F Connections—Annual Excursion of Local Court to Mount Julian on Civic Holiday

Court Chemong, No. 530, I.O.F., met last night in the S.O.E. hall, and important business was transacted. It was their regular semi-monthly meeting.

Mr. G. N. Brown, D.H.C.R., of Belleville, was present and spoke for half an hour on the flourishing state of Forestry in Eastern Ontario.

He had just returned from Prince Edward County, where 200 men were received into the society.

He also said that men in general were beginning to see the great need of belonging to such a society as the Independent Order of Foresters.

The insurance plan of the I.O.F. also came in for some commendatory words.

In the year 1909 the amount of money paid out to living members of the society amounted to $560,000. Men everywhere recognize the insurance policy adopted by the I.O.F. to be equally as good as endowment policies.

The following men were elected as delegates to the High Court of Eastern Ontario, which meets at Picton in August:—Bro. A. Allison, Bro. F. J. Gandy, Bro. F. C. Rook, Bro. W. G. McKee, Bro. G. Metcalfe, and two alternates, namely, Bro. H. A. Webb and Bro. G. W. Powell.

On an average 3,000 members are being received into the I.O.F. every month.

Last month Mr. Brown was at Mt. Julian establishing a new court there.

The annual excursion of the society in Peterborough will be to Mt. Julian on Civic Holiday.

The dockers employed on the Manchester-Ghent line of steamers have gone on Strike.

SIX CASES BEFORE JUNE SESSIONS OF COUNTY COURT

Which Opens Tuesday at One O'clock—Three Jury and Three Non-jury Actions—The Docket List

The June sessions of the County Court will open next Tuesday at one o'clock, with His Honor Judge Huycke presiding. The docket list is made up of three jury and three non-jury cases, which are as follows:

The first jury case is that of W. H. Clysdale, of Dummer, vs. the London Mutual Life Insurance Co. The plaintiff claims that he had his drive house and hen house and contents of same insured with the defendants for $1,875. On July 15th the above buildings were struck by lightning and burned, the loss amounting to $1,425. The plaintiff claims $700 interest on the same and costs of the action.

$653.63 DAMAGES.

The second is a case of Fowler and McBride vs. the Grand Trunk Railway. The plaintiffs claim that on August last, by their agents, the John Goodison Co., Ltd., they delivered to the defendants, at Sarnia, a thresher and engine complete with fittings and accessories upon car No. 62,612, G.T.R., to be by the defendants safely and promptly delivered to the plaintiff at the station of the defendants at Peterborough. The G.T.R. received the thresher in good condition to transmit by fast freight to defendants for immediate use of the outfit upon the harvest already begun, as the defendants knew.

The plaintiffs further claim that the defendants did not make a prompt delivery owing to negligence, having missed the car, No. 62,612, which, as a matter of fact, did not arrive in Peterborough until Sept. 21st, 1909, twenty-five days after it should have arrived in ordinary course. He refused delivery by reason of neglect. Plaintiff claimed $653.63 damages and costs of the action. Bennet & Goodwill for plaintiffs, and W. H. Biggar for defendants.

Frederick G. Scott is suing Wm. E. Griffith for $500.00 and costs, claiming that after leasing certain lands in Belmont from defendant and doing certain work thereon the defendant refused to allow plaintiff to come on said property. O'Connell & Gordon for plaintiff; Dennistoun, Peck & Kerr for defendant.

NON-JURY.

In the Margaret Meldrum vs. the Peterborough Cereal Co., Ltd., action the plaintiff, who resides at 52 McDonnel street, says that the defendants used and occupied a stable of the plaintiff, also purchased one wagon, one set of harness, hired a horse and agreed to pay for such accordingly. Plaintiff claims, for the use of stable, $85.00; for wagon and harness, sold, $40.00, and for the hire of the horse $3.00 per week. Plaintiff also claims interest. Ozias De Laplante for plaintiff; O'Connell & Gordon for defendants.

This is an action brought by Nathaniel Crowe, a farmer residing in the township of Harvey, vs. Wilson N. Blewett, a mill owner, also of Harvey.

The plaintiff claims that he entered into an agreement with the defendant to purchase a steam launch, called the Pearl. The defendant represented that the steamship was sound and serviceable and suitable for plaintiff's business, that of carrying freight and passengers, but subsequently the plaintiff found that the boat was in such bad condition that it could not be made sound and serviceable. Plaintiff claims $300 damages and costs of the action.

R. F. McWilliams for plaintiff; O'Connel & Gordon for defendants.

ACTION AGAINST CITY.

In the second action G. W. Hatton, a solicitor, of Peterborough, claims $500 and costs of the action because of injuries he received by being thrown out of a buggy through his horse being frightened at obstructions on Concession street. Plaintiff alleges negligence on the part of the municipal corporation of Peterborough.

O'Connell & Gordon for plaintiff; E. H. D. Hall for defendant.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA NINE CHAMPS OF JUNIOR SERIES

Youthful Ball Tossers Put Up Fine Exhibition of Game at the Oval—Northenders Won From St. Peter's by Score of 3-2—Twenty-three Outs at First Base.

The championship of the junior series of the City School Baseball League rests with the Queen Alexandra nine. The final game in this series was played at the Oval between St. Peter's and Queen Alexandra nines yesterday afternoon, and it just took forty minutes to decide the winner. The score was 3—2, and on the showing made by the players of both aggregations, it would appear that those who have been in charge of the league have accomplished much in developing young material for the baseball game. The exhibition was an excellently well-played one. The ball was batted and fielded in a manner that would place many of the older exponents of the game away in the shade, and there weren't any baloon ascensions, either.

No scoring was done till the fifth innings, when St. Peter's put one man across. The north end team evened up in their half, and went ahead in the sixth, counting twice. St. Peter's secured their second tally in the seventh.

The play was all infield work, twenty-three players going out at first base. Both twirlers performed in fine style and broke even in the honors.

CITY LEAGUERS

It is up to the fans who stay at home to-morrow to turn out and patronize the city league games. The league has to bear considerable expense for the use of the grounds, and as many of the regulars will be out of town, those who would like to see the city leaguers in action but have not, up to the present, should have a look to-morrow.

Strathconas will be at home to the P.A.C. at two o'clock and the T.A.S. will entertain the West Ends at four.

Tommy Darke will umpire both games and will keep the players in both games on the move.

The following players of the Strathconas are asked to be on hand:—Patterson, Dusty, F. Craig, V. Craig, Weatherston, Kendrey, Ray, Gorham, Leitch, Shaw, Macafee and Sheridan.

FOOTBALL

The C.G.E. and Lakefield Midland Football League teams, meet at Brinton's Meadow this evening at 6.30, in the second game of the semi-finals. The local team has a lead of two goals, but the contest is sure to be interesting.

OUTDOOR SPORT AND ZAM-BUK

Every athlete, every ball-player, every swimmer, every canoeist, every man or woman who loves outdoor life and exercise, should keep a box of Zam-Buk handy.

Zam-Buk is a purely herbal preparation, which as soon as applied to cuts, bruises, burns, sprains, blisters, etc., sets up highly beneficial operations. First, its antiseptic properties render the wound free from all danger from blood poisoning. Next, its soothing properties relieve and ease the pain. Then its, rich, herbal balms penetrate the tissue, and set up the wonderful process of healing. Barbed wire scratches, insect stings, skin diseases, such as eczema, heat rashes, ringworm, babies' heat sores, chafed places, sore feet—all come within Zam-Buk'spower. It also eases and cures piles. All druggists and stores. Avoid imitations.

SLIP IT OVER

Batting is my name, kid, my middle name is Hit; so feed me with a fast one, and see me land on it. Ty Cobb and other fellers are better known than me, but I'm a'going to git there, for I've the batting bee. So slip it over kiddo, and watch me soak the pill; I bet my streak of batting will make you feel quite ill. For the Terriors need my hitting to cop the game today, an' I must clean the bases in the good old fashioned way.

TOBACCO CURING BY HEAT.

New Type of Closed Barn Used by a Connecticut Grower.

Tobacco growing is counted among the hazardous lines of agriculture in that a crop may be totally destroyed within a very short time by hail or by pole sweat in the curing shed. Danger of hail damage is eliminated in the growing of shade tobacco, but the menace of pole sweat is as great as ever. Last season, however, the first scientific experiment on a large scale to guard against pole sweat in cigar leaf tobacco was made on the farm of William Pinney at Suffield, Conn. The result may ultimately place the farmer in absolute control of the curing process, shortening the time and determining the shade the tobacco shall be when it has been cured.

The experiment was simply the utilization of artificial heat during the curing process. Some kinds of heavy leaf tobacco are cured in tight barns and with fire, and it has long been a common practice to build charcoal fires in the barns when tobacco was in grave danger of being ruined by pole sweat. But until the experiment on the Pinney farm no effort had been made to control the curing and coloring of cigar leaf.

A special type of barn is required for this work. A ventilator along the entire ridge which may be readily opened or closed tight is an important feature. Instead of the crude charcoal burners placed on the ground, creating a fire menace, specially constructed furnaces, five in number, were placed in the ground. The feed doors are on the outside of the building, so that smoke and vapors from the fire cannot enter the barn and affect the flavor of the tobacco. The smoke pipe of each furnace runs across the entire width of the building and returns on a parallel ten feet away and at a slight pitch. The vents are in the side of the barn. The smoke pipe forms the only heat radiating service.

Immediately after the crop was put into the barn the fires were started and the barn closed tightly. The temperature was run up to 80 degrees and the fires permitted to die down after the first day. The curing by this method was hastened at least five days. Very excellent natural atmospheric conditions for curing prompted Mr. Pinney to abandon further application of artificial heat. It was noted during the first two days when the barn was closed that the tobacco turned a rich yellow. The final result was a large percentage of excellent wrappers.

NEW TYPE OF TOBACCO BARN.

The furnaces were installed under the supervision of a representative of the United States department of agriculture, and the curing was followed by John B. Stewart, United States tobacco expert in the Connecticut valley, who acted in an advisory capacity to Mr. Pinney. The entire crop was prime tobacco and has since been sold at a little less than 25 cents per pound. Next year this method will have a more thorough test. The value of a barn full of tobacco is no small item, and any experiment which might destroy such a valuable product is naturally conducted with greatest caution.

Tobacco men are confident that the barn curing process will eventually be as easily controlled as the sweating process by means of steam heat.

Winter Care of Cabbage.

How deeply should cabbage plants be covered where the ground sometimes freezes three and four feet? Does it hurt cabbage to freeze? Should plants be taken up before freezing in the autumn? How early in the spring should they be set out? These questions are answered by Linnaeus Allen of Nassau county, N. Y., as follows:

Where the ground freezes three and four feet deep it will be necessary to plow up the cabbage after trenching so that the heads will be covered with at least a foot of soil. On top of this should be a heavy mulch of cornstalks or other suitable material. It does not hurt cabbage to be frozen in the trenches provided it remains frozen for a long time. What hurts it is to be thawed and then frozen several times.

The plants should be taken up and put in the trenches before the soil becomes frozen too hard to work easily. Two or three heavy frosts will not hurt the plants, nor would a reasonable amount of freezing, except that the heads will bruise easily when frozen, and this will cause rot.

If you wish to put the cabbage away for seed growing next spring the heads should be set out as soon as the ground can be put in good condition after the frost is out.

System In Farming.

No other business in the world would stand the amount of mismanagement and nonmanagement that the farmer's does. It is time for the farmers to study modern business methods and put them in practice. This is a time of wonderful prosperity on the farm, but greater things are ahead if the farmer will make systematic use of his opportunities.

Indicted for Embezzlement.

New Orleans, June 10.—Frank Davies, until recently secretary and treasurer of the grand consistory, Scottish Rite Masons of Louisiana, was yesterday indicted on the charge of embezzling $15,400 of the funds of the consistory.

Stung.

He stood at a street corner and mentally kicked himself.

"I went into a drug store just now," he told a policeman, "and I asked a bold female clerk for some cold cream for my wife. She handed me out this quart jar of the stuff, more than my wife can use in ten years, and charged me a dollar for it. On the way out I saw a stack of twenty-five cent jars of the same thing. Do you think a man clerk would ever play a customer a trick like that?"

"No, I don't," said the policeman. "Why don't you take it back?"

"And have her look at me the scornful way she would? Don't you ever think it. I wouldn't go inside that store again for $50."

The Herring Line.

A senator apropos of fame said at a Washington luncheon:

"What is fame, after all? Kipling when he lived in Brattleboro took a trip to Montpelier, and the first evening he came down to the hotel dining-room he overheard this dialogue between two waiters:

"First Waiter—Do you know who that is, George?

"Second Waiter—No. Who is it?

"First Waiter—That's the celebrated Kipperin.

"Second Waiter—What's he done?

A Dainty Frock For the Summer Girl.

GOWN OF EYELET EMBROIDERY.

There are several features about the lingerie gown illustrated that are worth noting. As you may see, most of the costume is made of wide flouncing in eyelet embroidery combined with Persian lamb of the finest, sheerest quality. The all in one kimono blouse is cut square at the neck and carried out almost entirely with the eyelet work, insertions of valenciennes lace and the lawn filling in the interstices.

The tunic drapery is of the embroidery, edged at the bottom with a ruffle of the narrow Val lace. Under this drapery the skirt is elaborately trimmed with alternate bands of eyelet embroidery, flanked on each side with valenciennes lace insertion and stripes of tucked lawn. The elbow sleeves are of the combined materials.

THROUGH THE CUSTOM HOUSE

First Aid to Folks Returning to Their Native Land.

Under the head of "Advice to Travelers" a writer in the Woman's Home Companion offers some suggestions for smoothing the rough road which returning Americans must travel.

"Keep all receipted bills for goods bought on the other side," says he, "and present them to the inspector when asking to have your baggage examined. The figures on the bill are a verification of the statement of cost contained in your declaration. Both act as guides for the inspector, whose work necessitates his making a rough appraisement of the value of an article on sight.

"If you have no receipted bills and if he thinks your declaration is very much out of the way as to the cost of an article, then it will be his duty to increase the value to an amount he thinks is fair and just. If you are dissatisfied with the value he places on the goods you may demand a re-examination.

"This demand, however, must be made immediately. The re-examination will be made then and there if possible. If it is not possible, then the article in question must be left in the custody of the customs officials and an application must be made to the collector for a reappraisement. Remember, however, you cannot have a reappraisement made after you have once taken the goods cut of the customs custody.

"What has been said here applies to residents of the United States who have taken a short vacation abroad and have brought back with them small things for their own use or as souvenirs. It does not take into consideration things brought into the country for other people or for sale. Where the intention is to sell anything brought in that fact should be stated in the declaration."

Why Lick Postage Stamps?

Do the people who jeer at the cautious ones as "cranks" who refuse to lick a postage stamp know that there is a defined disease known as "the postage stamp tongue?"

This is an acute inflammation of the tongue, directly traced to the germs to be found on the gummed side of stamps or envelopes.

Other and more serious diseases have been caused by this habit that is so universal and seems so harmless.

One throat specialist in a hospital declares that many chronic affections of the throat are found among persons who have as their means of livelihood the addressing and stamping of envelopes.

Bad skin diseases have been known to follow this habit, and it has even caused pulmonary troubles.

It is, after all, but a habit and a bad one. It takes no more time and is quite as easy to moisten the stamp with a damp sponge or rag.

Keeping the Pantry Clean.

Nothing is so unsightly in a pantry or closet as a number of tin lids pitched loosely on a shelf. One woman has overcome this effect by nailing a narrow strip of wood to cleats about ten inches under her high pot shelf in the pantry.

In the space thus made the lids are slipped. The handles prevent slipping, and they can be had at a minute's notice. Ranged according to sizes, hunting for the right lid does not waste one's time.

Got His Number.

Uncle Zeph had had some trouble getting about on the cars and complained of the employees. "When a conductor is uncivil to you take his number," said his nephew.

Two days later uncle came in somewhat battered, but looking triumphant. "I got the number," he said, with a satisfied air, "but I had to grab the bull cap too."—Buffalo Express.

BUILT ON DISCIPLINE.

Big Department Stores Are Managed Like an Army.

"This is like an army," the manager explained when I went to him to ascertain by what system he handled the big department store. "The assistant managers are the generals, the department heads the colonels, the floorwalkers majors, and so on down the line. Only matters which are out of the ordinary routine are brought to the commander in chief.

"The organization is built on discipline. Each individual knows what work he has to do, and if he fails the failure reacts directly upon him. Thus each in turn is responsible to the one above him until the responsibility reaches this office. In the final analysis I am responsible to the firm. If a girl ties a bundle wrong or there is a dispute with a customer I am directly responsible, although I have probably known nothing of the incident. I pass the actual administration of authority and responsibility right down the line until the person who is at fault feels it personally. Doubtless hundreds of things happen in this store every day of which I have no knowledge, and I don't need to know about them. So long as the man to whom I have delegated the authority delegates it in turn to some one who knows how to use it properly there is no reason why I should interfere.

"This is the way it should be. I should not consider that we had an effective system if it were otherwise. A system must be so perfectly organized and every man must know and live up to his responsibilities so sincerely that I could walk out of this office today and not return for six months."—Interview With Manager of New York Store in Bookkeeper.

Eating Away an Island.

Strength is not a thing usually connected with maidenhair fern, yet if its roots have not sufficient room they will break the pot in which the plant grows. Blades of grass will force the curbstones between which they spring up out of their place, and in a single night a crop of small mushrooms have lifted a large stone. Indeed, plants have been known to break the hardest rocks. The island of Aldabra, to the northwest of Madagascar, is becoming smaller and smaller through the action of the mangroves that grow along the foot of the cliffs. They eat their way into the rock in all directions, and into the gaps thus formed the waves force their way. In time they will probably reduce the island to pieces.—London Globe.

HE WON TWO BETS.

A Story of Baseball Rivalry Between Two Teams.

By CLARA B. TUCKER.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

Beatrice Barr was born a tomboy. At ten wrestling with her brother, two years her senior, she downed him. From fourteen to sixteen it was all horseback with her—no saddle preferred. At seventeen she quieted down a bit.

About this time Tom Barr, her brother, was chosen captain of the Arlington baseball club. Beatrice at the meets of her brother's club with other clubs never failed to occupy a front seat on the grand stand with a card and a pencil in her hand, and those about her always depended on her for the score. She was very keen to see the correct side of all disputed points, and often an umpire would take her opinion in preference to his own.

Now, the great rivals of the Arlingtons, captained by Tom Barr, were the Crescents, led by Dick Thruston. The Arlingtons had kept the lead of the Crescents till Thruston took command of the latter. After that there came a series of defeats for the Arlingtons that made Captain Barr furious. Thruston was a splendid specimen of male youth. With a superb figure, great muscular strength and a quick, springy step he was to be admired from an artistic point of view. And, a born commander, he was just the man to organize and captain a baseball team. What assured his success was that he was a first class pitcher.

At the end of the season Thruston had placed his team so far ahead of Barr's that the latter made up his mind to reorganize for the next season with a view to regaining the position he had lost. He was busy all winter examining and testing the skill of applicants and by spring had got together as likely a lot of boys as ever composed a baseball club. But in spite of all he could do he could not find a pitcher to match Dick Thruston.

Rumors of Barr's efforts reached the ear of the rival captain, and he, too, bestirred himself. The team he selected was as much better than the team he had led the season before as Tom's was superior to the one which had been defeated. And so it was that when the series of games was entered upon the Arlingtons and the Crescents were evenly matched except that the latter could outpitch the former.

Nevertheless Tom Barr entered upon the season's games with considerable confidence. He bantered Thruston as to what he would do with him, and Thruston, who was as much of a thoroughbred as a baseball player, only smiled and said: "I'd like to see you do it, Tom. There's no fun with the luck all on one side."

"I'll tell you what I'll do," said Tom. "I'll bet you a hat we beat you on the games during the season."

"All right," replied Thruston. "I'll take that."

"And I'll make you another bet. I'll bet you a box of cigars against a dozen pairs of gloves that we'll beat you at least one game with a man short on our team."

"I don't quite understand that," said Thruston.

"Do you take the bet?"

"Anything you like."

"Done." And Tom repeated the terms of the two bets.

"Another thing," Tom continued. "There's only one person I can get to match you in pitching—a negro. Do you object to playing against one of the colored race?"

"Not if my team don't. I'll speak to them about the matter."

Thruston soon after sent Captain Barr permission to introduce a negro into the game if required.

The agreement between the two clubs was that they were to play seven games, four to win, the games to be played on alternate Saturday afternoons, beginning with the second Saturday in April. There was great interest manifested on the part of the friends of the two teams, and when the first game was played the grand stand was packed and much of the standing room was taken up. A fine lot of boys on each side were arrayed, and the play from the first was the finest that had ever been played between the Arlingtons and the Crescents. The regular pitcher was in place for the former, Barr not having availed himself of the permission he had received to use the negro. After a hard fought game the Arlingtons won by a few runs.

When the game was finshed some said that it had been won by Beatrice Barr's presence and encouragement. At any rate, she was adored by the members of her brother's team, and there was not one of them who would not give his head to serve her. A few, while attributing the Arlingtons' success to her, referred that success to a far different cause. They said that if Captain Thruston had kept his eyes off Beatrice Barr and fixed his attention on the game the score would have been very different.

The second game was played under very much the same conditions, and again the Arlingtons won. By this time a number of the Crescents had noticed that their captain was not doing his best, and one of them went to him and expostulated. Thruston knew very well what was the matter with him, though he did not reveal the secret. He promised that the next game should show up very differently.

And it did. Barr fixed his attention on the game and won it by half a dozen runs—not only that, but he beat the next, the fourth game. During both the third and fourth games Beatrice Barr was not present. It was given out that she was ill. Some malicious spectators declared that she had been bribed by the Crescents with ten pounds of candy to keep away. This only excited merriment. All knew that she was wrapped up in the success of her brother's team. But when the fifth game came round and she was again absent, the Crescents winning, many who had noticed Thruston's bad play while she was present looked knowing and whispered to one another that they believed there might be something in the bribery story after all. Beatrice was not in her seat at the sixth game; but, despite her absence, the Arlingtons won.

Each team had now won three games, and the seventh was to decide the championship. Beatrice Barr told some of her most intimate girl friends that she would love to see the game, but she had understood that unpleasant remarks had been made about the effect of her presence on the result and she had decided to remain away from the grand stand. She was not in her seat when the deciding game was played, but it was said that she watched it from behind the blinds of a house overlooking the oval.

When the teams went out on to the field a negro was noticed among the Arlingtons. Captain Thruston was about to protest when he remembered that he had agreed that Barr should use a negro pitcher if he chose. Some surprise was indicated that a boy of his size was expected to do extra fine pitching. He was but average height, and his muscles did not show under his loose suit. But when he began to pitch the secret came out. He could do things with a baseball that a champion billiardist can work with the ivories. Few could hit his balls, and those who did usually sent them straight up in the air, to be caught by the outs.

During the changes from the bat various persons, mostly from among the Crescents' side, attempted to get near the colored pitcher to have a look at him or question him, but he managed to keep pretty well away from them and would only answer "Yes" or "No." Finally, seeing that he was not to be interviewed, they let him alone. The Crescents held the last inning, the negro pitching. The Arlingtons led in the score by two runs. Thruston was at the bat, and it was expected that he would make a hit to enable the men on the bases to get in, three men hoping to complete their runs and win the game. But the negro served the balls with such curves that Thruston either sent them straight up in the air or they struck the ground near his feet. Finally, one of his skyrockets being caught, the game was lost to the Crescents. Dick Thruston dropped his bat and with a chivalry for which he was noted strode forward with outstretched hand to congratulate the pitcher for having won the game for his team. But the negro, instead of waiting for him, ran away at the top of his speed and disappeared from the oval.

Tom Barr ran up to Thruston and said:

"I've won two bets from you, Dick."

"What two bets?"

"Bets we made at the beginning of the season—one that we'd beat you on the score of games, the other that we'd beat you a game one man short on our team."

"You've won the first, but I don't see how you've won the second."

"Come round to the house this evening and I'll explain."

That evening Thruston, having doffed his baseball clothes, in immaculate attire called at the Barrs'. He found Tom with Beatrice, who was dressed in her most becoming costume. She hung her head before the gaze of her admirer.

"You told me today," Tom said to Dick, "that you didn't understand how I had won our second bet. The last game was played with eight men and a girl. There is the girl. She's been two hours washing off the burnt cork."

Dick stood looking at Beatrice in astonishment; then he repeated his act at the close of the game. He seized her hand and poured forth a volume of congratulations and compliments.

The most important feature connected with the struggle between the Arlington and Crescent teams was the announcement in the autumn of the engagement of Dick Thruston and Beatrice Barr.

DOESN'T KNOW THAT HE MUST BE HANGED

At 3.40 This Afternoon Henderson Did Not Know That He Had to Pay Death Penalty—Review Was First to Advise Goaler of Department's Decision.

The Review rang up Mr. Henderson Nesbitt, the jailor at the Peterborough jail, at 3.40 this afternoon to find out from him if possible how Henderson had received the news that he was to be hanged.

At that time the prisoner had not heard of the refusal of the Department of Justice to grant the commutation of sentence.

The Review was the first source from which Mr. Nesbitt learned of the decision of the Department of Justice.

Waste of Food on Big Liners.

As to food waste the most extraordinary is perhaps found on the big liners that carry three classes of passengers, says The London Chronicle. You might imagine that the elaborate dishes prepared for the saloon would be passed down from class to class and that the poorer would eat of the crumbs that are carried from the rich man's table. Not a bit of it. The second class would resent a "menu" that does not go round, and even the steerage passengers would quarrel if the fare were not the same for all. And so the big liners pitch good food into the ocean.

Probably your own family physician would tell you that it will do your blood and nerves good to drink Regal Lager with your dinner. For he must know the benefit even the weakest digestions derive from this pure and thirst-quenching brew.—Adv.

THE MAN ON THE SCISSORS' END

Is Thinking About Increasing the Charge for His Services

The little tattler bug has it that the barbers of the city are again considering the advisability of advancing the price now charged for diminishing the length of that ornament of the top piece, that dome of thought, which lacks a nickle of being twenty-five cents, to the even quarter of a dollar.

It is not exactly known whether the idea is to increase the amount of coinage in the cash register or to do away with the change nuisance.

THE PASSING OF THE OLD "GYM"

At the Queen Alexandra School to Make More Room for the Pupils

In another column of this issue will be found an advertisement calling for tenders for the removal of the frame building at the Queen Alexandra public school.

The object in removing the building is to allow of more space for the pupils when carrying on their games. The building has not been used for some time.

The grounds will be cleared up and a fence erected at the eastern boundary of the school property.

The old "Gym," as the building has been commonly called, were it able to speak, could tell many tales. Every game in the school boys' and school girls' category has been played in it, and when some past pupil of the "North Ward school" passes and finds it gone, pleasant memories of bygone days will return, saddened alone by the thought of the old building, now about to be razed.

They are certainly the finest ever produced, and they recommend themselves by whomsoever used. Mr. Browett, Optical Specialist, makes a most thorough examination of the eyes, and is most careful of the adjustment, so that in every particular they are made to suit the exact needs of each eye, and the facial features of the wearer. In fact these glasses are useless unless the examiner has had sufficent experience in refracting and adapting. CAN'T HANG IN SUMMER; CRIMINAL CODE MAKES SUCH EXECUTIONS IMPOSSIBLE?

T. C. Robinette is Following Same Line in Case of Italian That He Did in That of Walter Blythe—Three Others May Secure Postponement.

Toronto, June 11.—It looks as though no man needs be hanged in Ontario during the summer months, if he has a counsel willing to take advantage of the technicalities which a strict interpretation of the law affords. For instance:

Pasquale Ventricini, sentenced by Justice Riddell to be hanged in Toronto Jail June 30, for the stabbing of one, Fabbio, on March 6, cannot be executed until after September 15 next, which is the day fixed by statute for the next sitting of the Court of Appeal, is the statement of T. C. Robinette, K.C., his counsel, made last night.

The same two sections of the criminal code which stayed the death sentence passed upon Walter Blythe by the same judge, until a new trial was granted, resulted in a conviction of the lesser crime of manslaughter, will be invoked to prolong the life of Ventricini, and under these sections there seems to be no possibility of hanging any man in the summer months, for the Court of Appeal is procluded by statute from sitting between the months of May and September.

To-day Mr. Robinette will apply to Justice Riddell for a stated case to the Court of Appeal, upon the ground that it was improper for that judge to call the jury back after they had been deliberating for over two hours, tell them that they might bring in a verdict of guilty with a recommendation to mercy, and to promise them that he would be governed by it, and that he would give them five minutes to arrive at a verdict. This Mr. Robinette describes as "dragooning" the jury. He further points out that the judge did not act upon the recommendation to mercy, but reported against a commutation.

A further ground upon which he will move for the stated case is that the jury were improperly charged with regard to the four knives found in the prisoner's trunk, but none of which were used in the stabbing.

Should Justice Riddell refuse the application for a stated case, as he did in the Blythe case, Mr. Robinette will do as he did then, and set down notice of motion under the magic section of the code, and proceed to serve the Attorney-General with notice of such settling down. He will then apply to a judge of the high court for an order like that granted by Justice Teetzel in the Blythe case, forbidding the execution until the motion is heard by the Court of Appeal which cannot be until September. Under the criminal code the judge cannot do other than comply.

Strenuous efforts are being made to save the life of this Italian who slew his fellow-countryman with the knife. The following cable was sent direct to King George yesterday, on the strength of His Majesty's proclamation of certain pardons on his accession to the throne, when it became known that the Minister at Ottawa would not interfere:

"His Majesty, King George:

"Am sentenced to hang June 30, Toronto, for killing man in quarrel. I pray you humbly to give me my life.
"Pasquale Ventricini."

There are three other men in similar position to Ventricini, and the lives of all of these men may be prolonged at least till September 15 if their counsels choose to follow the procedure pointed out to Mr. Robinette. These three men are:

Archibald McLachlan, for killing wife and babes by poison and fire, sentenced to die at Whitby, July 13.

Walter Ross, sentenced to hang at North Bay June 21 for the murder by shooting in the bush of Parkinson, a companion.

The first of these men was defended by W. A. Henderson of Mr. Robinette's firm, and no move has thus far been made to save his life.

All Must Hang.

Ottawa, June 11.—The Government has declined to interfere in the executions for murder of Walter Ross at North Bay (June 21); Robt. Henderson, Peterboro (June 23); and Pasquale Ventricini, Toronto (June 30).

Right Kind of a Mayor.

Mayor Knechtel, president of the Knechtel Furniture Co., has donated a $3,000 corner lot on which the hall will be built. A $10,000 dollar public library will also be built.

George Taylor's Generosity.

Kingston, June 11.—George Taylor, M.P., Gananoque, has displayed his public spirit this week in a most generous offer of a fountain for Bellevue Park in that town, a donation of $200 to help beautify the grounds and $50 a year for three years to help defray expenses of a caretaker.

NEW VICEROY FOR INDIA

Sir Charles Hardinge Will Succeed Lord Minto.

London, June 11.—The appointment of Sir Charles Hardinge, permanent Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, as Viceroy of India, in succession to the Earl of Minto, was officially announced yesterday.

The Right Hon. Sir Charles Hardinge is a son of the second Viscount Hardinge, and a brother of the present peer. His grandfather, the first viscount, was a distinguished British general, who saw much service in the Peninsular War, and later in India, where he succeeded Lord Ellenborough as viceroy in 1844. Sir Charles was born in 1858, was educated at Harrow and Trinity College, Cambridge, and entered the diplomatic service in 1880. After serving in subordinate capacities he was appointed secretary to the legation at Teheran, Persia, in 1896, and two years later occupied a similar position at St. Petersburg. In 1903 he was made Assistant Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, becoming in the following year ambassador at St. Petersburg, and returning to Britain in 1906 as Permanent Under Secretary.

Sir Charles has had a distinguished career, and has had much and varied service at Constantinople, Berlin, Washington, Sofia, Bucharest, Paris and elsewhere, and has qualified in the Turkish, Persian and Russian languages. He has been the recipient of many imperial honors, is a member of the Privy Council, and is a Knight Grand Cross of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, and of the Victorian Order. He will now probably be raised to the peerage. Sir Charles married in 1890 the Hon. Winifred Stuart, bed chamber woman to Queen Alexandra, a daughter of the first Baron Arlington, and has two sons and one daughter.

Earl Minto was appointed viceroy in 1905, after having been for seven years Governor-General of Canada. Within the past few months, an attempt to assassinate him by a bomb thrower was frustrated only by an escort's prompt conduct.

ITALY, NETHERLAND AND BELGIUM ARE TO BENEFIT

By Agreements Announced Yesterday, Canada Will Extend Intermediate Tariff to Three European Countries.

Ottawa, June 11—Details of the new trade agreements concluded between Canada, Belgium, Italy and the Netherlands, which have been the subject of lengthy negotiations, were announced yesterday.

Canada extends to Belgium and the Netherlands the provisions of its intermediate tariff as respects articles mentioned in the French treaty. As regards a limited number specified in schedule C to that treaty, the concessions granted are not as great by reason of the fact that the rates given to France are below those of the intermediate tariff by special Parliamentary enactment. The customs act does not authorize the Governor-in-council by itself to make greater trade concessions than are embodied in the intermediate tariff. As regards Italy the arrangements take the form of a specific agreement, by the terms of which a certain list of Canadian exports are accorded the Italian conventional rate in exchange for our intermediate tariff on an equal number of articles.

Mr. Fielding explains that these countries are low tariff countries anyway and that we are granting them our intermediate tariff on practically the same items as France enjoys, largely because these countries have always treated Canada well and because when Germany became huffed over the British preference and imposed a retaliation tariff on Canadian goods, Belgium and the Netherlands, who had just as much cause for complaint, did not retaliate.

Following are the chief items of Canadian export, which are now allowed into Italy under the Italian "conventional tariff," instead of the Italian "general tariff." The reduction is said to be quite considerable: Timber and lumber, furniture, wood pulp, paper of various kinds, including wall paper; boots and shoes, tools and implements of iron or steel, including agricultural implements; sewing machines.

The Italian goods coming into Canada under our intermediate rates will be: Macaroni and vermicelli, canned vegetables, lime juice and other fruit syrups, certain varieties of wine (the same as were listed in the recent French convention), castile soap, women's and children's dress goods of various kinds, when imported in the "grey" or unfinished state for the purpose of being dyed or finished in Canada; velvets and velveteens, ribbons and fine kid gloves.

DOMINION STEEL WILL ENTER THE WIRE BUSINESS

President Plummer at a Board of Trade Banquet in Halifax Announces That Company Has Been Formed to Compete With Wire Manufacturers.

Halifax, N.S., June 11.—J. H. Plummer, president of the Dominion Steel & Coal Co., and General Manager Butler were entertained at luncheon by the Board of Trade yesterday afternoon. The gathering included representatives of the financial, industrial and commercial life of the city.

Mr. Plummer announced that a company had been organized, under the auspices of the corporation, to erect plants for the manufacture of wire, wire nails and other finished wire products. The Steel company's policy, hitherto, in this regard has been to confine its business to the manufacture of wire rods for the supply of wire and nail mills throughout Canada, and this policy would be maintained if the business had remained, as at present, in the hands of a number of independent concerns.

The proposed merger of the larger wire and nail mills had forced the corporation to move in the proposed direction for the protection of its own interest, and of the interests of its customers, who do not go into the merger. It will also serve the public interest by making a monopoly impossible.

The location of the new mills has not been definitely settled. A plant located [illegible] the steel works at Sydney would have distinct advantages in the way of cheaper production, but some disadvantages in regard to distribution, and it may be found best to build near the points where the products go into consumption.

The president said that the steel corporation now employes about 12,000 men, and that these men earn on the average better wages than do any other class of men in the Dominion.

The output in value of the product of the works was $116,000,000 annually, and half of this went back into the pockets of the men in wages.

When he left Toronto recently, the Steel and Coal companies were, in effect, one, for a majority of the shares of the old companies had been exchanged for stock in the new, giving the Canadian Steel Corporation a predominant voice.

Speaking of the prospects of the company, he said that, while much had been done, a great deal remained to be accomplished and would be achieved. New furnaces were being built, and yet the demand for steel from the Dominion keeps ahead of their capacity. A new finishing mill was also being built.

BROKER BIGGEST LOSER

Ottawa, June 11.—"I may say that I have made fifteen times as much for Ottawa as has been lost, due to this failure," said Broker W. E. Bagnall yesterday afternoon on his return from New York City, where he has been straightening out matters in connection with the failure.

"I am the one that will suffer the worst," said Mr. Bagnall. "I have lost my all; but I intend to do all I can to convert everything into cash, so that the assets will be as great as possible."

An official, asked yesterday if any of the men who lost money were prosecuting, replied: "No, not a single one." It was explained that Mr. Bagnall had discouraged men with but little money buying stocks on margin.

BAD ROADS IN RAINY RIVER

Winnipeg, Man., June 11.—The Fort Frances, Ont., grand jury made some remarkable recommendations in their presentments here, among which was the following:

"We feel the urgent necessity of the Ontario Government devising means to prevent the exodus of valuable citizens from this district. The fact that many of our best farmers are leaving for other parts, because they have not good roads and drainage here as will provide them with means of going to and from their homes is greatly to be regretted."

Another recommendation is for revision by the Provincial Secretary of the list of justices of the peace for the district, as recent court proceedings show that the present list contains men who are not qualified for the position.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

THREE TRAINMEN KILLED

Winnipeg, June 11.—Three C.P.R. trainmen, Engineers Frank Wheatley, Fireman E. Clark, and Brakeman J. McMillan, all of Schreiber, Ont., were drowned in Lake Superior at four o'clock yesterday morning, when their freight train struck a boulder on the track at Port Coldwell, Ont., 155 miles east of Port Arthur, causing the train to leave the track and plunge into the lake, carrying with it many feet of permanent way, and the telegraph lines, thus interrupting direct communication.

The track at the point mentioned runs along the famous north shore, within a few feet of Lake Superior, the rock slipping down abruptly into the water.

The lost engine is No. 964. It was running with an eastbound freight at 25 miles an hour when it struck the boulder. Eye-witnesses say it rolled over sixty feet and then dropped out of sight into deep water. McMillan jumped [illegible] killed on the rock. Wheatley and Clark went down in the engine cab and were drowned.

BOTHA STIRS UP TROUBLE

Johannesburg, June 11.—Premier Botha's determination to oppose Sir James Fitzpatrick for election in Pretoria is the sole topic of conversation. Moderate feeling has undergone a strong revulsion. The English papers which were decidedly pro-Botha a fortnight since, denounce the contest as a wanton provocation of racial animosity.

Feeling in Natal is such that a movement to form a separate party will follow the lead of Dr. Jameson.

Sir James Percy Fitzpatrick was member of the Transvaal Legislature for South Central Pretoria. He is a prominent man among the British in the Transvaal, was Home Secretary of the reform committee at the outbreak of the war, and was imprisoned therefor.

NEW FISHERY REGULATION

Toronto, June 11.—Under a recent order-in-council [illegible] of game fish will be relieved of the payment of $5 for a license to catch minnows for bait in a net.

The privilege of catching minnows for bait in a net had been abused, as a great many were making a business of the practice, which in turn imposed a hardship upon legitimate sportsmen. Under the new regulation those who use small minnow traps to secure bait for their own use will only be required to pay $1 for a license.

LATEST MOVE OF THE JAPS

New Orleans, La., June 11.—Much significance is attached to the proposed visit of the Japanese battleship fleet in Mexico, according to despatches received here from Central America. The Latin-American press is inclined to regard the visit, which is to be made on the occasion of Mexico's centennial celebration of her independence as a bold diplomatic stroke by Japan, and prints rumors of special envoys being sent at the same time to carry on negotiations with Central American republics.

It is also claimed that Japan will take advantage of this visit to bring about a treaty relative to a canal in Nicaragua, for which England will furnish the money.

WOMAN AT 80 WALKS 17 MILES

Chatham, Ont., June 11.—Mrs. Sarah Neville of Dresden, aged 80 years, walked from Dresden to Chatham yesterday morning, a distance of 17 miles, to renew a writ in the County Court clerk's office. Mrs. Neville has been doing this once a year for three years. She does not care to ride on trains, because she objects to tobacco smoke in the depots and the cars.

THE GARMENT WORKERS STRIKE

Boston, June 11.—A general strike of from 20,000 to 30,000 cloak makers in New York City was authorized yesterday afternoon by the Lady Garment Workers' International Union, which is in session in this city.

Between 60,000 and 70,000 workers, it was declared, will be affected in the various branches of the industry, including employes in establishments devoted to the making of cloaks, skirts, reefers and dresses.

The international convention has been discussing conditions in New York shops for several days. The New York delegates claim that the cloak makers must have better wages and improved conditions to enable them to live decently.

Extension of the strike, if called, to other cities, if deemed desirable, was also authorized.

ROOSEVELT ON HIS WAY HOME

Southampton, June 11.—Theodore Roosevelt and party sailed yesterday for New York.

There is considerable interest in Mr. Roosevelt's visit to the Foreign Secretary, Sir Edward Grey, Thursday. It was quite private and it is known only that the two reached the hotel Thursday night spattered with mud and soaked to the skin. To a friend Mr. Roosevelt before sailing said:

"My day in New Forest with Sir Edward Grey was the crowning experience of the whole three months."

A NEW NEWS AGREEMENT

Ottawa, June 11.—The conference which has been in progress for the past few days between the representatives of the newspapers and the telegraph companies in an endeavor to reach a basis of compromise upon the disputed question of press rates, came to a close yesterday afternoon.

An agreement has been reached for a full interchange of news from one end of the Dominion to the other, the western papers to take ten thousand words a day and to send an average of a thousand to the east.

WANT TO BUILD AT MONTREAL

Ottawa, June 11.—Vickers Sons & Maxim of England have filed plans with the Public Works Department for a shipbuilding and ship repair plant to be located at Montreal to cost $2,500,000. The plans comprise a floating drydock, three berths for the repairing and building of steel vessels as well as extensive machine shops, the whole plant to cover an area of fifty acres.

The plant will be located between Longue Pointe and Molson's Creek.

THE THEATRE

The Anglican Synod in session at Ottawa has approved of "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," with Forbes Robertson as the star. The Synod goes further on record by saying that the only way to purify the stage is to support clean plays. This is a very sensible view. Many clergymen who have never seen a good play in their life condemn the theatre in wild language. Tights and tinsel do not represent the stage any more than a rascal fake evangelist represents the pulpit. There are plays that linger long in the mind of the witness. In Faust, for instance, the story is told of a man who sold himself to the devil to possess Marguerite. His miserable end is pregnant with a lesson as striking and clear as any sermon, no matter how dramatic that sermon may be. The list of plays with moral tone and warning note could be made an imposing one. Why pass universal condemmation upon books because Boccaccio wrote? Why condemn all plays because there are rank ones among the good? Should not the brain of men who gave us men in pen and ink be furthered by seeing these men portrayed in living flesh? We have read of Richard III., but we do not know this man better because of the theatre which for the time transports us to the day when he sat on the throne in his kingdom. Just a line in cold type, but a living reality when we have heard the genius repeat it on the stage.

OXYGEN

Two teams, the C.G.E and Lakefield football clubs played an association match in Peterborough on Friday night and the C.G.E won. It was a good game, clean and fast. These C.G.E men must relish a bit of fresh air, and the touch of the sod to the shoe. It will make better fellows of them, make them sleep sounder rise more refreshed, and give them a better grip on their work. We don't take enough fresh air. In the winter we put on double windows and double doors lest we let in a breath of God's good oxygen. We have hot housed ourselves, forgetting that we may hothouse a tomato but not a man. In the summer we become afraid of a draft and most of us become flabby before our time and then shrivel. No one should grow old; we should ripen, growing sweeter in disposition, and kinder through experience.

There was a parson at the game last night. Rev. W. C. Riddiford was there, a rooter.

Mr. Riddiford believes in sports and pastimes, and his congregation appreciate the fact that he is a man just like themselves.

In these fine days keep on the sunkissed side of the streets. Never mind the clouds. 'Twill be a fine day soon, no matter whether in business or love.

THE COST OF THINGS

Harry McVeety died in Winnipeg on Thursday. He went riding in an automobile and was killed. Everything possessed costs. And the man who buys an automobile usually finds this out, and so is the world generally for they are costing many a life, broken head and limb. A big house costs. The man in the little home sometimes casts looks of envy at the mansion, but the bigger home always means bigger responsibility and more expense, more entertaining and less sleep, more artificial airs and less family life. A big business costs and its a price that the average man never dreams of. The proprietor gives it many an anxious hour. He goes home and care goes with him. He retires and care sits on the bed post and haunts him in his dreams. Care is ready first thing in the morning to meet him at the breakfast table and go to his place of business with him, and hangs around all day. The boss wears good clothes and his hands and face are always clean, but the fellow who works for him sometimes, forgetting all this, grows envious, forgetting the care, forgetting that when the whistle blows his work is done.

Every time there is an auto wreck thats the cost of ownership. when a a train jumps the track, there is the cost of speed, and whenever there is the big business there is the cost of ownership, the care and the responsibility.

DIVORCE

The Montreal Star gives half a column editorial comment on divorce without saying anything more than it is easy to get divorce in the United States.

The trouble is, that in this country they marry too young, and added to this is the recorded fact that anywhere from two hours to two months will do to get acquainted, pop the question and have the wedding. The reason why marriage is so often legalized gratification of desire, is because of incompatability of temperament. These long words spell the cause of sorrow in many a home. They wed. They are happy for the glad hour of the honeymoon. But she discovers that she no longer attracts him or he has found that she repels his ardent advances. They fight. No blows, of course, just that blow—the lash of the tongue. She cries bitterly. He goes out slamming the door. Why? Just that word incompatability. Will she tell her story? No. Will he tell his friends? Hardly. So they live, victims of a horrible mistake. She thought she adored him, and he was sure he loved her.

One day this closest friend finds her in tears, and she confesses. He is morose and dull at the club on the street, in the store office or factory and one day he too perhaps lifts his cloud to the bosom friend. Fools? Yes they were fools; they married in haste and they repent at leisure. And what recourse? Ah! the courts are the magicians to bring relief, and so with the yoke to the learned and wise men on bench and bar they go, and are separated or divorced.

Some times the burden is so heavy, so galling and wearisome that the note is left, the poison taken, the shot fired or the waters end it all. Pride could not stand the exposure of the court.

HANGED BY THE NECK

The Government says that Robert Henderson must die for killing Margaret McPherson. So the law will slay the child. Just seventeen, this unfortunate youth would have been better had he died a babe.

They took a life for a life in the days of Moses, but the Almighty is on record as leaving Cain alive. In building homes, we no longer live in tents, as the ancients. In battle we no longer use the ram. In all things we have progressed, exploring earth, air and sea. But we still hang, and on the 23rd of this month an irresponsible degenerate youth will be dispatched, not by the garrote, as in Spain, by guillotine, or gun, as in war, but by the end of a rope, and this in a city of churches, in this civilized land, in the year of our Lord, nineteen hundred and ten.

Looking Ahead.

Josephine, aged ten, has a decided lisp. She is also very fond of attending the matinee. The other day she was giving a spirited story of the play to Marion, who was aged nine.

"My mamma says it isn't good for little girls to go to the theatre," said Marion, with an air of self righteousness. "I'm not ever going till I'm eighteen."

"Hump!" retorted Josephine without any hesitation. "Th'pose you die when you're theventeen, then you'll be thtung!"

Basket-Making Venture.

The initial stage of what may prove to be a new and important Natal industry has been reached in Maritzaburg where a company has been floated to promote basket-making. Some 12,000 osier cuttings have been planted on a property near Edendale, and it is intended to import skilled artisans from England to teach the natives the art of basket-making according to modern methods.

A Cynical Statesman.

The saying that "all men have their price" is ascribed to Sir Robert Walpole. While speaking of a faction in parliament which bitterly opposed some of his measures he said, "You see with what zeal and vehemence these gentlemen oppose me, and yet I know the price of every man in this house except three."

Of some who called themselves patriots he said: "Patriots! I could raise fifty of them within four and twenty hours. I have raised many in one night. 'Tis but to refuse an unreasonable demand and up springs a patriot."

PERSIAN WEAVERS.

The Way the Carpets Are Made by the Hand Workers.

In describing Persian industries Mrs. Hume Griffith, in "Behind the Veil In Persia and Turkish Arabia," tells how the beautiful carpets of that country are made, of course without machinery of any kind. The warp is stretched on a loom, which is merely a frame. The woof consists of short threads woven and knotted by hand without the aid of a shuttle. When a row is finished it is pressed tightly to the rest of the web by means of a comb inserted into the warp.

"The weaver does not see the pattern as he works, for he sits with the reverse side of the web toward him. The looms are generally kept in an underground vaulted room, often with water running through the center. At each loom three or four workers sit, according to the size of the carpet. Sometimes the workers consist of one man and two children, and occasionally the owner uses boys and girls only for the weaving.

"I sat on the high stool by the side of a tiny girl, whose fingers were working away so fast I could hardly follow her movements. The overseer was walking up and down the room calling out instructions to the workers. To me it sounded a horrible, incoherent jumble, but the children seemed to understand it perfectly.

"The overseer held in his hand a paper, from which he was apparently reading out instructions. It was something like this:

"'To No. 1, three blue threads, one white, two green; No. 2, four yellow, one white,' and so on, each child repeating after the 'master' the instructions given. As it was all said in a high pitched monotone the result was confusing and deafening. But there the little weavers sit, day in, day out, week after week, in this dark, gloomy cellar, kept hard at it by the overseer."

WONDERS OF A WATCH.

Its Marvelous Mechanism and the Power That Moves It.

We hear much from time to time of the wonders of this or that complicated and intricate machine, but there are few pieces of machinery more marvelous than that of the common watch.

A watch, it may be stated as a general proposition, is the smallest, most delicate instrument of the same number of parts that has ever been devised. About 175 different pieces of material enter into its construction, and upward of 2,400 separate operations are comprised in its manufacture.

Certain of the facts connected with its performance are well nigh incredible when considered as a whole. A blacksmith strikes several hundred blows on his anvil in a day and, as a matter of course, is glad when Sunday comes, but the roller jewel of a watch makes every day—and day after day—432,000 impacts against the fork, or 157,680,000 blows during the course of a year, without stop or rest—some 3,153,600,000 blows during the space of twenty years, the period for which a watch is usually guaranteed to keep good time.

But the wonder of it does not cease here. It has been calculated that the power that moves the watch is equivalent to only four times the force used in a flea's jump. The watch power is therefore what might be termed the equivalent of a four flea-power. One horsepower would suffice to operate 270,000,000 watches.

Furthermore, the balance wheel of a watch is moved by this four flea-power 1 43-100 inches with each vibration, or 3,558¾ miles continuously in one year.

Not much oil is required to lubricate the little machine on its 3,500 mile run. It takes only one-tenth of a drop to oil the entire machinery for a year's service.—Harper's Weekly.

Duck by Duck.

An old farmer had brought twenty ducks to the market to sell and, after the usual amount of haggling inseparable from a bargain of that description, managed to dispose of the lot to a dealer.

"That's 30 shillings I have to give you," said the dealer as he proceeded to count it out.

But the old chap's strong point was not arithmetic, and he was not satisfied with this mode of payment.

"Noa, noa!" he exclaimed. "Ye bought them at wan an' six apiece, an' ye'll jist pay for them duck by duck."

And "duck by duck" it had to be.—London Scraps.

How It Is Done.

Returning from school the other afternoon, a little girl proudly informed her mother that she had learned to "punchtate."

"Well, dear," said her mother, "and how is it done?"

"You see, mother," explained the child, "when you write 'Hark!' you put a hatpin after it, and when you ask a question you put a buttonhook!"

In Doubt.

Visitor—So your boy is in college, is he, Mr. Corntossle? Farmer—I can't say exactly. He's in their ball nine, an' in their rowin' crew, an' in their jimnayzeeum, an' in their domytory, but whether he's ever in their college is more'n I kin find out by his letters.—Harper's Bazar.

SAVED FROM THE KNIFE

Appendicitis Cured By "Fruit-a-tives"

NEWBURGH ONT., Feb. 12th. 1910.

"Just about a year ago, our daughter Ella (fourteen years), was taken with terrible pains in the right side. The pain was so severe that we had to carry her to bed. We at once put her under the care of a first-class doctor, who pronounced it a case of Appendicitis and advised an operation.

We took her to a hospital in Kingston where she was again examined by an eminent specialist. He said she had Appendicitis and must be operated on at once if we wanted to save her life. As we had taken her to Kingston to have this done, we were ready, but our daughter was afraid and cried and begged so pitifully, that we postponed it for that day. Luckily for us and for her an uncle came in with some 'Fruit-a-tives' and insisted on Ella taking them. Good results were apparent, almost from the first dose, and the continuous treatment cured her.

'Fruit-a-tives' saved our daughter from the surgeon's knife and to-day she is enjoying the best of health."

J. W. FOX, (Father).
LILLIAN FOX, (Mother).

Words cannot express the gratitude of Mr. and Mrs. Fox. And Miss Ella will always remember "Fruit-a-tives"—the discovery of an eminent physician, and the only medicine in the world made of fruit. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. THE STUDY OF LIZA ANN

A Character That Was Not Read Aright by the Author.

By AGNES G. BROGAN.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

Lawrence Stanton had gained his reputation as a great author through a faithful portrayal of types. He determined now to combine business with pleasure and take a trip to some unfrequented mountainous country where he might come in contact with the people and make a study of them in order to weave a story about them. He especially desired to find one character, an ignorant and attractive young girl; but, though many could easily answer the first requirement, the latter was always missing until he met—her.

This was the day that he had followed the lonely trail up and up, through sunshine and shadow, until he came upon her suddenly where she was sitting upon a fallen log. She arose, startled at Stanton's appearance.

"Don't go," he said quickly. "I am only resting for a few moments."

She hesitated, pulling at her bonnet strings undecidedly as he lit his pipe. Then curiosity overcame prudence.

"Whar you from?" she asked.

He waved a hand indefinitely toward the east. "My home is over there," he said. "And yours?" The girl flashed a smile at him and imitated the vague movement of his arm.

"Up thar," she answered.

Stanton laughed. "Got a mother and father?" he asked. She nodded vigorously.

"And what is your name, O maid of the mountains?"

She resumed her seat upon the fallen log. "Liza Ann," she answered, and then, "What you here for?"

"I am here," said Stanton gravely, "to obtain information which may be valuable to me in the production of a book."

Liza Ann looked puzzled.

"Did you ever read a book, my child?"

She shook her head.

"Have you ever been away from home, Liza Ann, farther away than the village?"

"Never been nowhar," said the girl contentedly. Then she looked up at

"YOU WILL MARRY THE BEAUTIFUL LADY."

him. "Tell me about that place whar you come from."

And Stanton told her.

Slowly the sun sank down behind the tall trees. Liza Ann slipped to the ground. "I'm goin'," she said.

"You will come here tomorrow afternoon, will you not?" Stanton begged. He intended to have his notebook with him then. "I will bring a book to show you, with pictures of the places we have been talking about."

Liza Ann smiled delightedly. "Yaas, I'll come," she drawled, and Stanton wondered how she could run so lightly and gracefully up the mountain path in the heavy shoes that were so many sizes too large.

He had just settled himself comfortably at the same picturesque spot upon the following day when Liza Ann appeared. Her shyness seemed to have vanished, for she responded merrily to his sallies, then silently turned the pages of the book which he had brought, while Stanton wrote rapidly, pausing to look up at her from time to time.

She came again and again at the man's bidding to sit beside him as he worked. Stanton studied her moods and emotions as a naturalist might analyze some wonderful butterfly, while the book progressed rapidly. He brought his camera, too, and took many successful pictures of the obedient little subject. The one which pleased him most was that of Liza Ann just as he had first seen her, the sunshine sifting down through the leafy trees to rest upon her upturned face. This, he decided, would make a charming frontispiece for the new book. She was very proud of the copy of the photograph which he gave her.

So the golden days passed, and later, when the early moon came peeping over the mountain peak, they would walk together up and up the fragrant pathway. On one of these evenings he told her such parts of the story as he thought she might understand—of the winsome girl who lived in a log cabin home and dressed in calico.

"That's me!" cried Liza Ann and clapped her hands gleefully.

Then he told her of the beautiful lady who wore satins and jewels. She looked up at him with startled, widening eyes.

"Who's that?" she demanded.

"That, my child," Stanton answered, with an odd smile, "is only a woman of the world."

"I don't like her," the girl burst out passionately; "I don't like her." And in a moment she had left him.

The man laughed amusedly. He knew that she would come back to him again, and she did. He found her waiting at the old trysting place on the night that he was going away. Her face was very pale in the moonlight.

"What a doleful Liza Ann!" he teased. She looked at him dumbly.

"I will come back, little one," the man comforted. "You must not forget me, and one day you shall lead me up the lonely trail again, while I tell you how much I have missed you since we said goodby."

The girl raised her dark and solemn eyes to his. "You will never come back," she said quietly.

Stanton laughed. "Well," he answered evasively, "there will be the book to finish first, and then"—

"Then," said Liza Ann in that same dull monotone, "you will marry the beautiful lady."

Stanton did not reply to this. "Goodby, my little mountain maid," he said. "I will send the book to you, and remember that the man who wrote it will be thinking of you always."

"I don't want your book!" she burst out fiercely.

He tried to put his arm about her, but she darted from him and went running fleetly up the narrow path. Far above a mossy bank lay bathed in moonlight. Stanton, watching, saw the girl pause a moment here and then throw herself face downward upon the ground. The man lit a cigar leisurely, then picked up his valise. Still the little figure lay quite motionless. "Strange creatures these," he said musingly and continued his journey downward.

Much work had accumulated during Stanton's absence, and he was very busy for some time after reaching home. Then he returned to the book once more, walking to and fro as was his custom while thinking out the details of a story. Often he would pause before the picture of Liza Ann which had been placed upon the mantelshelf. He seemed to gain inspiration from the witchery of her laughing face. Another picture stood near in a golden frame—that of a woman serene and beautiful who was wearing a wonderful gown. The author ended his walk abruptly this evening and seated himself to read the paper; then, with a sharp exclamation, he looked more closely at the printed page. The picture from the mantelshelf in some unaccountable way had been transferred to the paper before him. Liza Ann, seated upon a fallen log, the old sunbonnet framing her tangled curls, smiled happily out upon the world with childish wonder in her eyes. Beneath the picture Stanton read, "Miss Judith Jerrold, who is appearing at the Star theater this week in 'The Transformation of Liza Ann.'"

Feverishly the man turned to the theatrical notes: "Miss Judith Jerrold comes to the Star theater this week in a new play which has been written expressly for her by Henry Clayton. Miss Jerrold has been spending the summer months in a remote part of the mountains, resting after an exhausting winter season and studying the speech and mannerisms of the simple folk who will live upon the stage in Mr. Clayton's production of 'The Transformation of Liza Ann.' There are many emotional actresses. There is but one Judith Jerrold, and she will move us to laughter and tears with the mishaps of Liza Ann."

Stanton jumped to his feet. It was late, but he must see her tonight, must know for a very certainty the truth. Half bewildered, he entered the theater and sat through the performance as one in a dream. The great actress was holding an impromptu reception upon the stage after the play, so he pressed forward through the crowd which surrounded her. She advanced to meet him and graciously extended her hand, but a mocking light shone in her dark eyes.

"So," she said laughingly, "I am discovered. My only apology is that, having been in seclusion so long, the desire to act a part became irresistible. I had read many of your delightful character studies and longed to see if I could impersonate the unsophisticated mountain girl so truly as to deceive even you, a student of types. The result has been satisfactory to myself, but disappointing, I fear, to the author, as you will find that many of the original and ingenuous sayings which so amused you at the time were merely quoted from the play which you have seen tonight."

Stanton's face grew very stern. "A greater part of the book will have to be rewritten," he said. "The incident has been an unfortunate one for me."

The actress was wearing the trailing lace robe in which she appears, you will remember, during the last act when the half wild little creature is transformed suddenly into a great heiress, but she looked up at the man now with the soft, wide eyed reproach of the innocent mountain girl. Again he seemed to see her lying prone in the moonlight.

"Yes," she said slowly, "it may have been unfortunate for your book, Mr. Stanton, that this ignorant, lovable child never existed, but it was rather fortunate, don't you think, for poor little Liza Ann?"

With a bright nod she dismissed him and turned to greet a new admirer. Stanton turned to follow her, hesitated a moment, then silently made his way out into the night.

A PAIR OF BOOTS.

They Figured In an Amusing Case of Mistaken Identity.

It may be doubted if there ever occurred a more amusing instance of mistaken identity than that afforded by Theodore Hook, the English humorist of his time, and it all came about through a pair of boots. Hook was traveling along the south coast of England and arrived in the course of his journey at Dover.

Alighting at the Ship hotel he changed his boots, ordered a slight dinner and went out for a stroll through the town. Returning at the appointed time, he was surprised to find the whole establishment in confusion. A crowd had collected outside the door. The master of the house was standing at the foot of the stairs with two candles in his hands, and on Theodore's entrance he walked backward before him and conducted him into the principal saloon, where all the waiters were standing and a magnificent repast had been provided. The wit was much amused at the dignity to which he had been promoted, but, being an easy going fellow, made no scruples and, sitting down, did full justice to what was set before him. Next day he signified his intention of departing and ordered a coach, when, to his astonishment, a carriage and four drove up to convey him to his destination. He inquired with some apprehension what he was to pay for all this grandeur and was no less astonished than gratified on receiving the answer, "Nothing whatever, your royal highness." He was never more thoroughly mystified, but the next night, on taking off his boots, which he had bought ready made just before he went to Dover, he found "H. S. H. the Prince of Orange" written inside them. They had been originally made for the prince, who was then in England suing for the hand of Princess Charlotte, and notice had been given that all his expenses while in the country should be set down to the charge of the government.—Minneapolis News.

RUSSIAN AUDACITY.

The Coup That Made Persia a Financial Vassal of the Bear.

In 1892 the Imperial Bank of Persia, a British institution, lent the Persian government $2,500,000 on the security of the customs receipts of the gulf ports. In 1895 Persia, finding herself again hard up, desired to borrow $6,000,000 more from the same source and on the same ample security. But before the British bankers would grant the additional loan they must needs quibble and procrastinate and insist on still further conditions. Finally, however, $6,250,000 of Persian bonds were underwritten in London. Russia, hearing of the affair at the eleventh hour and fifty-ninth minute, promptly offered Persia a much larger loan on much better terms, and she did no haggling either. Persia, finding herself in the embarrassing position of having two parties suing for her financial hand at the same time and not daring to offend either of them, thought to escape from the predicament by not borrowing at all.

But so persistently and skillfully did Russia urge her suit that in 1900 Persia timidly yielded to the ardent wooing and acknowledged her submission by accepting from Russia a loan of $11,875,000 for seventy-five years, at the same time agreeing that all previous loans should be paid off at once and no more incurred until this one was discharged without the permission of the Russian Banque Desprets de Perse. Within less than a month, therefore, 5,000,000 rubles ($2,500,000) were remitted to London to pay off the British loan of 1892, thereby freeing Persia from any British financial control. There has been no more audacious and successful stroke of diplomacy in modern times, for by it Persia became a financial vassal of the bear.—Everybody's Magazine.

Fate of the Great Auk.

The great auk, a northern diving bird, used to exist in the arctic regions also. Now, this splendid bird was seriously handicapped by the fact that it laid only one egg in a season and so could not afford to be slaughtered at all. But it was hunted and shot without discrimination. A few surviving hundreds took refuge on a desolate rock far out to sea, but one fatal day a vessel contrived to land on this rock, and the crew shot nearly the entire rookery. Finally nature herself rose up. There was a cataclysm, the rock sank into the sea, and that was the last of the great auk.

The Gobelin Factory.

The gobelin factory was founded in 1515 by Francis I., who scoured Europe for the artists and the makers of beautiful things who could bring luster to the capital of France. Under his auspices came Leonardo da Vinci, and he it was who laid the foundations for the collections of statuary and paintings that have made Paris famous. The gobelin tapestry factory was among the least of his undertakings.

Naming the Baby.

"Have you named the baby?" asked the admiring neighbor.

"Not yet," said the proud young mother. "We're going to christen him Sunday."

"Dear me! What an odd name! I'd almost as soon call him after Robinson Crusoe's man Friday and be done with it."—Chicago Tribune.

Cordially Invited.

"Are you Hungary?"

"Yes, Siam."

"Well, come along; I'll Fiji."—Lippincott's.

General Sir William Francis Butler, author of "The Great Lone Land," is dead in London.

JEWS IN PALESTINE.

They Favor Agricultural Labor and Have Splendid Schools.

According to David Wolffsohn, a Cologne banker and one of the leaders of the Zionist movement, many Jews are being repatriated from the United States to Palestine. Herr Wolffsohn said recently that Zionism is growing with tremendous strides; that the society has a membership exceeding 250,000, and that financially the condition of the society is more than encouraging.

"We have now abandoned mere theory, and are devoting our attention to work," he said. "We have had gratifying results. For instance, we have worked hard at the schools in Jerusalem, and the modern young Palestine Jew has a splendid technical and general education.

"Our first care was to make the poorer Jews self-supporting. There were far too many content to rely upon the generosity of devoted pilgrims. Now the state of things is altogether different. Instead of applying for money to the Chaluhah, as we call the central relief fund, they ask for work.

"Palestine Jews favor agricultural labor. It is really wonderful to see how they will toil upon their little plot of land and how fruitful they will make the most barren spots.

"Palestine is already becoming a favorite colony for Jews. There are any number of London Jews among the colonists and even Jews from prosperous New York also abandon the commerce of the west for Jerusalem.

"Religious Jews endeavor in their old age to make a pilgrimage to Palestine, so that they may be buried in the Holy Land. The modern Jews, however, do not go to Palestine to die, but to live.

"Our adherents may be divided into two classes, the professional Jew and the very poor man. It is to the young man and woman at the university that we appeal. At Oxford, Cambridge and London Universities we have Zionist societies and their members are enthusiastic.

"We have now got $1,500,000 together and every day convinces me that the Jew is as passionately enthusiastic about Palestine as his home as ever."

WHY BACK ACHE

The Kidneys Seldom to Blame—The Trouble Due to Blood Impurities.

There is more nonsense talked about backache than any other disease. Some people have been frightened into the belief that every backache means deadly kidney trouble. That is utter rubbish. As a matter of scientific fact not one backache in twenty has anything to do with the kidneys. Most backaches come from sheer weakness and kidney drugs can't possibly cure that. You need something to brace you up and give you new strength, and that is exactly what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do. Other backaches are really muscular rheumatism, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured the worst cases of rheumatism by driving the poisonous acid out of the blood. Other backaches are the symptoms of ordinary ailments, such as influenza, indigestion, constipation and liver complaint. In women backaches often come from the troubles that follow so surely on any weakness or irregularity in the usual blood supply. The one way to cure these backaches is to strike at the root of the trouble with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which enrich the blood and bring strength to aching backs and weak nerves. Mr. Alex. Cockburn, Deloraine, Man., says: "About three years ago I suffered terribly from backache. I consulted a doctor and took his medicine, and wore a plaster, but did not get the least relief. Then I got a belt, but this was as useless as the other treatment, and my suffering still continued. Then one of my friends asked me why I did not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I got a box. Before they were all used there was some improvement in my condition and I got three boxes more. By the time I had taken these all the signs of the pain had gone, and as it has not since returned I feel that the cure is permanent. My only regret is that I did not hear of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills sooner, for not only would I have got rid of the pain sooner, but would also have saved some twenty-five dollars uselessly spent in other treatments."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Storekeeper Says:

"A lady came into my store lately and said:

"'I have been using a New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove all winter in my apartment. I want one now for my summer home. I think these oil stoves are wonderful. If only women knew what a comfort they are, they would all have one. I spoke about my stove to a lot of my friends, and they were astonished. They thought that there was smell and smoke from an oil stove, and that it heated a room just like any other stove. I told them of my experience, and one after another they got one, and now, not one of them would give hers up for five times its cost.'"

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

The lady who said this had thought an oil stove was all right for quickly heating milk for a baby, or boiling a kettle of water, or to make coffee quickly in the morning, but she never dreamed of using it for difficult or heavy cooking. Now—she knows.

Do you really appreciate what a New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove means to you? No more coal to carry, no more coming to the dinner table so tired out that you can't eat. Just light a Perfection Stove and immediately the heat from an intense blue flame shoots up to the bottom of pot, kettle or oven. But the room isn't heated. There is no smoke, no smell, no outside heat, no drudgery in the kitchen where one of these stoves is used.

FORMER RESIDENT OF PETERBORO IS DEAD

The following facts concerning Jas. Otis Madison, who was associated with W. J. Green, now the city tax collector, are taken from the Sartorial Art Journal:

James Otis Madison, for many years a prominent member of the editorial staff of the John J. Mitchell Co., a versatile and prolific writer on trade topics, and the man who perhaps has done more for the tailoring trade than any other writer in its history, died at Boydton, Va., where he had gone in the vain hope of benefiting his health, Saturday, April 2nd, 1910, and was buried with Masonic honors at Boydton, Sunday, April 3rd, 1910.

After learning his trade he spent six years as a cutter for several firms in New England, Mr. Madison, at the age of twenty-three, turned to literary work. In 1868 he went to Petersburg and Richmond was connected in various editorial capacities with daily newspapers. He finally bought an interest in three weekly newspapers in that locality, and conducted them as editor and part owner.

But the call of tailoring was too strong and he laid down his editorial work to return to his first mistress. Beginning at a modest salary of thirty dollars a week he rose rapidly until he was able to command and receive a salary of $2,500 a year, a princely stipend in that day. Finally he located in Peterborough, Ontario, with a partner as a merchant tailor under the firm name of Madison and Green, but after a short experience, bought out his partner, and successfully conducted the business alone for several years.

It was while in business in Peterborough that he felt called upon to continue his father's work, and his first book of systems was published in Hart ford, Conn., meeting with immediate recognition from the trade. The success of this venture was so gratifying that Mr. Madison disposed of his business in Peterborough and began a series of journeys through New England, Canada, New York, Pennsylvania and the Middle West, teaching his system, and selling his system books and rules as was the custom of that time.

In his private life he made many friends outside the trade, prominent men some of them, who honored and trusted him. He was a member of Republic Lodge, No. 690, A. F. and A.M. and was a Mason in practice as well.

Returned From Halifax

Rev. J. G. Potter, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, returned yesterday from attending the General Assembly meeting at Halifax and will occupy the pulpit at St. Andrew's tomorrow, both morning and evening.

PATIENT COLLAPSED; HAD A VERY CLOSE CALL

The many friends of Mr. Jack Pilling will be pleased to hear that he is making satisfactory recovery at the Nicholls hospital.

The patient had a very close call. During the operation he had an entire collapse and it was thought that all chances of his recovery were gone. Dr. Frederick, however, did not give up and injected a saline solution. The patient had lost several quarts of blood.

The success of the operation and the present satisfactory condition of Mr. Pilling is the sequel.

HENDERSON TOLD THAT HE MUST BE HANGED AT COUNTY GAOL BUT SHOWED NO EMOTION AT NEWS OF GOVERNMENT'S DECISION

News That Justice Department Had Decided That Sentence Pronounced by Mr. Justice Riddell Would be Carried Out Was Broken to Condemned Youth To-day by Sheriff Hall — Owing to Stringent Regulations Review Found it Impossible to Interview Prisoner.

When the Government rule book unqualifiedly says "no," that's the end of it.

A Review man tried to get an interview with Robert Henderson the 17 year old boy, who is under sentence to be hanged at the Peterborough jail June 23, for the murder of Margaret McPherson, but the rule regulating this was too stringent to be violated.

It is contained in the rules and regulations for the common jails of Ontario and reads as follows;

Rule 114.—"No person shall be allowed access to any prisoner for the purpose of interviewing him or her with a view to publishing a report of such interview."

The news of the decision of the Department of Justice to enforce the sentence pronounced by Mr. Justice Riddell on March 30th, at the sessions of the high court at the county court house, was told to Henderson to-day by Sheriff Hall. The prisoner with his usual stolidty and indifference received the information without any show of feeling. From the time he has been arrested he has maintained a uniformly calm and reserved demeanor and he is either a pastmaster at suppressing his true feelings or else doesn't appreciate his terrible position.

"He may break down from sheer terror when he is being taken to the scaffold," suggested the Review to Gaoler Nesbitt to-day.

"I don't think so," was the answer, "he doesn't strike me as a fellow who would wilt."

Mr. Nesbitt stated that Henderson slept well and ate well and enjoyed good health. He had expressed the opinion that he would not be hanged.

While no information could be had to-day concerning the visit of a specialist here to examine Henderson and report as to his condition to the Department of Justice, it has been learned from an outside source that a physician was here a short time ago and made the examination and it would seem likely that his report would have a strong influence on the department when it was arriving at the decision concerning the sentence passed on Henderson.

It was also learned that it was the intention of the department to have the matter of the doctor examing the prisoner kept so secret that the physician didn't even register at a hotel when he came here for fear the papers would not the fact and possibly try to get some information for publication.

PRISONER WAS COMMITTED FOR TRIAL ON TWO CHARGES

Preliminary Hearing of Samuel Ennis of Cavendish, Who, it is Alleged, Stole a Horse and Buggy and Assaulted the Wife of John Connors While She Was Alone in Her House.

Samuel Ennis, of Cavendish, must stand trial on two charges, one of stealing a horse, buggy and harness from John Conners, and another of a more serious nature, that of assaulting the wife of John Conners.

The preliminary hearing of each charge was held yesterday afternoon before His Worship Magistrate Edmison, and Mr. G. N. Gordon, who appeared for the prisoner, declined to elect or plead in both cases.

Ennis will be tried before His Honor Judge Huycke at the June sessions of the county court, which open next Tuesday.

STORY OF THE CRIMES.

Ennis went to the home of John Conners in Cavendish on the morning of Monday, May 30, it is alleged, and took the outfit away. He told Mrs. Conners, who was alone in the house at the time, that he would like the use of the horse and buggy to go to Gooderham, stating that he wanted to buy a horse there. He said that Conners had told him he could have the outfit.

He left and did not return till dark the same day, coming to the house alone, and kicked the door open. On being asked where the horse was, he stated that it was back on the road. Mrs. Conners gave him a lantern and he left again, presumably to bring the outfit to the home.

He did not go far, however, but returned to the house, and again kicked the door open. Then he abused the woman within. According to her statements in the witness box, he caught her by the arm, tore the sleeve of her waist, put his hand over her mouth to stop her from screaming, and attempted criminal assault.

She managed to free herself, and he went to the door and walked outside. Mrs Conners again locked the door and again Ennis broke it open, but, unseen by him, she left the house by the rear and ran to the home of Mrs. Davis, who resides half a mile distant.

John Conners, the husband of the woman, informed the authorities of the affair, and Ennis was arrested, brought to Peterborough, and remanded to jail.

FIRST CHARGE.

The first witness called was Mrs. Lily Catharine Conners, wife of the complainant. She said that she was at home on the morning of Monday, May 30. She knew Samuel Ennis by sight. He was at the house that morning about eight o'clock.

She was alone at the time and he said he would like to have the horse and rig, as he wished to go to Gooderham. When told that he couldn't have the outfit, he said that Conners told him he could have it.

TOOK THE OUTFIT.

"I told him I didn't know what to do," said witness, "and he took the horse, buggy and harness.

"It was after dark when he returned without the outfit. He kicked the door open, and I asked him where the horse and rig was. He said it was on the road, but didn't know where.

"I saw the horse the following morning. Mr. Crysdales had brought it home without the buggy or harness."

During all this time her husband was away working on a drive.

To Mr. Gordon witness said that she supposed that the buggy and harness had been broken. On the day he came to the house he said that he was going to Gooderham to buy a horse. She had first met him at a Mrs. Baldwin's during the month.

She didn't remember of saying anything about paying for the outfit. She didn't say "all right" after Ennis said her husband had said that he could have it.

BROKE OPEN THE DOOR.

After he broke open the door he secured a lantern and went to look for the horse. Returning later, he again broke open the door and remained in the house for a short time.

NO WHISKEY.

She ordered him to leave, but he answered that he would when he got ready. She did not see a bottle of whiskey in his possession.

He offered to give $5 on the rig, but she refused it.

To Mr. Wood, witness said that Ennis caught her by the arm, and she screamed. Unknown to him, she went upstairs and he went out. She then went down and locked the door and went out by the back door to Mrs. Davis'. He came back the third time and kicked it open.

DID NOT CONSENT.

John Conners, the complainant, said his wife came to him on Tuesday and told him of the affair of Monday. He was working twelve miles distant from his home.

He had not told Ennis that he could have the outfit.

To Mr. Gordon witness said that there had been no conversation about the outfit between himself and Ennis. His wife did not say that Ennis had a bottle of whiskey and offered her a quantity. She had told him about the prisoner's actions at the house. She said Ennis had offered her $2.00.

TROUBLE IN PETERBOROUGH.

He had heard of Ennis having been in trouble in Peterborough.

ALBERT CLYSDALE.

Witness said he brought the horse home Tuesday morning. On his way home from Gooderham he had found the animal tied to a stump on the roadway, between three and four miles from Conners' place. Part of the harness was on the horse.

The buggy was some distance away. This would be about eight o'clock.

ROUGH ROAD.

To Mr. Gordon, witness said the road was a narrow and rough one. There were stumps and stones on the road, and careful driving was necessary.

LENT THE HORSE.

He remembered Mrs. Conners saying that she had lent the horse to Ennis but he had used the word "lent" first.

THE DEFENCE.

Alfred Davis, sworn, said: "I heard Clysdale ask Mrs. Conners did she lend the horse or did Mr. Conners. She said: 'I lent the horse.'"

ASSAULT CHARGED.

This concluded the evidence on this charge and the assault charge was proceeded with.

Mrs. Conners was first called and testified as follows:

Prisoner came to her house after dark on Monday, May 30. She was alone at the time and the door was locked. Prisoner kicked the door open and caught her by the arm.

She spoke to Ennis regarding the horse. He put his hand up and tried to choke her. She told him to go away from the house.

He put his hand over her mouth to stop her from screaming.

"I told him to go away and mind his business," said witness, "but he said he had made up his mind to come to the house and do as he likes and have what he wanted.

"I told him to go away or I would have him arrested, and he answered they wouldn't listen to me as I was only a kid. I fought with him, and finally he went to the front door and went out. I locked the door, and when he was making an entrance into the house I left by the rear and went to Mrs. Davis' and remained there for the balance of the night.

Cross-examined by Mr. Gordon, witness said that she had not told Mr. Davis or any others of the family that Ennis had attempted a criminal assault, but she had told them that he had abused her.

DID NOT DRINK.

"Did you take a drink of whiskey that night?" witness was asked.

She replied that she did not take a sup of liquor, and she denied having sat on prisoner's knee.

Ennis did not offer her $2.00. He offered her $5.00 on returning without the horse.

FARMERS' TRIP TO GUELPH WAS VERY ENJOYABLE

East Peterborough M.P. Waited on Tables During Lunch at the College

The trip was an enjoyable one in every respect. The railway accommodation was of the best, and Mr. W. McIlroy, the official at this end, accompanied the excursionists. Three hundred and seventy-five left here Thursday morning, and on the arrival of the train at Guelph the visitors were met by some of the officials of the Agricultural College.

Lunch was served in the gymnasium, and it was during its progress that an incident took place. President Creelman found himself short-handed in waiters to serve on the tables, and called for thirty volunteers.

Two of the number who responded were the two members for East Peterborough.

All the different departments of the college were afterwards visited and the programme, as carried out, was instructive and interesting to all. Some of the excursionists left on the evening train, and others remained over until yesterday.

CENTRALS HAVE LEAD OF TWO RUNS OVER LAKE ST.

First of a Series of Two Games for the Senior School Baseball League Won by Murray Street Team by 5-3 Score.

The Centrals and Lake Street came together yesterday afternoon at the Oval, in the first of a two-game series to decide the champions of the Senior School League. Lake Street did not enter when the schedule was first drawn up, but the league executive, in order to give the team a chance to show their mettle, ordered that the two teams play two games, runs to count. The score yesterday was 5—3, and, outside of some wild throwing, the contest was well played.

The south end team was the first to count, and put two runners over in the first innings. The Centrals tallied four in the fourth, after two were out, and added another in the fifth. Lake Street also secured their other score in the fifth.

Only one batter of each team struck out.

The next game will be played Monday afternoon at 4.30 at the Oval.

The teams were—

Centrals—Pearson, ss; Goodfellow, lf; Dobson, 2b; Long, 3b; Cavanah, c; Moran, cf; Mulhern, rf; Knapman, 1b; Smith, p.

Lake Street—O'Connell, 3b; O'Brien, 1b; O'Connell, 2b; Rose, ss; Carson, p; O'Brien, lf; McDonald, c; Condon, cf; Christopher, rf.

Next Saturday they play in Bowmanville in the finals, and the return game will be pulled off here on the Saturday following. Goals will count.

The game last evening was interesting for the large number of spectators and the class of football put up was A1.

Both teams were strong and in good condition. The only goal of the struggle was kicked in the first half.

Percy Fitzgerald performed satisfactorily with the whistle.

ZBYSCO PIE FOR LION TAMER IN CHAMPIONSHIP MAT BOUT

Obtained First Fall Before the Crowd Realized Match Had Begun—Mammoth Pole Never Had a Chance With Gotch—What Eddie Smith Says of the Affair.

(Eddie Smith in Chicago American.)

Frank Gotch laughed his way through another championship wrestling match at the Coliseum last night. He had to laugh because the opponent they trotted out for him, one Zbysco of Poland, proved quite a joke—one of the best of the season. The Iowa man dumped the man from Galicia two straight falls, the first in six and one-quarter seconds, and the second in twenty-seven minutes and thirty-three seconds, official time—twenty-nine minutes and thirty-nine seconds by other watches at the ringside.

Gotch really threw the big foreigner twice in the first bout.

Zbysco never had a chance at any moment during the encounter.

If the Pole ever harbored a thought that he had a chance he must have lost the idea during the six highly amusing seconds that constituted that first fall. He was flopped so hard and in such astonishing style that for several minutes afterwards he was dazed and helpless, trying to explain to the referee and his friends in the ring that it was all a mistake.

FALLS COME FAST.

It happened so quickly that everybody in the vast crowd that watched the affair was lost in amazement, and then rose up and cheered and yelled and screamed with laughter, tossing hats and coats in the air.

When time was called Gotch advanced rapidly, stooped down suddenly, seized the massive Pole in the bend of his knees, and yanked his legs out from under him. Zbysco fell flat on his back and Gotch was upon him in a flash and almost as rapidly as the eye could follow his movements. The Pole got one of his shoulders off the mat, and made a hurried effort to bridge. But in less than a flash, seemingly, Gotch had the deadly half nelson and bar arm on his man and Referee Fleming's hand patted him on his broad back.

Evidently Gotch did not feel the decision being given him, for as Zbysco partly rolled off his back, the champion again clamped on the same lock and down went the ponderous shoulder blades of the hope of Poland in a complete heap. Fleming, seeing that Gotch had him anyway, let it go at that, and gave Frank the fall again.

FANS CHEER LOUDLY.

For a few seconds the astonishment of the crowd did not find vent in anything but a few startled cries, but as the champion sprang to his feet with a broad grin on his face, the crowd broke out into a deafening cheer that rattled through the vast building like infantry volleying.

Zbysco was dazed and in a bewildered way got to his feet protesting rather freely. He appealed to the referee and then to his seconds, but his voice could not be heard for the din that the crowd was making. It was plain, though, that he was trying to show that he wasn't ready, his motions indicating that he intended to shake hands with Gotch when the latter grabbed him by the legs.

Gotch was laughing heartily as he drew on his bathrobe and waved his hands at friends about the ringside. "What do you think of that?" he kept asking in a surprised manner. "It was such a simple trick that I didn't have any idea I'd get away with it."

"It is the custom to shake hands before taking holds," the Pole pleaded.

TIME WAS CALLED.

"Time has been called and you should have protected yourself," was the referee's clinching argument.

The official time was announced as six and one-quarter seconds.

It was a case of where too much politeness did not pay.

While the men were resting and one was laughing and the other explaining the post in Zbysco's corner cracked off close to the floor and the entire ring sagged dismally, making the stage a dangerous place for a couple of big bulls like these to be flashing around. But they managed to keep well away from the danger spot, and at no time was either of them threatened with a fall off the stage.

The Pole continued to wander about the ring in a dazed sort of way, still protesting it wasn't fair. But he got little sympathy, and Gotch, still as delighted as a little boy with a new toy, rubbed his feet in the mat, and laughed and laughed. It was too funny to him, and the crowd enjoyed it as much as he did.

The men did not leave the ring, and inside of ten minutes were hard at it again, the work having been insufficient to even open the pores.

But in that short time Zbysco was a beaten man. If he was at heart confident when he entered the ring—which is doubtful, judging from his nervous manner and generally ill-at-ease attitude—his nerve was shaken by the suddenness with which Gotch applied the "up-endo" on him, just as he had foretold five days in advance of the match.

COMES UP BRAVELY.

He made a brave front as they shaped up for the second fall, exactly at 10.15 o'clock, just fifteen minutes after the Pole had entered the ring. He made a play to rough it with the champion and played close, giving Gotch as little chance as possible to get at his legs again. Frank used his forearm across the Pole's face when he roughed it, and this made Zbysco quit such tactics. But neither Zman was any too gentle.

Suddenly Gotch crotched his man and, lifting him bodily, threw him over. But the Pole was up immediately and they did some more work head to head. Gotch was loose and saving his strength, while Zbysco put a great deal of his beef into the pulling and hauling. Twice soon after that Gotch lifted him and threw him to the mat, but the Pole always got in a sitting position and refused to give Gotch an opening.

Again the Pole arose but after a few moments of feinting Gotch dived into the legs, upset his man and came up on top. Both athletes, Zbysco especially, were dripping, the perspiration running off the Pole's face in streams.

TRIES FOR HAMMER LOCK.

Frank tugged away for a hammer lock, but the Pole's arm proved too powerful and he got away. Gotch twisted the massive legs and tried to pry them apart, shaking his head laughingly when he failed. The Pole then got to his feet again, only to be upended heavily and then Gotch, working with great determination and vigor, clamped on the deadly toe hold.

The Pole made a grimace of agony as he felt the pain the lock caused, and struggling out of Gotch's bear-like grasp, arose to his feet, shaking his right leg painfully. Gotch, never hesitating, now upset the huge man again, and in a jiffy put on a bar arm and a wrist lock, and the big back slowly sank to the canvas and was held there.

What will Europe think of Frank Gotch now?

And what will Frank Gotch do for opponents?

Has the mighty athlete ruined the market?

It looks like it. Hackenschmidt, Mahmout and Zbysco, to say nothing of the lesser stars like Eason, Raicevich and others of that type, have fallen and fallen hard. None had a single chance of even getting Gotch anywhere near a fall. Is there a better man in Europe than those named? It isn't likely.

Gotch and Zbysco Talk

I have successfully defended my title and I now want the quiet life. I fought in my last big public match when I defeated the Pole. I knew victory would be mine, but I truly believed that I would be given a harder battle. In the opening round I got the Pole before he could collect his thoughts. The lack of quick thinking has beaten them all. I planned to carry the fight to him, which I did, for nothing is so discouraging to a grappler as to be placed on the defensive right from the start. He has tremendous strength, but his speed, cleverness and thinking power are bad.—FRANK GOTCH.

—o—

I was deceived in his ability. I was beaten fairly and all I can say is that Gotch knows too much for any opponent that may face him. He is as fast as lightning and his brain works just as rapidly. I understand his ability, judging his worth from our Buffalo match, but I do not feel that I am disgraced by the defeat. I was not ready for the start, when he slipped to his knees and picking me up rolled me over and gained the first fall. I was injured in the second bout, which had something to do with my defeat. I am going back to Europe next week and tell of the wonderful work of my conqueror.—ZBYSCO.

FIGHT FANS FOR FRISCO

There are a few more ringside tickets left for Tommy McDonough's ringside excursion to the Jeffries-Johnson bout at San Francisco on July 4th. The plan for the dress circle has already been completely sold out at a high figure and Peterborough will be abundantly represented in the anti-Herpicide row.

Mr. McDonough has engaged a palatial train of seven cars for the lift lock contingent and Mr. James Lewis, of the Oriental barber shop, will be taken along as tonsorial tip taker. On account of the fact that this corner will be on a train the price for shaves will be advanced to thirty cents, exclusive of charities.

Club sandwiches will be served in the buffet car at ninety-eight cents a piece and coffee thirty-two cents a cup. On account of Mr. McDonough's connection with the sugar trust, he has made arrangements by which the sugar for the coffee will be free to all patrons of the eating department.

Fuller particulars of the trip will be given later. A few tickets are left at $600 a piece, which includes a round trip on the Frisco belt line.

Lockwood's Wit.

Probably no one had more ready wit than Sir Frank Lockwood, the lawyer. He was a tall man, and an unruly member of his audience once called out to him in the middle of his speech "Go it, telescope!"

"My friend is mistaken in applying that term to me," Sir Frank quietly said. "He ought to claim it for himself; for, though he cannot draw me out, I think I can both see through him and shut him up."

On another occasion one of his political opponents called, "All lawyers are rogues!"

"I am glad," Sir Frank quickly rejoined, "to greet this gentleman as a member of my profession; but he need not proclaim our shortcoming to the world."

One on the Doctors.

An anecdote is told of Robert Smith, brother of Sydney Smith, and an ex-Advocate General. On one occasion he engaged in an argument with a physician over the merits of their respective professions.

"I don't say that all lawyers are crooks," said the doctor in his final summing up; "but my opponent will have to admit that his profession doesn't make angels of men."

"No," quietly retorted Smith, "you doctors certainly have the best of us there."

An Oversight.

An old German maker of violoncellos had just finished one which he considered to be a particularly fine piece of work, and he proudly lifted it up for a friendly musician who was standing near him to admire. He had just called attention to its beautiful lines when all of a sudden something rattled.

"Ach," he exclaimed, "I have left der glue pot inside!"

At the Reception.

"I understand, Miss Araminta," said the professor, "that you are inclined toward literature."

"Yes," said the blushing spinster. "I wrote for the Bugle Magazine last month."

"Indeed! May I ask what?" asked the professor.

"I addressed all the envelopes for the rejected manuscripts," said Araminta proudly.

CHAT ON HAND BAGS

The Monogram Model's the Winner This Season.

CORD HANDLES VERY NEW.

Irish Lace Bags All That Can Be Desired by the Dainty Woman For Wear With Lingerie Gowns—Jewelers Mount Them.

The fad of the moment in Paris is the monogram bag, and the little sketches here shown are fair representatives of a whole line of these less frivolous and most convenient of accessories.

The value of the hand bay is no longer to be disputed. The pocketless condition of the garb of modern woman has long ago let in the bag as a permanent possession.

It is counted among the legitimate expenses of economical woman and is not likely soon to drop from the list.

Black velvet bags are a feature of the season, an all the year round article, matching the garment in winter and the hat or some touch on the costume in summer. Their particular attraction at the moment is the monogram in gold or brass to match the mount.

LATEST MONOGRAM MODEL.

Cords are the last expression of a sensible fashion mandate for the saving of gloves. Metal chains, however, survive and are necessary on the bag with the engraved mounting.

The suede bag is identical in outline with the velvet, and its monograms do not differ. Either material is beaded, and many of the simple designs suggest the home application of large gems and little beads.

The beaded reticule of other days has come back both in its mounted state and in a drawn together model, and invariably the beadwork, which is done by hand, is a reproduction of the old floral wreath or basket of flowers done on the most ancient of hand bags. All that is needed in the modern bead bag is that softening influence of time to bring down the colors to a lower tone.

Irish lace bags are all that can be desired for the best of lingerie gowns. Their prettiest models are those having a background of baby Irish with a heavy motif on the front.

Plain linen, too, shows an inset of Irish lace back and front, and others are of linen covered with a heavy white diagonal net resembling fish net curtaining.

The embroidered and braided linen shopping bags are to be used again, and among them one of the newest shapes is round. The perfectly round linen bag on silver mounts with a silver initial is excellent when made carefully at home of rich dark homespun linen to match a costume of mulberry, for instance.

BAG WITH CORD HANDLE.

Just here let the admonition be sounded—line it with silk of a lighter shade and have the jeweler do the mounting.

GOVERNANCE OF INDIA

FRENCHMAN'S VIEW OF BRITISH RULE IN THE EAST.

M. Joseph Chailley of the Chamber of Deputies, After a Study of Eastern Affairs, Has Collaborated on a Book In Which He Pays a Glowing Tribute to Great Britain's Work Among the Hindu Races.

M. Joseph Chailley, a member of the French Chamber of Deputies, has, with the co-operation of Sir William Meyer, written a valuable and impartial study of the present-day conditions of the Indian Empire. "Administrative Problems of British India" is comprehensive, calm, and eminently informative.

The Radical politician and the Babu agitator attempts to deny that East is East and West is West. A set of facts printed by M. Chailley in an early chapter clearly indicate the vast difference.

"As regards child marriage, the statistics are stupefying. In India the 1901 census showed 121,500 married boys and 243,500 married girls whose age was under five; between the ages of five and ten the figures are 760,000 and 2,030,000 respectively; between ten and fifteen, 2,540,000 and 6,585,000.

"Further, there were no less than 1,277,000 widowed persons under twenty, of whom 914,000 were females. Of these, 6,000 widowers and 96,000 widows were less than five years of age; 37,000 widowers and 96,000 widows between five and ten; and 113,000 widowers and 276,000 widows between ten and fifteen."

Could any figures more dramatically demonstrate the entire dissimilarity of social conditions? M. Chailley notes in the Indian an Oriental disinclination to work.

"At first sight everybody seems to be taking an active part in some common toil; as a matter of fact, several persons are looking on at the labor of one. As has been cynically remarked, out of five people who seem to be working, one is doing nothing, one is resting, one is looking on, and another is helping the previous three."

Much, naturally, is said of the much-discussed National Party, but it is insisted that it stands for a small class and a small part of the Empire:—

"As a matter of fact, this so-called National party is really a party of privilege, a concourse of representatives of the high castes and the rich classes, which is really a stranger to the nation on whose behalf it professes to speak. . . .

"What would rejoice the Babus of Bengal and the Poona Brahmans would be likely to cause grave displeasure to the men of action in the United Provinces and the Punjab."

M. Chailley points out some of the weaknesses of British rules, and explains the native unrest, but he adds:

"It would be wrong, however, to conclude from the remarks in this chapter that the peoples of India are weary of British supremacy or administration. The loyalty of the great majority is still incontestable, and it extends to students, lawyers, Deccan Brahmans, and even to the Babus of Bengal and the chiefs of the National party. This was clearly shown by the universal and spontaneous mourning at the death of Queen Victoria."

The sharp distinction between the races and the lack of social mingling are, as always, observed, but even these are not universal.

"The British officers of the Indian army and the frontier officials are fond of the natives, their companions in sport and war. The Englishman adores bravery and respects pride; he meets both among the native soldiers on the Northwest Frontier and in the Punjab and Rajputana.

"A British officer's native orderly is not a menial servant; he only looks after his master's weapons, but he is devoted to him, and if he is ill will pass nights by his bedside; while on the field of battle he will save him or die with him. On actual military service the soldier is disciplined and respectful and the officer stiff, but outside they talk freely.

"The soldier asks advice from his officer, and will consult him on his family affairs or about a lawsuit. The officer listen and helps, and, outside the barracks, will walk with a Sepoy and speak to him familiarly. Hence there is a rapprochement, due to common dangers and common tastes, but it is an exception."

M. Chailley points out, too, that there is little social life among the natives themselves:

"The wife of the well-known and lately-deceased Justice Tyabji of the High Court of Bombay said in 1903 at the annual meeting of an Indian ladies' club: 'We complain that Europeans keep aloof from us, but that is largely our fault. I ask you how many among ourselves, Hindus, Mussulmans, or Parsis, want to meet altogether? Is it pride or reserve which keeps up apart? Is it not rather a difference in manners, habits, education, dress, language, and religion? Let us,' she added, 'begin by union among ourselves.' These are significant remarks."

"The Government of India might, as many other Governments do, regard its work with placid and silent [illegible] its passion for the public good and its desire for improvement constantly impel it to check its conceptions by their results. It examines, blames, and reforms itself, and, as a consequence, it seems to condemn itself in the eyes of superficial critics.

"But any one who has studied its ample legislative work and examined, stage by stage, its different and successive creations, feels himself bound to set aside the criticisms which the slowless or the imperfections of this work might provoke, and to render homage to the conscientiousness and knowledge which it displays.

"The Indians only plead their talent and cleverness; the English are specially pre-occupied with character. What they look to mainly is the moral value of the man, coolness in decision, rapidity in action, a conscience which can resist temptation, and an energy which can face threats — in fine, a sentiment of duty towards one's country and oneself."

$50,000 FOR A VIOLIN.

Late George Haddock's Sale Will Reveal Some Beautiful Instruments.

The announcement that the collection of violins which belonged to the late Mr. George Haddock, the famous musician, is to be sold has aroused the keenest interest amongst dealers and collectors. The Haddock fiddles are reputed to be the finest private collection in existence, the gem being the "Emperor Stradivarius," pronounced by Joachim to be the finest violin he had ever seen, and which is stated to be worth $50,000. It is nearly two hundred years old, and notwithstanding its great age looks as fresh as if it had but yesterday left the hands of Antonio Stradivari, the famed violin maker of Cremona.

This is a somewhat exceptional value to be placed on a violin, the price of each of the 600 Strads which are known to be in existence ranging from $2,500 to $6,500. Perhaps the only violin which can be compared with the "Emperor Stradivarius" of the Haddock collection is the one which Paganini left to the city of Genoa, for which as much as $50,000 has been offered. The Strad presented to the late Dr. Joachim on the occasion of his jubilee cost $6,000, while that presented to Lady Halle by the Duke of Edinburgh, the late Earl of Dudley, and the late Lord Hardwicke cost $5,000.

When Sarasate's will was proved two years ago it was found that he had bequeathed $20,000 and a Strad each to the Conservatoires of Paris and Madrid, the money being for the purpose of founding prizes bearing his name. Each of the violins was valued at about $10,000, one of the instruments having been discovered in a very romantic manner. At one time it was the property of a Genevan blacksmith, to whom it had been given by a traveler who could not pay for the shoeing of his horse. For years it hung on the wall of the blacksmith's house, until after many years another horseman, M. Boissier, who was also a violinist and a collector of violins, came along. The blacksmith asked M. Boissier to buy the violin from him at his own price, or else to find him a purchaser. M. Boissier carried it away, cleaned off the smoke, discovered the Strad mark—and did not defraud the blacksmith.

Twice at least $10,000 has been paid by private treaty for Strads, and $7,000 was paid for a "Betts' Strad," the title which it gained from the following incident. Betts was a music-seller in London some sixty years ago, and one day a stranger entered his shop offering a violin for sale at the low sum of one guinea. The dealer at once jumped at the bargain, put down his guinea, and secured the instrument. He retained it in his family for a number of years, and, after changing hands several times, it was bought at the figure named by a foreign nobleman.

Five years ago $3,500 was paid for a Strad which for years was played upon by a strolling musician in the Notting Hill and Marylebone districts of London; while some time ago $8,000 was paid for a fiddle which had previously been knocked down at an auction sale to a laborer for $1.50. Fortunately for him, the laborer knew something of the value of fiddles, and a few days later sold his treasure to a dealer in curios for $3,000. Ultimately the latter sold it for $8,000—truly a record bargain.

Pigeons—Halfpenny Each.

Castle Wemyss, situated on the Firth of Clyde, where Lord and Lady Inverclyde have been spending a few weeks, is a handsome and imposing house, which was built by the late Sir John Burns. Lord Inverclyde is one of best-known sportsmen of the North, and besides being a good shot, is an expert at hockey and curling. With one whose fortunes are bound up with the sea, it is but natural that he should include yachting in his list of recreations. His lordship tells many good stories, one of his best being connected with a pigeon-shooting match.—A party of amateur pigeon-shooters some time ago arranged for a match, and ordered thirty pigeons from a dealer in a neighboring town. The shooting was of a really wonderful character; but the actual performances need not be described in detail. The net results will be gathered readily from the following note, which was subsequently received from the dealer. It ran: "Gentlemen,—I beg sincerely to thank you for your order, and to intimate that I shall be only too happy to supply you with any number of birds on future occasions of this sort. The whole of the thirty birds, for which you paid me at the rate of eightpence per head, returned home in safety, and, moreover, brought with them a stray pigeon. My price to your party henceforth will be sixpence a dozen."

Brief!

Among other notable persons who celebrated their natal day last month was the Earl of Amherst, who is seventy-four years of age. The owner of about 8,000 acres, Lord Amherst was at one time a captain in the Coldstream Guards, and has seen service in the Crimean war. He was educated at Eton, and since 1898 has been Pro-Grandmaster English Freemasons. The inevitable story concerns a young lawyer who was perambulating the courts with an air of scarcely being [illegible] when his boy tracked him down in one of the corridors. "Oh, sir!" said the boy, "there is a man at your office with a brief, sir." "What, a brief! Great heavens!" And the young fellow began to run through the passages as fast as he could for fear the prey should escape him. "Don't hurry, sir," cried the boy. "I've locked him in!"

Served In Fourteen Capitals.

Beginning his career as an attache at Paris in 1858, the Right Hon. Sir Charles Stewart Scott forged steadily ahead until, in 1893, he became British ambassador at Copenhagen, and thence to St. Petersburg in 1898. He entered the diplomatic service as a youth of twenty, and has served during his career in fourteen capitals. Sir Charles is an Irishman, and received his education at Trinity College, Dublin, where he was well liked among his fellows as a jovial, good-natured companion.

TEACHER SHOULD BE UNSELFISH WORKER IN CHILD'S INTEREST

Excellent Advice to Normal School Graduates Given by Principal at Closing Exercises—The Appreciative Attitude of Pupils to the Staff Shown in Valedictory Address—Musical Program.

The evening of June 10th, 1910, will assuredly linger long in the memory of those Normal School students who graduate this year.

It was a fitting conclusion to the year's work and as a result of last evening's programme many future teachers will carry with them loving memories of the Peterborough Normal School.

In a brief address Mr. J. Lapp, who presided, explained the nature of the evening's entertainment and read the financial report of the Literary Society of the school.

There was a small balance on hand.

A splendid programme was provided, the performers being mainly students as follows:—

Instrumental Solo—Miss Kingsley.
Recitation—Miss Walker.
Quartette — Misses Heenan and Staples Messrs. Grogan and Hutchinson.
Instrumental Duet—Misses Davies and Kingsley.
Vocal Solo—Miss Heenan.
Vocal Solo—Miss Davies
Instrumental Duet—Misses Denne and Gardner.

Mr. Duncan Walker, principal of the Normal School, gave a splendid address on the requisites that every teacher must possess to be successful in that profession. Every teacher should enter the teaching profession not with the sole object of making money, but with the ambition of benefitting the children entrusted to his or her care.

"Remember you are not working for money alone, and you may never expect to reap all your reward in this world." Every teacher should feel that his mission was for the benefit of the child. A teacher without interest in his profession was an injury to the world.

There were bound to be teachers who were mistaken in their calling, but who would doubtless succeed in some other profession.

Mr. Walker also dwelt forcibly on the teacher's service to the community. The teacher should aim to inspire everybody with a love of learning and work. He lamented the fact that we were turning out from our schools children by the thousand who who were not instilled with any ambition to work or progress. Other qualifications of a successful teacher must be self-control, good health, good character and unselfishness. In concluding Mr. Walker wished the future teachers unlimited success in the vocation they were soon to follow.

The honor of reading the valedictory was given to Miss Agnes Annan and was as follows:—

VALEDICTORY.

This evening has, as you already know, been set aside for us to say a formal farewell to all those with whom we have become intimate — in some cases very intimate. In days—so few that we can count them on our two hands—we as a body of students cease our connection with the second session of the Peterborough Normal school. For some it may be the last school days, while for the rest it may be but a beginning, the end of which is in the far off future.

When we left our homes about six months ago it was with dread because we were coming among strangers. But that soon passed away, for the friendly feeling exhibited by the citizens towards the Normalites, and the hearty welcome we received from the staff soon infused a home-like feeling in us. Little did we realize when we came here the true meaning of education or what advantages we had over our ancestors who paved the way for us. The tyro's narrow conception have been broadened by the intelligent lectures we have listened to and we depart with a strong desire to make the best use of what we have, and to gain more, so that our services will be more helpful to mankind.

In imparting this information the principal and staff of teachers have been diligent and faithful in their untiring efforts. When we think of the priceless privileges we have had here, to say the farewell requires a much greater effort. It would take too long to name them. Teachers! we have always found you ready and willing to help, when problems confronted us as individuals, you never showed us that you regarded it as any trouble to stay after school hours and explain our difficulties. You seemed ever to have our interests at heart. And when we think of the number of students we appreciate more the sympathy tendered to the individual.

Again we have seen our friends in the principals and staffs of the Model schools. Many times during our weekly visits have they shown patience and friendliness when watching our apprenticeship efforts as we endeavored to carry out the old law;—We learn to do by doing.

The principal and staff have always been considerate and in order that the routine of school work might not become monotonous they have brightened our lives with social functions. We might also mention the literary society, the athletic association and the churches of the city in this connection, for they also provided us with entertaiments which often proved an inspiration.

And now we must say farewell to all the students for soon we go out into life's frield of action where there is work waiting for us to do. There we can apply the good and beautiful which we have been taught here. We leave the informal farewells to be said after the pleasant outing which the staff is kindly preparing for us after we have written down our last scrap of knowledge on the examination papers. This informal farewell may be the preliminary step towards a separation that may last for some time unless we are honored and allowed to come back next year. We are thankful that the laws of psychology assure us that we can store up in our minds the images of the things seen, and recall them in the future. It may be that long years after this Normal term has gone, we shall look back on the past and see this magnificent structure with its fine equipments and excellent staff of teachers. It is then we shall recall from memory the many scenes which took place in the library, the art room, the household science room, the manual training room and elsewhere. In these we hope to recall the personage who formed so important a part of them. And not only this do we hope to recall but also the lectures, which were often spiced with humor.

And now, although we have endeavored to give vent in words to our feelings at parting, in each heart there still lingers, and will continue to do so, the regret we feel in severing our connection with that institution which has proved so truly an inspiring fostering Alma Mater, to us.

COMMENTS ON JURY'S VERDICT

The following letter, which appeared in the Winnipeg Free Press of May 52th, has been handed in with a request for its publication in the Review:

To the Editor of the Free Press:

Sir,—Your issue of May 21 reports a coroner's jury at Peterborough, Ont., as recommending "the passing of a law to punish such men as Mr. Todd, a Christian Science practitioner." It is worthy of note, however, that this recommendation was made by a jury acting under instructions from a physicians who is naturally opposed to every system of healing but his own. No evidence was considered as to the comparative efficacy of Christian Science and materia medica, and no just conclusion could be be arrived at, nor one that should have weight with any thinking man or woman. Justice demands that each system be tested by a fair comparison of both successes and failures. Christian Science has nothing to fear from such a comparison. It is practiced throughout Canada in a large number of families where there are small children. It is about one year since another child died in Canada under its treatment exclusively. Both these died of pneumonia, for which the most eminent physicians admit there is no specific drug treatment. Four of the most eminent physicians in England were unable to save our beloved King from this disease. In the face of all this a failure under Christian Science is published abroad as a crime.

In 1908 in the city of Winnipeg alone there were 535 deaths among children under one year of age, and the number would be much larger if the figures were available for all those under sixteen. This shows the great injustice that is done in interfering with anyone because of a very occasional failure of Christian Science treatment.

There is abundant evidence that there is need for more effective healing, and this cannot be gained by allowing an estblished system, through self-interest, to use the law to interfere with other systems that are giving promise of effective results. It is right that all classes of citizens should be made to obey the law in regard to contagious diseases, but to force on a patient or parent, already burdened with sickness, a system of healing in which they have no faith is a gross breach of the British sense of justice. The parents are the natural guardians of the children and, where there is no tendency to neglect, they should be allowed the privilege of choosing that system of treatment which their loving care for their own child and their past experience have proven most efficacious.

Mr. W. F Skitch has received a letter from Charles H. Therien, New Bedford, Mass., notifying him that the liberation of pigeons, which was to have taken place to-morrow, has been again postponed. The birds of the New Bedford Racing Pigeon Club were liberated for a 300 mile flight at Richmond, N.Y., Sunday morning, but encountered very bad weather and few of the birds reached their lofts, at least not enough to liberate again The birds were completely out of condition. Mr. Therien says in his letter that if he decides to send the birds to Peterborough at a future date he will notify Mr. Skitch.

A CHANGE -- A REST

Three years ago the 16th of January last Mr. Browett Dr. of Optics of Philadelphia moved his family to Peterborough, located permanently as a citizen and began to establish an Optical business here and since that time he has never spent more than a day out of the city. This seemed necessary to establish a new business and now for the first time he is spending a few days on a business trip teaching and examining Opticians. Mr. Browett has received a permit to see every detail of the process of the manufacture of lenses and spectacles of the famous Bauch & Lomb Optical Co. in Rochester, N. Y., and will before returning be shown through the immense factory where about 2000 hands are employed. Mr. Browett hopes to return by the 18th., much refreshed by his holidays and with new Ideas and equipment for carrying on the ever business of The Optical Institute. Mr. Browett wishes to thank the citizens of Peterboro' and the people of the vicinity for the patronage which has been given during the past three years and assure them that it shall be his constant endeavors to render the best possible service in the examination of the eyes for glasses and supplying the most modern styles of finest quality and best value.

MISSIONERS TO GATHER

Hundred and Sixty Religious Bodies Will Assemble at Edinburgh This Week.

London, June 13.—The World's Missionary Congress at Edinburgh this week will be a practical approach to church unity. About one hundred and sixty religious bodies and separate societies have sent delegates. About five hundred delegates are Americans and seven hundred are British and colonial. Native churches in important missionary fields will be represented by leading workers.

A series of commissions has been collecting facts during the last two years, and reports printed in nine volumes will be discussed from day to day. This unique library may enable the congress to revise and improve missionary methods, which is the main motive of the gathering.

The presence of a large body of American laymen is an indication that practical measures will be adopted for imparting unity to missionary operations and for improving the equipment of the workers. The formation of an international advisory committee is probable.

Enthusiasts talk about a new crusade for the evangelization of the world. They may be over sanguine, but there is likely to be a great gain of efficiency in consequence of the suspension of denominational differences and the demand for unity of direction.

An important series of letters and greetings will be read on Tuesday when Lord Balfour of Burleigh takes the chair. The Archbishop of Canterbury will make one of the earliest addresses and Robt. E. Speer, from America, may follow him. John R. Mott, who rivals Mr. Speer in oratory, will preside over the discussions, and the reports of the commissions.

Honorary degrees will be conferred by the University of Edinburgh upon both Mr. Speer and Mr. Mott, and also upon Seth Low and Dr. Douglas Mackenzie.

MR. BALFOUR WILL CONFER

Sends His Answer to Premier Asquith's Invitation.

London, June 13.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Rt. Hon. Arthur Balfour replied to Premier Asquith's communication regarding a conference on the veto question on Saturday. It is understood it was favorable. Asquith's statement in the House of Commons Monday is now anticipated with the keenest interest. As to the suggestion that the conference met with the outspoken opposition of Labor leaders, on Saturday night, speaking at Loughborough, Ramsay MacDonald said he was sorry there was going to be any conference. No compromise, no bargain, no accommodation could be accepted by any body of men determined to make the constitution workable. The veto resolutions were the absolute minimum. If there was a conference, he denied the right of the two front benches to settle the question. They no longer represented the Commons or the opinion of the country. Philip Snowden was equally emphatic as to any compromise. He said it meant that the Liberal party was beyond resurrection. This was also the view of the Nationalists, as expressed in The Journal. MacNamara, speaking at Manchester told his hearers to rest content; that their chosen leaders would continue to seek vindication of Liberal principles concerning the Upper House. With courage, patience and determination a way must be cleared for social reform. The Commons must settle the uncontrolled financial system of the country.

THE FIELD CROP REPORT FOR MAY

Ottawa, June 13.—The field crop report for May, issued by the Government Department, gives the area of wheat in Canada as 9,295,000 acres, which is 1,554,000 acres greater than last year. The conditions are good.

Ontario shows an increase in fall wheat of from 581,100 to 609,200 acres. The effects of late frosts have been felt in many places, and injury has been done to fruits and tender vegetables in some localities, but generally the prevailing low temperatures of April and May have strengthened the field crops and have left them better able to withstand the attacks of night frosts and re-seeding and re-planting have been less necessary than in former years.

STRIKE CAUSE OF MURDER

Lacrosse, Wis., June 13.—John H. Studier, who came here from Amsterdam, N.Y., foreman of the Lacrosse Pearl Button Co.'s plant, was shot and killed as a result of a strike late Saturday afternoon, and scores of citizens are aiding the police in a search of the swamps near the Mississippi River for the murderer. Studier was shot by Hatt Heusgen, who was later arrested by the police in the woods near the scene of the murder. Heusgen confessed that he shot Studier because the foreman shaved his salary check as cutter in the factory, claiming that Heusgen was not entitled to full amount for his workmanship.

The watchman on duty at the time of the wreck stated that he passed the spot only 10 minutes before the rock tumbled down in front of the train. The verdict was accidental death, with blame on no one.

PROF. GOLDWIN SMITH BURIED

Long Procession Follows Body to the Cemetery.

Toronto, June 13.—With that simplicity which characterized all his acts through life, the obsequies of Dr. Goldwin Smith, LL.D., D.C.L., philosopher, historian and litterateur, were carried out Saturday afternoon. There was an entire absence of ostentation or display, but withal there was an added dignity and reverence that was felt by every one present. It was peculiarly fitting that the public service should be held within the walls of the great university to whose development and growth he had given so much of his learning and wisdom, all the more so because his death occurring at a time when the supreme event of the academic year was being observed cast a pall over the gaiety of commencement.

Twenty-four hours previous to the time set for the funeral service, the chancellor of the university referred to the great loss the institution had sustained in the death of Dr. Smith, and so it was from the same platform, the palms and convocation arrangements remaining untouched, that his body was borne to its last resting place in St. James' Cemetery and laid beside that of his beloved wife, who predeceased him so recently, in accordance with an oft-expressed desire.

The remains were moved to Convocation Hall Saturday morning and placed in front of the platform, a few flowers from the conservatories of the Grange being sprinkled over the top of the casket. The body of the hall was well filled when at 3 o'clock Rev. R. J. Moore, vicar of St. George's Church, announced the hymn, "O, God Our Help in Ages Past." Then followed the reading of the beautiful lines from the Anglican ritual. Newman's immortal hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light" was sung, after which Rev. W. Harris Wallace, pastor of Beverley street Baptist Church, read the Scripture lesson from I. Corinthians, xv., 20.

To the left of the casket the immediate members of Dr. Smith's household were seated, including Dallas Dixon, Philadelphia, and E. H. Keating. Behind them came in a body the board of governors of Toronto University. On the right were Sir Henry M. Pellatt, representing His Excellency Earl Grey; Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, who was present on behalf of the Dominion Government; His Honor Lieut.-Governor Gibson; Sir James Whitney and Senator J. K. Kerr.

Others present were: President Schurman of Cornell University; President Falconer of Toronto University; Sir William Meredith, Sir Charles Moss, Senator Kerr, Senator Robert Jaffray, Chancellor Burwash, Canon Cody, Provost Macklem, John Ross Robertson, Byron E. Walker.

A long cortege made up of representatives of many societies followed the funeral car to St. James Cemetery.

PAPAL NUNCIO ENTERS PROTEST

Madrid, June 13.—Monsignor Vico, the papal nuncio, has formally protested against the royal decree, issued Saturday, authorizing edifices of non-Catholic religious societies to display the insignia for public worship and other ceremonies, on the ground that the Government should maintain the status quo pending the result of the negotiations which are being conducted with the Vatican.

Premier Canalejas, in reply, says that the decree does not touch matters covered by the negotiations. It is understood that the answer which the Vatican has made relative to the revision of the concordat and reduction of the public worship budget, is not satisfactory, and the Premier has notified the Vatican that, unless it changes its attitude the Government will be reluctantly compelled to break off the negotiations.

ONSLAUGHT ON HIGHER CRITICISM IS STEMMED

Rev. Dr. Solomon Cleaver at Conference Brings in a Resolution, But Chancellor Burwash and Rev. Dr. Burns Head off the Attack.

Toronto, June 13.—Gloomy without and lurid within, Toronto Methodist Conference had a memorable session on Saturday morning. The pent up fire and fury was engendered by Rev. G. Jackson's recent book on biblical criticism. Discussion led to a general attack on the teachings of advanced theological colleges, but Chancellor Burwish's dispassionate utterances at the close had their outcome in the abandonment of a resolution aimed at curbing the freedom of Rev. Mr. Jackson.

After various skirmishes as to Rev. George Jackson's standing in the Methodist Church, a grand charge was made against the battlements of Victoria College [illegible] Cleaver and B. E. Bull.

On motion of Rev. Dr. Burns of Berkeley street Church, a time limit of ten minutes was placed on the mover and seconder, and five minutes on others.

Rev. Dr. Cleaver addressed the conference for ten minutes when "time" was called by the president. Dr. Cleaver gave a bewildered look at the members of conference, and several voices were heard urging an extension of time for another fifteen minutes. But Dr. Cleaver was not loaded up for so prolonged an effort. He read one or two brief salient paragraphs of ultra-heretical tone, and wound up with a perfervid evangelical flourish.

In moving the resolution to curtail the heretical proclivities of dubious theological professors, Dr. Cleaver said he took the full responsibility of his action and was ready to say "let the anathemas fall on me."

Quite a few years ago, said Dr. Cleaver, alarm began to be felt regarding the statements being made in relation to the teaching in the theological schools and by the theological professors in the colleges. This alarm had reached a climax when the teachings of Rev. George Jackson came before the board of governors and regents in a public way. Despite the understanding then reached, Prof. Jackson had continued to voice his teachings at the college during the past year, and had printed them.

Resuming an explanatory tone, Dr. Cleaver said that he had been a resident of Toronto for nine years and a member of the board of regents of Victoria College for eight years. He believed that Prof. Jackson was not alone in his views, but that all the theological college staff agreed with him. It was said that surely the theological professors could be trusted. They are said to be "men of such beautiful characters." Unfortunately the history of the past showed that the great heresies had originated or been conducted by men of such beautiful character, otherwise they would not have carried any weight. Their beautiful characters, however, were not the product of the new theology, they had the firm foundation of the old theology.

Holding the book before him, and looking at it intently, Dr. Cleaver turned from passage to passage. The book, he said, taught that the early chapters of the Bible were not history and were not science, and should be regarded as mythology, but a mythology containing some important teaching in relation to God. It argued that the Old Testament was not reliable, and declared that the story of the patriarchs and the flood were purely mythical.

Prof. Jackson's book, proceeded Dr. Cleaver, asserted that no authority, however august, could stand before a man's own intellectual conscience. Rev. George Jackson said that people "must use their common sense" in reading the Bible, just as they do in reading English history. This was setting aside the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ.

With brusque vigor Dr. Cleaver concluded that if the omniscience and teaching of Jesus Christ could be set aside by the common sense of any man, then there was nothing left that could be relied upon.

At the suggestion of H. H. Fudger and by request of the president, Chancellor Burwash addressed the conference. The revered president of Victoria never appeared to better advantage. The whole tone and atmosphere of the proceedings were changed by the chancellor's quiet, impressive, modulated utterances. Those who looked for a forensic display, attack or defence, looked in vain. The chancellor's speech was silver, and the silence with which his words were awaited by the eagerly expectant conference was golden, after the clamor of the earlier hours.

The chancellor, in very carefully selected language, expressed with the precision and impress of a judge of a court of last resort, pointed out that the questions being considered involved profound mysteries in regard to which very few of them knew very much about and hasty action would be deplorable.

Rev. Dr. Burns caught the right psychological moment, and while the conference was under the magic spell of Chancellor Burwash's appeal secured the assent of the conference to the Cleaver motion being tabled.

A DAY OF TRAGEDIES

St. John, N.B., June 13.—Saturday was a day of tragedies in St. John, including what is believed to be a deliberate child murder. During the morning the body of a male child was found on Courtenay Bay flats, badly mutilated, with wounds in the stomach and neck. The little one was but a few hours old, and had lived.

About noon three men were buried in a cave-in of two trenches in different parts of the city. In East King street Frank Carberry, aged 50, and Charles Cain, aged 35, were buried by the side of a sewer trench falling in. Carberry was caught standing and his life crushed out. He made a fearful sight standing dead, buried almost to the neck, while his body was being dug out. Cain was not seriously hurt. In Water street a trench caved in and Alexander Evans was badly hurt.

WILL ROOSEVELT STUMP IN FAVOR OF CONSERVATION?

At St. Paul Gathering He is Given as Leader of a New American Political Party, Which Will Fight Monopolies and Corporations.

St. Paul, Minn., June 13.—A new party without a name, but of which, according to Hugh T. Halbert, president of the St. Paul Roosevelt Club, Theodore Roosevelt, Gifford Pinchot and James R. Garfield are the leaders, was referred to here Saturday night at the dinner given by the St. Paul Roosevelt Club in honor of Mr. Pinchot and Mr. Garfield and in recognition of their work in assisting President Roosevelt in his efforts for conservation of natural resources.

"The Roosevelt Club," Mr. Halbert said, "has consistently stood for the conservation of men and against plunder and graft. This country has lived on its capital, but at last has awakened to the fact that it will soon ex[illegible] its natural resources by the inequitable distribution of its wealth, in direct violation of the law of equal opportunity of its citizens. This condition has brought about the formation of a new party without name, but not without an issue, nor without leaders.

The party has two wings, composed of those called conservatives and those called progressives, but the real division is composed of those who favor the rights of the people as against those who favor a monopoly of the benefits of the public domain.

"That party may be unnamed, but its leaders are Theodore Roosevelt and our honored guests, Gifford Pinchot and James R. Garfield."

Mr. Halbert's address aroused great enthusiasm.

"Conservation has captured the nation," said Gifford Pinchot in his address. "Its progress during the last twelve months is amazing. Official opposition to the conservation movement, whatever damage it has done or still threatens to the public interest, has vastly strengthened the grasp of conservation upon the minds and consciences of our people. Efforts to obscure or belittle the issue have only served to make it larger and clearer in the public estimation.

"The conservation movement cannot be checked by the baseless charge that it will prevent development, or that every man who tells the plain truth is either a muckraker or a demagogue. It has taken firm hold on our national moral sense, and when an issue does that it has won.

"The conservation issue is a moral issue, and the heart of it is this: For whose benefit shall our natural resources be conserved—for the benefit of us all, or for the use and profit of the few? This truth is so obvious and the question itself so simple that the attitude toward conservation of any man in public or private life indicates his stand in the fight for public rights."

CHARGED [illegible] DYNAMITING

Brockville, June 13.—Provincial Constable Stone rounded up at Algonquin after midnight three farmers, Herbert Easter, Grant Easter and Kay Prue, their brother-in-law, charged with dynamiting the home of Mrs. Nathan Eveleire in that village. It is alleged they desired to rid the community of Mrs. Eveleire, taking this means of doing so. No serious results followed the explosion, beyond partially wrecking the house.

Henry Easter, father of two of the prisoners, will have to face a charge of obstructing Stone in his effort to arrest Herbert Easter in Brockville on Saturday.

Run Over by Train.

London, June 13.—Conductor Ed. Murphy of the C.P.R. was run over by a work train at Tilbury on Saturday afternoon and died in Chatham Hospital a couple of hours later. He was getting off the front end of the van, missed his footing and fell across the rails. Both legs were so badly crushed that they had to be amputated.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

SURRENDER EXPECTED

Bluefields, Nicaragua, June 13.—Gen. Corton, who has been in pursuit of Gen. Chavarria and his column of Government troops, has sent a despatch to Gen. Mena at Rama, that he expects Chavarria's surrender within a day or two, as he has cut off the Madriz leader between Chili and Cedro Bonito.

It is likely that a declaration of independence will be issued by the people of the Atlantic coast, owing to the fact that Gen. Estrada is receiving no support from the inhabitants of the interior.

KITCHENER MAY RESIGN

London, June 13.—It is understood that Lord Kitchener has asked leave to resign the Mediterranean command to which he was appointed last August, succeeding the Duke of Connaught as inspector-general of the Mediterranean forces.

There has recently been a strong agitation to have Lord Kitchener appointed to a more weighty position, such as Viceroy of India.

A PEACEFUL INVASION

To-morrow in the Charlotte street church there will open a convention of the Methodist Women's Missionary Society. "The Ladies, God Bless 'Em." It's on nearly every toast list, and meets with much applause. We owe much to the women of the world. Not every woman can be a Lady Somerset and have her name in black type in the daily paper and be hailed as a benefactress, but there is always the unfortunate woman around the corner to be comforted by her. Yet her outposts are the end of the earth. Her gentle hand and kindly voice are everywhere.

The nurse has seen the doctor shake his head and walk away, when all was still save the mourner's laments. She has worked when the grey skies gave promise of a beautiful day, and when the sun went down behind a sullen cloud, the windows rattled and the thunder rolled. But it was not of these things she thinks, her mind is on the patient whose life she has to save. The nurse is seldom appreciated until sickness comes then this world turns quickly to her.

Women have their peculiar capacity and that capacity does not seem to be in directing the nation, but rather at home. She cannot be excelled as a teacher, and her sweet voice has sung itself into many a hard heart. Once in a while some object in skirts appears who should have been a man, and we listen to her. But it is for quiet work such as the missionary convention, which will meet on the morrow, that the women of the world are noted. The scroll of life has the names of many men who were each a genius, but women of genius are rare. A woman's forte seems to be to make bad men good, and good men better, but why should they ostracise their fallen sister?

If a man falls, he gets up, wipes off the mud and goes on, and the world shakes him by the hand and admires him for making a fresh start. But let a woman fall—

> A sigh too much and a kiss too long,
> Then follows the sound of a weeping rain,
> And things are never the same again.

Why is this? This is a live question, as live as mission work among the Galicians, upon which, by the programme, Miss Jessie K. Munro will speak on to-morrow evening. It is as vital as mission work among the British Columbia Indians, which will, on Wednesday evening, according to the same programme, be dealt with by Miss Hannah M. Paul.

If a woman falls, she nearly always falls through love, and love must be the lever to lift her again. However, as near as can be seen, there is nothing relating to a question like this on the list of questions to be discussed.

ENTHUSIASM

Rev. Robert Pogue, pastor of St. Paul's church, said yesterday morning that when some people desire to condemn a man they call him an enthusiast. He also said many other things worth while. This was always true down from ancient history, when David was told to go back and mind the flock when he came out and killed the big fellow, down to Monday, June 13, 1910. Now they call an enthusiast names, and carricature him in the papers. In former days they burned him, put him on the rack, or looked the other way. The world always cries "Sit down" when an enthusiast interrupts, for the world hates to be disturbed. They told Carey to sit down. However, he went to India. When Jacquard invented the loom in France it was torn to pieces by infuriated workers. But being an enthusiast, Jacquard built another, and the reader knows the result. Galvani grew up with an enthusiasm to learn. "Look at the frog's legs twitch," he said. But they laughed at him and pointed their fingers to their heads in derision. Yet, undismayed, he fought on, and gave the world galvanism. Howe, the inventor of the American sewing machine so enraged the sewing women who feared that they would be robbed of their living, that the pious among them prayed for his soul. But this sewing machine expert, enthused with his discovery, kept right on with his invention, and to-day a sewing machine is a necessity in every house. Columbus looked over the waters and went from court to court to be turned away. His enthusiasm would not die out and we are here, and he is dead, yet living.

We all have two eyes, a mouth, nose, legs and arms, and we all have to eat, drink and sleep. We all look about the same and there are few who would cause any sensation if they walked down the street. Most of us are glad when it is time to quite work, when the whistle blows, when the bell rings or when the clock points to the hour of duty done.

But once in a while an enthusiast arises, some one possessed with an idea worth while. Then the world doubts. The telephone was doubted as the dream of a crazy mind, so was the telegraph and cable. Sir Walter Scott ridiculed the idea of gas, and later had his house lit with it. Enthusiasm differentiates. The enthusiastic scholar studies. The other one looks out the window and watches the flies on the wall. The enthusiastic laborer digs the ditch, the other fellow lights the pipe, smokes matches, and watches the cars go by.

Is he an enthusiastic citizen and believes in anything worth while? Does he step out in the open and declare himself? Then let him beware of the shaft from the coward behind the bush.

Everywhere there is the trail blazed, a new bug discovered, or a new star, there is the work of an enthusiast.

THE PETERBOROUGH DOGS

Peterborough has many dogs. Some have splendid pedigrees, others are dogs, and when that is said, everything is said. The Sunday World of yesterday had an article on the dog by one of its special writers.

Mark Twain said that the principal difference between a dog and a man was that if one did a dog a good turn he wouldn't bite him.

There is no animal in history which man calls his friend that occupies the same position as the dog. "Rover come here", and obedient Rover comes and looks into his master's eyes. His canine mind can tell whether's his master's voice is sad or happy, he knows, even if he is a dog. His courage is unquestioned and his faithfulness would put many a man to shame.

Is he in a mansion with a pedigree long and exclusive, in a barn yard, or a cur at the heels of his friend the urchin, still he is a dog, and will not bite the hand that feeds it.

Mark Twain was right, but still the question is unsolved, what makes him bark at the moon, and why does he sit under the bedroom window to do it.

"I am Caesar. I belong to the King," was engraved on the collar of his late Majesty's favorite dog. Bruce Cornford, President of the Portsmouth, England, Canine Society, writes as follows:—

> Millions mourn him, yet none loved him as I,
> Not a wreath, or a flower may I bring.
> Yet, more than many, he loved me—and why?
> I am Caesar, I belong to the King.
>
> He is gone. And life now has no favour,
> No zest. I question that death has no sting.
> Though it has, shall my love ever waver,
> I am Caesar, I belong to the King.
>
> Nine kings walked behind him. What odds to me!
> I walked behind them, one poor broken thing.
> For days that are past and days yet to be,
> [illegible] the King.
>
> The kings, though they sorrowed, themselves prided most,
> And all men their praises shall sing.
> For me there is left this one single boast:
> I am Caesar, I belong to the King.

LAURIER AND ALBERTA

The first Alberta Government has collapsed ignominiously. It begun with a great many things in its favour and it has gone to pieces through sheer inability to go straight. Nor does the reconstruction look good at this distance. Apparently Mr. Cushing was the best influence in the defunct government. He fought against the bad railway bargain which wrecked the government; he resigned rather than support it; he forced the measure of reconstruction which has been adopted. Yet he has not been called to form a government, and he has not been included in the Sifton Administration which has been formed.

Now, it must be remembered that for all of this Sir Wilfrid Laurier is responsible. It was a puppet government dancing to the strings pulled from the East Block at Ottawa. It is a puppet Lieutenant-Governor, for Mr. Bulyea is the creature of Federal Premier, owing to his appointment to his shameful betrayal of Mr. Haultain in 1905. Sir Wilfrid Laurier chose Premier Rutherford, and he has chosen Mr. Sifton. He has prescribed Mr. Cushing.

The new provinces are subject provinces. They are not trusted with their lands; they are told that Ottawa can handle the public domain more wisely than they can. They are kept in leading strings. Their politics are carried on under surveillance. The net result of Liberal rule in the West from the political standpoint, is the creation of an order of inferior Provinces.

The High Schools are becoming higher every year. The $1400 salary that Port Rowan, a village of eight hundred, is having to pay to secure a principal must be near the record. Expect Good Harvest.

Brandon, June 13.—Delegates attending the convention of the Western Canada Boards of Trade, now concluded, and numbering men from all parts of the three prairie provinces, are practically unanimous in saying that everything is in a fair way for a good crop. While May frosts checked the growth, it does not appear to have damaged the plants, and the past few days of the torrid weather, interspersed with showers, have brought spring wheat along at an amazing rate. In underground development the crop is probably further ahead than in an average year. Continuation of the present conditions this month [illegible] way to a successful harvest.

AS TO YOUR HUSBAND

Don't Be a Complaining, Unappreciative Wife.

A TALK OVER OFFICE AFFAIRS

The Out of Doors Sleeping Room. How an Old House Was Brought Up to Date—Precocious Children of the Day.

Dear Elsa—"I'm sick of Henry's shoppy talk," said a young married woman to me recently. And without the least encouragement she continued: "How can I possibly care to hear every night about his uninteresting doings in the office? I want to forget that such a horrid place exists."

Now, do you know I really believe that this is the mental attitude of quite a number of wives, although, Dick and myself being such chums, it's hard to credit divided interests. Well, lots of husbands, I suppose, come home full of the incidents of the day. The doctor has seen a wonderful cure at the hospital. The merchant has made a good deal. The clerk has views about his chief or wishes to lead up to a few remarks upon his own astuteness during business hours. Each man feels the need of a certain amount of appreciation and consolation by the time he reaches home at the end of the day.

And this complaining wife—what is she dying to hear and to say? Certainly she would like to hear that she is looking very sweet and pretty and that the dinner is excellent, that they will take a pleasant little trip one of these spring Saturday afternoons, and doesn't she need a new spring frock?

SITTING THESE TIGHT SKIRT [illegible]S.

She would like to reply suitably to all these things, make some remarks about her neighbors, give her views on sisters-in-law in general and one in particular and offer her opinion perhaps on the suffrage question and modern domestics, all of which pronouncements could come as well from his stenographer or the woman who sits next to him in the car. There is nothing "wifey" about them.

And it is the intimate talk which the husband really values, the ready sympathy for his difficulties and the quick appreciation of his tactics. He wants from his wife that which the world cannot give. And it's a pretty poor story when she complains, as did my visitor, that her husband's affairs bored her.

During a chat over office affairs a wife may by a happy inspiration solve a problem or suggest a way out of the difficulty which has been worrying the husband for days. Trust him to discover, no matter how deftly she does it, whether she changes the conversation because she is sick of the subject or from a genuine desire to turn his thoughts into channels which will rest his mind after a hard day's work.

The Outdoor Sleeping Room.

To change the subject, you remember, dear, how I took up the craze last summer of sleeping on the porch in a Gloucester hammock and how the chickens roosted on my head and crowed me away from my early morning slumbers. The porch being downstairs, the maid wanted to sweep the floor before breakfast! Well, things were so impossible that I gave up sleeping in the open and returned to my own bedroom. When remodeling the house recently our architect suggested to me the possibility of making several outdoor sleeping rooms from an ordinary upstairs apartment, and as we thought the plan a good one we let him go ahead with the work. A mighty good work it has proved. These outdoor sleeping rooms consist of a suit of three apartments. The corner room is furnished in hospital style in a strictly sanitary manner. Large windows are provided, which give an unlimited amount of fresh air. Off this room is the dressing room, which is heated, and I have all my pretty furnishings for the toilet that I had in my other dressing room. The third room is the bath.

But really, dear, even if one did not want to go to the expense of having a suit like ours it is at least possible to treat the bedroom in a sensible and hygienic way.

One mistake our architect pointed out to us to be found in sleeping rooms is the placing of the bed, which often occupies a corner. Study any room where the bed is so placed and note the chance that the air has to reach the person who sleeps in the bed. Particularly is the position of the bed a matter of comfort in summer. But here endeth my lecture upon hygienic household arrangement.

What She Had Heard.

I have just thought of a good story apropos of furnishings that I read recently in the Success Magazine.

A certain professor possesses a full share of the artist's sensitiveness in regard to the inartistic. Some years ago he had for next door neighbors a family among whose charms good taste was lacking.

One morning the professor's little daughter made an unexpected call at the house of this family. "Show me the rug in your room," she demanded, with childish imperiousness.

The lady of the house suppressed her wonder and took her little visitor upstairs. Inside the door the child stood and stared at the rug for a couple of minutes. "H'm," she said and sat herself firmly in the chair, her eyes glued to the rug. Finally she confided to her wondering hostess, "Well, it doesn't make me sick." So much for the modern child.

Ain't the "mummy" skirts funny, or, rather, ain't the women caricatures who wear them? The sketch will give you an idea of how absurd some of the guests at a tea looked in them the other afternoon. Ever your devoted

WOMEN DETECTIVES.

Good Pay and Steady Work For the Right Sort.

Of the lines of work open to women there is perhaps none more interesting than that of detective. The woman detective is well paid for good work, and she is in demand, particularly in a large city.

"What first made its impression upon me in the line of detective work," said [illegible] woman detective in one of the large department stores, "was something I saw ten or twelve years ago. I was riding in one of the street cars in the 6 o'clock rush, when the people were packed, as usual, like sardines. I was at the time thrown on my own resources and had just finished a course in stenography and that very day was going home from an unsuccessful day of job hunting, tired out and discouraged.

"As I stood wedged among people in the center of the car the conductor came along collecting fares. As he squeezed through he was followed by a boy about fourteen, and just as they passed me where the crowd was thickest I saw this boy reach in that conductor's pocket and take out a handful of change. Not only once did he do it, but as the conductor reached the rear door I saw the boy help himself again, all the while the conductor being utterly oblivious.

"Of course it was none of my business, but I soon reached the door. As the boy was making ready to swing off the car a policeman happened to swing on. 'Grab him!' I cried. He was grabbed tight enough, but they held me as a witness, and I had to go to police court the next day. Searching the boy, they had found several dollars in small change, whereas he had only taken 75 cents or so from this conductor.

"As I was leaving court one of the railroad officials said to me, 'Look here, why don't you be a detective?' He offered me a small position, and I let the typewriting job go. Since then I have done work on the street car service in New York, on railroads, for banks and in various fields, and I have been for several years working in the department stores, where perhaps I have had the widest field."

Wall Paper's Effect on Germs.

The physical and physiological effects of wall paper on human beings have aroused the interest of English and French scientists. It is asserted on authority that wall paper of a certain kind is extremely injurious to the health, while paper of certain colors aids in destroying disease germs. Elisabeth Hyatt-Woolf in an English magazine discusses the subject at length. She says some wall paper of an inferior quality is made from pulp obtained from gutters, and it is injurious. She asserts that in a recent coroner's inquest Dr. Charles Smythe of London testified that death of a man was due to arsenical poisoning from a bedroom wall paper. The doctor said that the body of the patient had absorbed the poisoning from the paper. On the other hand, French scientists say that wall paper of certain kinds acts on harmful disease germs by driving them from a sickroom. The tuberculosis germ, Dr. de Bosco and Dr. Lydia Rabinovitch assert, has disappeared under the influence of enameling colors in a bedroom. In a like way such colors are reported to have driven typhoid, cholera and diphtheria from a house. Yellow is regarded by these experts as a tonic. Red is helpful in killing disease germs and also as a cure for the blues.

Must Finish the Game.

In a small country town there once lived a couple of young fellows who had gone into partnership in a barber's business, and in order to pass the time one particularly dull afternoon Tom proposed to Dick that they indulge in a quiet game of "nap." The quiet game went on hour after hour, and when the shades of night had fallen for some time neither of them noticed that a customer had entered. He survey them in silent contempt for some few minutes.

"Sorry if I interrupt," he said, acidly, at last, "but I'm in a hurry. Which of you fervid sportsmen is going to shave me?"

Tom looked over the hand which had just been dealt him. Then, in a voice full of suppressed excitement, he said:

"Just one moment, sir. Wait until we see who owns this shop?"

Hot Cheese Sandwich.

For this dish baker's bread, being more porous, is better than homemade bread. Cut in slices three-eighths of an inch thick and trim off the crusts. On half the slices spread very thin slices of moist common factory cheese or spread with a generous layer of grated cheese. If the cheese be grated any dry cheese may be used. Cover with a second slice of bread. Have ready in a frying pan two or three tablespoonfuls of olive oil or melted butter. In this saute the sandwiches to a golden brown on one side, then turn and cook the other side. Serve for luncheon or supper with a green vegetable salad or stewed fruit.

SICK HEADACHE

Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Canker Sore Mouth Cured by Mi-o-na

Sick headaches are caused by indigestion and a general disturbed condition of the stomach.

Cure the indigestion and the headache, nausea, heartburn, sour stomach, and that "all in" feeling will vanish

Mi-o-na tablets will cure indigestion or any other stomach trouble. They will relieve almost instantly. Wm. Madill has so much faith in them that he will give you your money back if they don't.

Mi-o-na cures by making the stomach strong enough to produce enough gastric juices to digest all the food you want to eat. It promptly puts new life and energy into the overworked and played out walls of the stomach.

Use Mi-o-na for a week, and you can eat what you want any time you want it, and take pleasure in doing it.

Your blood will be richer, redder, purer after taking Mi-o-na, and it only costs 50 cents a large box.

Frank Oke, St. Thomas, Ont., says: "My wife was troubled with indigestion for a number of years. We tried a number of preparations to no effect. Finally she began to use Mi-o-na and has been entirely relieved of all these troubles. I can confidentially recommend Mi-o-na."

PROPOSALS BY PROXY.

The Advantage a Chinaman Has In Case of a Rejection.

Dr. Isaac T. Headland, a resident of Pekin for many years, throws a new light on the new women of China in The Travel Magazine. Taking up the relations between the sexes and especially the Chinese method of getting a wife, the writer repeats a conversation with a young Chinaman who had recently become engaged to a Chinese maiden with whom he had never spoken.

"We students have a very great advantage over the old Chinese method of finding a wife and getting engaged," said my Celestial friend.

"What do you mean?" I inquired.

"Well, you see by the old Chinese method a man can never see his wife until she is brought to his home unless he can bribe the middleman to allow him to stand on the street corner and see her pass by in a cart."

"And what advantage do you have?"

"We see the girls in church," he answered. "They also can see us. We have sisters in the girls' school, they have brothers in the college, and when we go home during vacation we can learn all about each other."

"This is an advantage."

"In my judgment," he continued, "we have a better method than even you foreigners have."

"How is that?"

"Well, you see," he continued, "after we have selected the lady we want we can have a middleman go and ask her for us, while you have to go and ask the lady yourself."

"But," I objected, "we can get so much better acquainted by our method."

"Yes, that's true," he admitted, "but doesn't it make you awfully angry if you ask a girl to marry you and she refuses?"

It was necessary to admit that there were advantages in the middleman method which had never occurred to me, and, while I was not ready to acknowledge that his new found method was better than mine, I could still see that the force which brought it about was bringing woman out of her seclusion and placing her on a level with her brother and her future husband.

FINISHED MAN OF THE WORLD.

Cardinal Merry del Val Possesses the Charm of Perfect Manners.

If not in diplomacy, at any rate in learning, manners and physical appearance Cardinal Merry del Val is an ideal prelate, writes Walter Littlefield. He works harder than anybody in the Vatican and has a precise, rapid manner in going through an immense amount of business. Every morning he has a half hour's conference with the Pope; every evening he receives all visitors who believe they have information which may be of value to the Pope or papacy. Merry del Val listens, makes notes, and politely dismisses them. Twice a week, Tuesday and Friday, he receives the ambassadors of the Catholic powers. The following description of his person, given by the Vicomte de Colleville, is suggestive:

"His figure is tall, slight, and graceful. He has a large forehead, a mouth with an amiable smile, and large, black eyes, which give to his expression something of sweetness and sincerity. From all his person there emanates a perfume of exquisite distinction—the charm and seduction of perfect manners. The sound of his voice is harmonious and his conversation brilliant and captivating. In a word, he is a finished man of the world."

Although the cardinal secretary of state has an apartment situated in the oldest and most beautiful part of the Vatican, neither his work nor his pleasures are confined to these precincts. At No. 11, in the Via della Valtellina, outside the Portese Gate, there is a rose-colored villa with high walls and spacious vineyards. It formerly belonged to the nuns of the Sacred Heart; it is now the playground of Merry del Val. There he entertains his social friends. They play bowls, sup in the open, or swing. Yes, the papal secretary of state actually has a swing at his villa and he is very fond of it.

He is also fond of automobiling, and often motors from his villeggiatura to Castle Gandolfo, or to Subiaco, Vicarello, or to the shores of Lake Bracciona. He is an expert swimmer, and by regular exercise keeps himself in the best physical condition.

The World's Largest Crab.

The gigantic Japanese crab, measuring twelve feet, is probably the largest crustacean in the world. It is a type of the spider crab, which inhabits the waters of the group of islands forming the empire of Japan. The body portion is the size of a half bushel measure, while its two great arms, or "feelers," could easily encircle the figure of a man. Its eight arms, or legs, resemble huge bamboo poles and are extremely elastic, and if strung into one line they would reach to the top of a four storey apartment building. One of the extraordinary peculiarities of this crab is the faculty of assuming a disguise by affixing pieces of seaweed and sponges to the body.

Guarding the Cash.

The gypsies in some parts of Europe have a curious way of looking after the honesty of their money collector. The person intrusted with the mission of taking the hat around among the crowd has a living fly put into his left hand, while he holds the hat with his right. When he returns with the funds he must bring the fly back alive as a sign that he has not taken any money from the common property, but if the fly be wanting or even dead he does not get even his share of the money.

Pleasure of Wisdom.

"Your boy likes to go to school better than he used to," said the relative.

"Yes," answered Mr. Bliggins. "He's getting old enough to enjoy learning a lot of things so that he can come home and dazzle me with his superior knowledge."

General Sir William Francis Butler, author of "The Great Lone Land," is dead in London.

SHEPHERDS OF PALESTINE.

A Life Which Is Almost Ideal In Its Peace and Quiet.

The pastoral life of the Palestine peasant has always been a subject of interest and a pleasant study. The shepherd is seen at his best in the spring when he has the care of both sheep and lambs and when all his thoughts are centered on his seemingly indolent occupation.

Work for the shepherd begins in earnest with the lambing season, which commences early in January and continues for two or three months; during that time it is no unusual sight to see the shepherd with several newly born lambs or kids stored away in the capacious folds of his bosom and the mothers in close attendance.

When heavy storms of snow or rain come on the shelter of some cave has to be sought and a careful watch against the attacks of wild animals kept. This watchfulness is not relaxed on a fine day, and the long hours on the hillsides or plains are whiled away in making music on the reed flute, of which every shepherd is the maker and player.

The music is an assurance to the sheep that the shepherd is on the alert; let the music cease for any length of time and the flock will stop grazing and look around for their caretaker and leader. At night the sheep are folded around the village or camp to which they belong. The fold is a large enclosure, the wall of which is made up of good sized stones piled one on another. There is only one entrance, which is narrow, for the sheep as they enter have to "pass under the rod" so that the owner may count them and see that none are missing.

To find good pasture and a quiet resting place is the daily duty of the shepherd, and in the long summer days the flock rests during the heat by some stream or under the shadow of a great rock. Each sheep has its name, to which it will respond on being called by its keeper. In southern Palestine the flocks are tended by girls and women, but in other parts by youths and men.

WARNING

Since its introduction into Canada the sales of Parisian Sage have been phenomenal. This success has led to many imitations similar in name. Look for them; they are not the genuine. See that the girl with the Auburn hair is on every package. You can always get the genuine at Wm. Madill's drug store.

Parisian Sage is the quickest acting and most efficient hair tonic in the world.

It is made to conform to Dr. Sangerbond's (of Paris) proven theory that dandruff, falling hair, baldness and scalp itch are caused by germs.

Parisian Sage kills these dandruff germs and removes all trace of dandruff in two weeks, or money back; it stops falling hair and itching scalp and prevents baldness.

And remember that baldness is caused by dandruff germs, those little hard working, persistent devils that day and night do nothing but dig into the roots of the hair and destroy its vitality.

Parisian Sage is a daintily perfumed hair dressing, not sticky or greasy, and any woman who desires luxuriant and bewitching hair can get it in two weeks by using it. 50 cents a large bottle.

Twenty-two graduate nurses of Victoria hospital, London, received their diplomas.

A PLEASURE FLEET OF FORTY WATER RUNABOUTS ON THE OTONABEE THIS SUMMER

Number of Launches at Rye's Boathouse Increased From Twenty-Eight of Last Season—Canoes Added to Livery—The "Put Puts" and Their Owners

According to the official registration at Rye's boathouse, the pleasure fleet of the Otonabee will be augumented by twelve new "put puts" this year increasing the total from twenty-eight to forty.

A Review reporter paid a visit to the boathouse and the line of launches waiting for the sunny days and warm evenings, which the weather is keeping up his sleeve after hours this season, presented quite an imposing appearance. New docks have been built to accommodate the extra boats and they are comfortably and conveniently stalled.

In anticipation of an increased demand for canoes Mr. Rye has added twelve more to his livery, bringing the total to forty-eight. Besides this there are something over seventy private ones in the boathouse.

The string of gasolines with their owners is:

A VERY FORCIBLE ADDRESS ON HOME MISSION WORK

Rev. C. J. Cameron, the secretary of the Home Mission Society of the Baptist denomination, delivered a most interesting and instructive address in the Murray Street church yesterday morning. His treatment of the immigration question was unique. "It is a remarkable fact," said Mr. Cameron, "that during the last year Ontario received by far a greater majority of the incoming immigrants than any other province. The work among the non-English-speaking citizens of Toronto is being pursued by the Baptist people with great earnestness and satisfaction. The Rev. Joseph Kolessnikoff, a Greek minister, has been successful in reaching thousands among whom many have professed conversion, and are becoming worthy citizens of Ontario's metropolis. In the far west the Baptist denomination had a larger work among non-English-speaking people than that of any other denomination.

New Ontario is opening up most rapidly, and churches are being planted in this interesting region, and these become self-supporting. The liberality of the people in these sparsely settled districts is a manifestation of the fact that they really want what the gospel of Jesus Christ furnishes. The report of the treasurer of the Home Mission Board shows an increase of about fifty per cent. over that of two years ago.

Mr. Cameron spoke at the Park St. Baptist church in the evening.

RADCLIFFE WILL NOT ACT AT THE HENDERSON EXECUTION

Radcliffe, the Government hangman, who has sped so many murderers in Canada to their death, will not officiate at the Henderson hanging.

It is understood that the reason of Radcliffe being relieved of his position is because he is not as strictly inclined to sobriety as the Government would like to have him.

Inquiries were made at the sheriff's office with a view to finding out who the new executioner was, but no information was forthcoming, for reasons best known to this department.

He will act at the hanging of Walter Ross at North Bay on June 21st, coming from that town to Peterborough for Henderson's execution on June 23rd.

A MAN'S MIND NEEDS FOOD SERMON TO YOUNG MEN

"The Making of a Man," was the title of a sermon which Rev. Robert Pogue preached to young men last night in St. Paul's church. He based his remarks on the text, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength." He said in part:—

"I take this text, not for the subject which seems to lie on the surface of it, but for the suggestive classification which it gives of the faculties and powers of a man's nature. We have four things here, which, taken together, constitute a perfect man. They give us a picture of manhood four-square. These four gifts, when properly nurtured and disciplined, and harmoniously developed, produce a perfect man. To the right nurture and development of these, every young man must apply himself.

"I. The heart must be nurtured and disciplined. The heart stands for love. Love is the root of all life. God loved man into being. Love is the very centre of experience. The heart needs the love of friendship. First among a young man's friends should be a true, noble woman, either as sweetheart or wife. An old bachelor cannot be a perfect man. If a wife is the better half—better than half—then there cannot be a half remaining. Many of the great men of the world have attributed much of their success in life to the inaudible, and often in[illegible] of their wives. 'What is the secret of your life?' asked Mrs. Browning of Charles Kingsley, 'that I may make mine beautiful, too.' He replied, 'I had a friend.' Friends are a constant challenge to a man to be at his best. Then the heart needs the love of God. Love only reaches its perfection in God.

"II. The soul also needs nurture and discipline for its perfection. The soul is the immaterial part of man. It is that which differentiates him from the brute creation. The soul needs to be fed on hope. Kill in a man the passion for progress, the vision of what, through the grace of God, it is possible for him to become, and you dwarf and stunt his manhood. The soul also needs faith for its development. Faith makes the unseen forces of God real and present. The man who absents himself from the worship of the sanctuary is drying up by innutrition the powers of his being, and he is so much less a man by so doing.

"III. Man's mind also needs food. Man alone, of all the creatures God has made, can say, 'I feel, I aspire, I think, I know.' Man, first and foremost, is a thinking machine, rather than a jumping machine, or a running machine. Athletics are not the end of life. All exercise should feed our vitality, not take away from it. The cow is not supposed to expend her energy in rolling, kicking and jumping, but in giving milk. The mind needs rest, exercise and food. Feed it by a study of nature. Take time to read. Read only the great books. Life is too short to waste its golden moments on books that neither inform nor inspire. The explanation of the keenness of the Scottish race is generations of oatmeal and the Shorter Catechism.

"IV. Lastly, the body needs nurture and discipline. A man is either a fool or his own doctor at thirty. Any young man is a fool who takes anything in the form of food or drink or smoke that either dulls the radiance of his brain or weakens his power of endurance in the battle of life. The body needs work. Young men do not be afraid of work. Eight hours a day is not enough for a man to work for his highest development and usefulness. The men who are carrying humanity's burdens to-day work sixteen hours. Take time to rest. Do not burn the candle of life at both ends. Two men speaking of another whom they both knew, said: 'He has a fat body but a thin soul.' Could anything be more repulsive than that? These four powers of your nature have been given you that you might bring them to perfection, and that at last you might be able to stand before your Judge, with neither shame nor confusion of face, and say that you have not wasted your birthright."

PAPERS MUSN'T PRINT CUTS OF HENDERSON'S EXECUTION

There will be no photographs of Henderson's hanging on June 23rd.

A representative of the Times, Examiner and Review will be able to get a pass to the execution, but only one reporter from each paper will be allowed to witness the hanging.

The papers are not expected to write highly colored accounts of the execution, but to simply state the facts in connection with the gruesome event.

Rule 116, from the rules and regulations governing common gaols in the province reads as follows:

"A representative of each newspaper published in the county or city in which the execution takes place may be permitted to be present at such execution upon receiving the written consent of the sheriff or the inspector, but no kadaks or other photographic instruments shall be allowed to be brought into the gaol premises by such representatives or other witness."

THREATENED TO KILL

But It Was Only the Threat of a Drunken Man—Case Was Dismissed

A Louis street citizen faced the Magistrate this morning on a charge of having been drunk and disorderly in a public place, but it turned out that the defendant had kicked up in his own home. His Worship gave him some good advice and dismissed the case.

The defendant's wife complained that her husband came home drunk on Saturday and she became frightened. He threatened to kill her and she ran out of the house. Later when she wished to return, he would not let her in.

The Magistrate told the complainant, that in case her husband caused any more trouble, to inform on him and he would be bound over to keep the peace.

HERALD BUILDING IS ON FIRE AND MANY PERSONS ENTOMBED

Forty to Fifty Said to be Killed in Montreal Blaze---Water Tower Collapsed, Breaking Gas Pipes---Bodies of Several Girls Taken Out of Ruins.

Special to the Review.

Montreal, June 13.—The Herald building, Victoria Square, is on fire and many persons are entombed. The fire was caused by the watertower above the roof collapsing and going through to the basement and breaking the gas pipes connected with the machinery. Various estimates are given of the dead, some running as high as forty. Many persons are buried under the debris and probably will be burned to death if they are not erready dead.

The entire city fire brigade is working on the fire which makes a fierce blaze. The collapsed watertower was constructed four years ago when the building was remodelled. It is said the principal loss of life is in the bindery and job printing departments, which were nearest the path of the collapsed tower. The editorial and business offices in the front part of the building escaped, being 100 feet removed from beneath the tower.

William Taylor, foreman of the composing toom, who escaped with severe injuries believes there must have been fifty killed. The collapse of the watertower, he says, practically cut the building in two. The fire started up in all directions immediately after. The fire seems to be under control now but the whole plant is a wreck. The bodies of several girls employed in the bindery have been taken out of the ruins. It is said the collapsed watertower was built on the roof without adequate support beneath and the officials were warned at the time it was erected it was not safe.

It is impossible as yet to gain intelligible returns of the dead and injured. This is the fifth time the Herald has been burned out in 25 years, one being when the building was situated immediately across the street from the present site.

IT WAS THE BIGGEST EXCURSION THAT EVER WENT OUT OF THE CITY OF PETERBORO

Drizzlers, Sprinklets and Pourlets on the C. G. E. Benefit Society's Outing to Cobourg—Mr. J. Pluv Had the Valves Working in Good Order as 1200 can Vouch for

As my father use dto say,
Never dope out a good time for tomorrow.
It may rain. W. A. B.

J. Pluv. put a raw one over on us Saturday, and while we put up a tall fight and were always in the game, we were up against a losing proposition, and while Cobourg may look good on a sunny day, we would not care to lay bare our innermost thoughts as to an opinion of how the summer resort hamlet appeared to us on that never-to-be-forgotten date, Saturday, June 11, 1910.

We have been to many places, have even taken that awful chance and landed in Lindsay, but this trip had us all wilted. We didn't perspire from excitement, save at one time when an uptown trolley ran into a West 23rd street car. Then the natives of Sam Clarkeville gave us the laugh and to d us to go home and get a decent burial. We took it, too, despite our number. We were 1,200 strong.

There was nothing sleepy about the way we woke up Port Hope in passing through the valley of deadones, and once safely past and steaming along in full view of the rapidly rising riverlet—it had been drizzling—our spirits began on the ascend.

Our arrival resembled that of Lemon Bros.' circus, and, after leaving our shelter—it was now raining—the entertainment commenced. The cabbies put on Ben Hur stunts in an endeavor to gather our nickles, and one trip of a "grub-house" 'bus has the flight of the Deadwood stage beaten to a frazzle.

This startled us a little, but it was only momentary. We had cause to calm down—it began to pour.

We might say in passing, that the Lakeshore villagers were very kind in one respect. We cornered all the available space on the main hike, and never once did we hear "move on," or "shake your peddies."

Some of us put on a front like a bargain hunter and made the counter-hoppers—mostly the fair ones—work overtime, and then they didn't have what we wanted. We filed into beef trusts, bought out several peanut concerns, and relieved some of the fruit houses of most of their rhubarb, unions, etc.

Some who didn't have the necessary amount of ballast, blocked up doorways, played the dummy act, and others who couldn't see the joke went to the bad altogether. Any medicine company could have secured all kinds of examples to be used as cases of "Before Using" our celebrated nerve restorer, etc.

Old man Sol did smile on us a couple of times, and our estimation of the locality jumped about 99 per cent., then fell—more rain.

Bro. Gliddon and his trained troupe stormed the "Theatre Cobourg," and did his best to dispel the gloom, and make us feel happy and while he succeeded, with some others, needed a different tonic, and acted accordingly.

About this time things began to get moist—our paraphenalia included. Minnie's outfit—formerly tight-fitting—became tighter, and Lizzie's creation in white was transformed to a polka dot—the side dots being good, clean mud.

The ball game was not put on. It was feared that the big attractions elsewhere would pull down the receipts. The players worked out on an indoor fifteen ball. The feed joints opened up after we had been visitors for about two hours, and we shelled out to the extent of half a buck per platter, with no discount for a second addition. This also added to our sufferings.

After lunch the musical troupe again took the boards, and as an inducement to get some of us down by the sad sea waves, the footballers' outfit adjourned to the village green, but it was of no avail—more rain.

The refreshment booths closed, and accommodation on the thoroughfare became inadequate—for some. Next the curfew told us it was 7 p.m.

Two hours more—more rain.

Another hour passed by, slowly. Someone mentioned train and home, and then all hands beat it for the station—but it was raining there. We didn't care. We were about to shake the mud of Cobourg. The usual fare-said—not regretfully——and we embarked for the second time.

Three hours more and we were all in our little beds, dreaming of the great time which we didn't have. C.

C.P.R. CONDUCTOR SMITH WAS INJURED AT SMITH FALLS

Special to the Review.

Havelock, June 13.—Mr. B. Smith, a C.P.R. conductor, of the town, while on duty at Smith Falls to-day was struck by the bumper of an engine and very seriously injured.

He left Havelock yesterday on train No. 52 and was engaged in checking up his train for the return trip when the unfortunate accident occurred.

While at his work of checking he stepped back on to the next track and was struck by the engine. The buffet beam caught him in the back, throwing him very forcibly.

He was picked up in an unconscious condition and taken to the Smith Fall's Hospital, where he was found to be suffering from a broken nose, a bad cut in the head and severe bruises in the back where the engine struck him.

THE FISHING SEASON

Prevaricating days are almost here again, and we with others in our class, will hand out fibs, about the fishing stunts we got away with on our trip, when 'twas our luck, we didn't get two nibs. The sixteenth date in this fair month of brides will find us making sport of finny tribes. Perhaps our luck will be as other years, when we along with other luckless ones, found joy in beers. We'll dream about big catches as before and add on several inches as of yore. It's all the same, we'll say, they won't get wise. They'll swallow it with wide and startling eyes. We'll tell them of the big eight pounder bass and of the four-foot 'lunge we missed—alas, of how we caught and threw them in again, 'Twas too much trouble for such expert men. We'll tell them that we know of all the streams, where good dame fortune on us only beams. We've told the same old tales as in the past, We'll swear to them as long as they will last. The little fish have always smiled serene, they always knew that we were raw and green, but what's the dif, the fishing game would die, if t'wasn't for the long proverbial lie.

3RD DRAGOONS LEFT FOR THEIR ANNUAL CAMP AT PETAWAWA ON C.P.R. SPECIAL TO-DAY

The old cattle sheds on the C.P.R., just west of Stewart street, were the scene of much activity and color this morning, when squadron "A" of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons were making preparations for their annual trip to the Petawawa camp.

Sixty men and non-coms and three foficers, Major Johnston and Lieut. Cleghorn and Anderson left on the special.

The Chaplain, Major Langfeldt, found it impossible to go owing to the fact that he will have to attend the Synod meeting in Toronto to-morrow.

The train was made up of two coaches, a baggage car and four palace cars for the horses.

"B" Squadron, Millbrook, with Capt. Medd in charge, and "A" Squadron, Cobourg, under Major McLaughlin also accompanied the Peterborough contingent. "D" Squadron, Picton, under Major McCullouch, will entrain at Central Ontario Junction.

Lieut.-Col. Syer is the officer in command of the regiment. Lieut. Edmison is the adjutant, Capt. Walker Douglas is the medical officer, and Capt. Poole the veterinary surgeon.

A BATTLE OF WORDS OVER A TEN CENT PIECE

There was lots of excitement in the south end last Friday about the noon hour. Two women met.

They commenced to talk, and, as is generally the case talked too much. Mrs. P. —— was handed several love taps on her face. She was also called several pet names—so she said at the police court this morning.

Mrs. S —— had some different to say. Although admitting connecting with the smiling organs of Mrs. P. —— she said that she had cause to on account of the pedigree Mrs. P.—— had given her.

The battle commenced when Mrs. S's —— little girl went home and told mama that Mrs. P's. —— youngster had stolen ten cents from her, when the actual proceeding was that the silver piece had been dropped on the sidewalk and rolled into the grass and out of sight.

Mrs. P. —— became very indignant that her girl should be charged with stealing so small a sum and went over to investigate.

Then the bugles sounded and the war was on, but in a few minutes the white flag went up and hostilities were indefinitely suspended.

The breeze blew up again however, shortly afterwards, and Mrs. —— fell wounded. The engagement was over.

This morning both camps were represented and agreed to call the encounter a draw.

WHAT TIME DOES THE CLOCK STOP?

The Question of the Hour is the One That is of Vital Importance to Guessers

The weekly distribution of cash to those who estimate the nearest to the time at which the clock stops in Barrie's window was awarded at three o'clock Saturday to Clayton Chowen, 420 Stewart street, whose card read 2 o'clock. He received $5 cash and the next nearest card was Mr. H. Stock's, 283 Sherbrooke street, which read 2h. 0m. 46c., he received $1 cash. The clock stopped at 1h. 58m. 50s.

What time will the clock stop? You have a chance of estimating for this week and for the next ten weeks. Estimates good for every week.

WHAT TIME WILL THE CLOCK START?

The post office clock is dead as a dumb watch.

Both hands are on strike, and the gong refuses to do a tap.

The works are shut down and the time telling industry is paralyzed as a result.

If a laborer hears the foreman's call of time in the morning he is liable to object on the grounds that another half hour has to go by before he will be required to commence work.

If a man goes into a lawyer's office he may think when he comes out that he has been in consultation with the man of law for twelve hours, and may die from heart failure when he anticipates the bill.

And outside of all that, we want to know what time it it.

Washington, June 13.—A cablegram from Manila was received Saturday by Representative Martin of Colorado, stating that a large mass meeting was held there Saturday, protesting against the sale of friars' lands in the Philippines by the Government to the sugar trust.

Negro Brute Killed by Posse.

Pensecola, Fla., June 13.—Robert Matthews, a negro, was shot and killed by a posse in a swamp near Beulan, sixteen miles east of this city, following an attempt to assault a 12-year-old daughter of G. E. Snowden.

Encouraging.

"Doctor, you've been coming here a long time, and my husband is still helpless in bed. Do you think he'll ever sit up again?"

"Sure! He'll sit up when he sees my bill."—Lippincott's.

Hung Herself.

Brockville, June 13.—A patient at the Eastern Hospital for the Insane, named Mrs. Hawley of Iroquois, aged 54 years, died by her own hand yesterday morning. She arose about 3 o'clock to go to the bathroom, taking with her a strip of blanket, which she tied around her neck, fastening the other end to a bar some distance from the floor. Stepping from the closet her feet barely touched the floor, and in this position she strangled to death.

Shot the Sheriff.

Monroe Bridge, Mass., June 13.—While trying to arrest Silas Phelps on an assault charge early yesterday, Sheriff Edward F. Haskins of Chalmont was shot and killed. An armed posse of several hundred officials and citizens has searched the woods all day for Phelps, who is armed with a double-barrelled shotgun.

AN AGE OF LUXURY.

Dress and Novelties In Food Now Objects of Greatest Importance.

Of late years, writes Lady Violet Greville, in an English publication, dress has acquired extraordinary importance. People who dressed as a necessity of their station now make dress an aim in itself. A dandy might have possessed a wardrobe full of coats, or, like the late Panmure Gordon, cherished an indulgence in 100 pairs of boots, but these were the exception, and were regarded as eccentrics. The amount of suits required by the average man now cannot be counted on the fingers. There are lounge suits and dress suits, fur coats and frock coats, dinner jackets and smoking suits, motor, golf, shooting and fishing costumes, each of which requires waistcoats, stockings and boots to match. With a woman it is even worse. Boxes enough to load a cab are required for each week-end visit, and the same dress cannot be worn twice. Our grandmothers bought lace and furs when they were married to last them their life, but the constant changes of fashion necessitate endless expenditure. Every bride in society has her diamond tiara and her sables, every shop girl wears her fur boa and carries her muff. Each year furs grow dearer, and each year women spend more on these accessories to dress. The average expenditure of a well-dressed woman is about three times that of her mother, who probably could have afforded more.

Luxury in food, too, increases. Though we may not indulge in such long and heavy dinners as our ancestors, we eat more delicately, more expensively of forced strawberries, plover's eggs, early asparagus or petitis poussins, etc., and require better cooks. Restaurants and hotels vie with each other in introducing novelties and out-of-season luxuries, and the standard of the gourmet grows higher every day. The kind of meal that once satisfied a fastidious man about town, the plain dinner that was so popular with the guests of Charlie Paris, the wine merchant, or Sir Henry Thompson, the surgeon, a bit of codfish, a beefsteak and onions, toasted cheese and a woodcock, would be considered very poor fare now to put before one's guests, who do not want to taste wine, or enjoy the flavor of claret, but to drink champagne all through dinner, and smoke cigarettes directly after.

Dirty Patagonia.

"Patagonians are not giants, as some have supposed and as the geographies teach," said a man who has traveled. "They are large in comparison with the other South American natives, that is all. Everything is relative, you know. But they are very fat. That is why they can stand the cold so well. I have seen Patagonian men and boys running around unclad while I was wrapped in warm garments, with the snow falling upon them in quantities and the wind blowing bitterly. They are kept warm by their fat and dirt. Patagonia is one of the dirtiest places imaginable. Don't go there if you hate dirt. That is my advice to all who contemplate a journey to the jumping off place of South America."

Political Burglaries.

It was through a stolen document openly seized by the British ambassador in Berlin that the British Government first learned of the recognition of the independence of America by France. The British Minister was Hugh Elliot, and he had the desk of the French Minister forced open to obtain the copy of the treaty he wanted. In 1855 a sensation was created by the discovery of a plan by which secret documents were systematically abstracted from the Russian embassy in Berlin, being copied at night in the interests of another nation and replaced in the drawer at the embassy in the morning. The burglaries had been taking place for two years before they were discovered.

Not Much Work.

"Some folks think that people in the show business have an easy time of it," said a minstrel star, "and that reminds me of what an old farmer in a little town said one day as he saw me carrying the bass drum in the minstrel parade. We had walked nearly five miles in the hot sun, and I was about ready to drop. That big drum was heavy. When we reached our car after the parade my feet were sore, my back ached, I was perspiring all over my face and was completely tired out. As I almost staggered past the old farmer he looked at me contemptuously.

"'Huh,' he said, 'these actors 'll do anything to get out of workin'.'"

A Slang Phrase.

"Bull con," a slang phrase which means to flatter, to praise with ulterior motives, had its origin in the west years ago. When the gold brick game was started the bunko men sprang a fine, high-sounding combination of words upon the simple farmers. They called it an investment in "bullion consolidated." Years after the words were cut down to "bull con" and came to mean any graft that depended upon the gift of gab. Still later it was used to describe the method of [illegible].

Lord Morley as a Waltzer.

Like Lord Morley, Sir Charles is a scholar as well as a politician. Lady Dilke once stated that her first waltz was danced with Lord Morley. "And a very good waltzer he was too," she said. In his hours of relaxation Sir Charles is devoted to rowing and the rapier, while the late Lady Dilke, who was well known as an art critic as well as social reformer, made the collecting of rare books her chief hobby.

The Disappointed Prodigal.

Slowly, with bowed head and faltering step, the prodigal son walked up the garden path.

His father, an old man, wrinkled and white-bearded, stood at the door.

"Father, father," cried the P. S., "I've come home to die!"

"Just my luck!" groaned the old man. "I let your insurance policy lapse last month!"

A PAIR OF BOOTS.

They Figured In an Amusing Case of Mistaken Identity.

It may be doubted if there ever occurred a more amusing instance of mistaken identity than that afforded by Theodore Hook, the English humorist of his time, and it all came about through a pair of boots. Hook was traveling along the south coast of England and arrived in the course of his journey at Dover.

Alighting at the Ship hotel he changed his boots, ordered a slight dinner and went out for a stroll through the town. Returning at the appointed time, he was surprised to find the whole establishment in confusion. A crowd had collected outside the door. The master of the house was standing at the foot of the stairs with two candles in his hands, and on Theodore's entrance he walked backward before him and conducted him into the principal saloon, where all the waiters were standing and a magnificent repast had been provided. The wit was much amused at the dignity to which he had been promoted, but, being an easy going fellow, made no scruples and, sitting down, did full justice to what was set before him. Next day he signified his intention of departing and ordered a coach, when, to his astonishment, a carriage and four drove up to convey him to his destination. He inquired with some apprehension what he was to pay for all this grandeur and was no less astonished than gratified on receiving the answer, "Nothing whatever, your royal highness." He was never more thoroughly mystified, but the next night, on taking off his boots, which he had bought ready made just before he went to Dover, he found "H. S. H. the Prince of Orange" written inside them. They had been originally made for the prince, who was then in England suing for the hand of Princess Charlotte, and notice had been given that all his expenses while in the country should be set down to the charge of the government.—Minneapolis News.

RUSSIAN AUDACITY.

The Coup That Made Persia a Financial Vassal of the Bear.

In 1892 the Imperial Bank of Persia, a British institution, lent the Persian government $2,500,000 on the security of the customs receipts of the gulf ports. In 1895 Persia, finding herself again hard up, desired to borrow $6,000,000 more from the same source and on the same ample security. But before the British bankers would grant the additional loan they must needs quibble and procrastinate and insist on still further conditions. Finally, however, $6,250,000 of Persian bonds were underwritten in London. Russia, hearing of the affair at the eleventh hour and fifty-ninth minute, promptly offered Persia a much larger loan on much better terms, and she did no haggling either. Persia, finding herself in the embarrassing position of having two parties suing for her financial hand at the same time and not daring to offend either of them, thought to escape from the predicament by not borrowing at all.

But so persistently and skillfully did Russia urge her suit that in 1900 Persia timidly yielded to the ardent wooing and acknowledged her submission by accepting from Russia a loan of $11,875,000 for seventy-five years, at the same time agreeing that all previous loans should be paid off at once and no more incurred until this one was discharged without the permission of the Russian Banque Desprets de Perse. Within less than a month, therefore, 5,000,000 rubles ($2,500,000) were remitted to London to pay off the British loan of 1892, thereby freeing Persia from any British financial control. There has been no more audacious and successful stroke of diplomacy in modern times, for by it Persia became a financial vassal of the bear.—Everybody's Magazine.

Fate of the Great Auk.

The great auk, a northern diving bird, used to exist in the arctic regions also. Now, this splendid bird was seriously handicapped by the fact that it laid only one egg in a season and so could not afford to be slaughtered at all. But it was hunted and shot without discrimination. A few surviving hundreds took refuge on a desolate rock far out to sea, but one fatal day a vessel contrived to land on this rock, and the crew shot nearly the entire rookery. Finally nature herself rose up. There was a cataclysm, the rock sank into the sea, and that was the last of the great auk.

The Gobelin Factory.

The gobelin factory was founded in 1515 by Francis I., who scoured Europe for the artists and the makers of beautiful things who could bring luster to the capital of France. Under his auspices came Leonardo da Vinci, and he it was who laid the foundations for the collections of statuary and paintings that have made Paris famous. The gobelin tapestry factory was among the least of his undertakings.

Naming the Baby.

"Have you named the baby?" asked the admiring neighbor.

"Not yet," said the proud young mother. "We're going to christen him Sunday."

"Dear me! What an odd name! I'd almost as soon call him after Robinson Crusoe's man Friday and be done with it."—Chicago Tribune.

BY A. T. ASHMORE.

IT is comparatively an easy matter when the weather is cold and dreary to be self-denying as far as new gowns are concerned, and to be philosophically content with last year's fashions, but let the warm days of late spring and summer weather once begin and the woman who can be happy and cheerful with her old clothes is a rara avis, and is certainly entitled to the unstinted admiration of her fellow beings.

To be prepared in advance for all the spring and summer entertainments is a happy fate that befalls few individuals. For the most enthusiastic lover of clothes, as well as the most practical of managers, rebels against the amount of time essential in getting together a summer outfit that is up to date in every detail, not to speak of the money question. For the first spring days—spring according to the calendar if not the reigning temperature—the smart street costume is absolutely necessary to comfort. Then there must be the smart gown suitable for the autumn reception or bridge, and these two, with an attractive theatre gown, are sufficient to get through the two or three weeks before the weather has settled down into a much higher record of temperature, especially if each and every one of these gowns is perfect—and there are two or three others of the winter wardrobe still in fairly good order.

To be quite comfortable there must be included in the spring outfit more than one new street gown, for the tailor costume that is heavy and warm enough for the cool days of spring is quite out of the question in the warmer days, which, however, are still cool enough to call for a gown of more weight.

But in these days of resource there are so many different weights of cloth that the difficulty can soon be solved. There must be provided the gowns for warm weather, the coat and skirt of lightest wool, pongee, silk, linen and, for more formal occasions, crêpe de Chine and satin. These, be it remembered, have always the coat to match, even when the gown is in one piece instead of skirt and waist.

Foulard and Voile de Soie.

This is to be a season of smart thin gowns, foulard and voile de soie, which has been so often described and alluded to that it would seem as though its very popularity would write an early dismissal from the ranks of fashionable materials. Foulard, too, has been sold in such quantities for several weeks as to make the more conservative minded wonder if it can possibly continue to be desirable, but it is material that possesses rare advantages. It is delightfully cool and light in weight, there are many qualities that cannot be injured by rain, it sheds the dust, lends itself to the draped effects, and if made in a tight fitting waist is a becoming material in so far that it clings to the figure. One of the familiar styles of the season is to combine it with another fabric, liberty satin, voile de soie or serge, and also to make up figured foulard with the plain colors of the other material. This all tends to a variety of effect that is attractive and permits of a bit of originality, so that the danger that always exists when a fashion is both practical and popular of having every woman dressed alike is obviated.

There is an unusually large variety in color and design in the foulards this season. The white ground with white figure and the dark ground with white figure are alike to be found in what seems like an endless choice. The always popular polka dot is omnipresent and in a most extraordinary range of sizes and designs, rings of white, lace designs, stripes and checks, until to choose among so many requires cool judgment. The bordered foulards are exceptionally attractive this year, and the border can be so satisfactorily dealt with that trimmings are unnecessary. Black and white, color and white, all with borders, are displayed with an edge of darker or plain black as a finish. There are most artistic and becoming shadings of gray in the bordered foulards, as well as the blue and white and black and white, that always appear when foulards are in favor, and this year all the many shades of red are much in evidence.

Pongee, rajah and tussor are heavier in weight and are almost invariably made with coat to match. Silk linen is another material on the same order and is immensely popular this season. It is to be found in all colors and all shades of color, and, while not classed with wash goods, can, it is claimed, be washed as well as cleaned. There are few who try the experiment of washing the silk linen costumes, for, as a rule, they are made up in such more or less elaborate fashion that cleaning seems the more natural process. There are many new models for the coat and skirt costumes, but the simpler designs are the smartest, and when there is braiding, just the band around the skirt and on the collar, revers and cuffs of the jacket are sufficient to give the smart effect. Pongee costumes are on the same order, and in fact there is little difference in the models for any of the coat and skirt costumes of the summer fabrics; there are long coats and short jackets, but the skirts are all short, as those costumes are intended for street wear. Foulard, the figured foulard, combined with plain pongee or rajah, is an attractive fashion, the foulard used in the same way as when combined with serge in facings and linings and sometimes in the separate waist. Much depends in these combined materials on the colors, and it is by no means an easy task to match the shades, so that often it is better to choose some one color that is not so extremely fashionable that it can only be found in one material and to match it involves hours of weary search.

Shepherd plaid effects, as are known the black and white check effects, and, indeed, all the checks of color and white, are as popular as ever, despite the fact that they are turned out by the thousands. The shepherd plaid street costumes in wool, serge, silk linen and silk are still being made at the more expensive establishments. But there is a most wonderful difference between the ordinary cheap ones and the expensive. Of late there have been seen many trimmed with bands of plain material. This style is new and is often attractive, but cannot be generally recommended, for the plain band cuts the figure so unbecomingly, and there again comes the trouble of the exact matching. Bands of white are the latest color scheme, and it must be admitted they look smart and novel in linen or pongee.

Gathered and side pleated skirts are now to be seen in the foulard and pongee gowns, with wide and narrow side pleatings, and black and white striped silk skirts, accordion pleated, are most cleverly made so as to show either the all black or all white. The gathered skirt has not as yet been enthusiastically greeted, and when it proves successful, which means becoming, it has been most carefully and wonderfully dealt with, for when fashion positively demands long, slender lines and then commands gathered or pleated skirts, the dressmaker's life is a weary one indeed, as only by most careful fitting and cutting can pleats and gathers be disposed of so that there will not be too much fulness to make the wearer look large around the hips. The pleated or gathered skirt, with its fulness held in around or just above the ankles with a straight band or fold, is supposed to help in solving the problem, but it requires a master workman or workwoman to obtain the desired results.

PRACTICAL HINTS FOR HOME DRESSMAKING.

AS it is not every woman who is fortunate enough to be able to order her wardrobe without regard to expense, the problem of home dressmaking must be seriously considered. The small dressmaker, the clever seamstress, who years ago was part of every family life, has been absorbed by the large dressmaking establishments or has started an establishment of her own. Dress is far more intricate and involved than it ever was and its very simplicity is often a delusion and a snare. Every woman who has to make her own clothes or has to superintend their making has to study dress most carefully before she decides what she will have in her summer wardrobe.

To begin with, she must have a good fitting pattern for the lining, and she will find it pays to spend days if necessary in getting the lines just right; then the same thing must be gone into for the skirt. But with the waist lining perfectly fitted and the skirt lining perfectly fitted and hung the rest of the gown is comparatively easy. A common fault in poor dressmaking is cutting away the material at the armholes toward the front of the waist and then leaving the mistake to be remedied by letting the waist out in front and covering up the mistake with the outer material. Better lose the entire lining, even if it be silk, than attempt to remedy it in such fashion. Sometimes the results of the fault can be obviated by putting in a piece to give the width required, but far better it is to try once again—and several times if necessary.

A new T.A.S. Society was formed yesterday in the parish of the Sacred Heart. Up to the present the members of the new society have been connected with St. Peter's T.A.S., but it was thought well to have two distinct societies for the two parishes.

The meeting was held in the Church of the Sacred Heart yesterday afternoon at three o'clock and 221 men became members.

The election of officers was proceeded with with the following results:—

President—Wm. Meagher.
1st Vice-President—James O'Brien.
2nd Vice-President—Wm. Grady.
Sec.-Treas.—Thomas Goselin
Financial Secretary—Jos. Picard.
Treasurer—Nicholas Bibby.
Guard—John Jones.

For the present the new organization will not have club rooms of its own. The next meeting will be held in St. Alphonse's Lyceum next Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

THE CABLEGRAM TO KING WAS COMMENTED ON

Last night in the course of his sermon Rev. Mr. Webb said:—

"That was a pathetic word in last night's paper, the cablegram of Pasquale Ventricini to His Majesty King George: 'Am sentenced to hang June 30, Toronto, for killing man in quarrel. I pray you humbly to give me my life.'

Whatever may be said about capital punishment, there is one thing certain, that there are questions that come before the King, which will in all probability make a pardon impossible. If every consideration of law and justice may be overriden even by a sovereign to grant a pardon because the murderer shrinks from the wages of his sin, our empire would have no foundation. The very law that aimed against the transgressor is the protection of the state. When a citizen becomes an outlaw he changes for himself protection into cold justice."

IMPROVEMENTS ARE EFFECTED

Cottagers at Stoney Lake this summer will be agreeably surprised at the improvements made for their accommodation at the store on Juniper Island. Mr. Harry Stock will be in charge this summer, and is leaving nothing undone to add to the patron's convenience. A lunch room 14 x 30 has been built, a new kitchen, and an extension to the storeroom also. In addition to this there are three new bedrooms and a double balcony.

A large boathouse will also be erected near the wharf.

GOT GOODS UNDER FALSE PRETENCES

Mr. A. W. Cressman laid an information at the police court to-day charging a customer with obtaining goods under false pretences.

St. Luke's Church

The members of the Ladies' Aid are requested to meet to-morrow (Tuesday) afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the post office corner to attend a sewing meeting at the Children's Shelter. They extend a hearty invitation to the members of the W.A. to attend also.

A Sixth Sense.

Scientists in Denmark are greatly puzzled by a man named Emil Knudsen, aged thirty-six, a Norwegian from Christiania. He has been an object of interest to the medical faculty for some time, and lately Professor Friedenreich, one of the leading nerve specialists of Europe, suggested an experiment. Knudsen was blindfolded, placed at the wheel on a steamer and told to pilot it through the intricate channels of Copenhagen harbor. This he did without any mishap whatever. He displayed no nervousness or hesitation. He took a dozen sharp corners and followed a zigzag course throughout without any uncertainty. He explains his gift as a sixth sense, and the scientific men who have him under observation are inclined to believe that this explanation is the true one. At present, anyway, they are unable to account for the performance on any other hypothesis.

Canada's Buffalo Herd.

The largest herd of buffaloes in the world is now owned by Canada, says a writer in Canada. They form a most picturesque group as they roam over the new national reserve set apart for them near Wainwright, one of the growing towns on the Grand Trunk Pacific, 125 miles east of Edmonton. It is only within the last year that Canada has wrested from the United States the honor of having the most representative herd of this distinctively North American animal, which is rapidly disappearing. The Dominion government recognized the need of action if the bison were to be preserved and before Washington had realized it had purchased practically the entire herd of 600 or 700 from Michael Pablo of Montana, who had carefully gathered them together and protected them on his great ranch near Ravalli.

Music Loving Spiders.

It has been asserted that spiders possess a sensitiveness to musical sounds. Some species seem to respond to the notes of the piano, the harp, the flute, and so on, in a manner suggestive of their ability to recognize these sounds or the harmonic vibrations on which they are based. But Professor Lecaillon of Paris, who has made a special study of the instincts and the supposed "psychism" of spiders, thinks that the apparent sensitiveness of these insects to music has been misunderstood. It is thought that when musical instruments are played near their nests the spiders simply feel the vibrations through their webs or otherwise without recognizing the musical notes as sounds. The effect upon them is similar to that of the buzzing of an entrapped fly.—Harper's Weekly.

Ancient Mirrors.

A French investigator has lately interested the French Academy of Sciences in his researches concerning the [illegible] mirrors which were used in ancient times in [illegible]. They were backed with a highly polished metal, the nature of which has been in question. It has now been ascertained that the metal was almost pure lead, and it is believed that the method of manufacture was to pour the molten lead on the concave surface of disks cut from balloons of blown glass. In consequence of their shape the mirrors minimized the images of objects looked at in them.

Limestone Wool.

Wool not the product of sheep is being utilized abroad for the making of men's clothing. This is known as "limestone wool" and is made in an electric furnace. Powdered limestone mixed with certain chemicals is thrown into the furnace, and after passing through a furious air blast it is tossed out as fluffy white wool. When it comes from the furnace the wool is dyed and made into lengths like cloth. A pair of trousers or a coat made of this material cannot, it is claimed, be burned or damaged by grease and is as flexible as cloth made of sheep's wool.

J. A. Silan, of San Francisco, while exploring Mount Vesuvius inhaled the fumes and died almost instantly.

Niagara Falls City Council will give merchants electric light free with which to illuminate the streets.

DO NOT NAG GROWING BOYS.

Psychologist Declares Lads Should Work Out Own Problems.

"Let the growing boy work out his own salvation," was the appeal made by Dr. Arthur Holmes, professor of psychology at the University of Pennsylvania, when he recently addressed a large mothers' meeting.

Loving their children as they do and being earnest in the endeavor to help them, it was hard for many in Dr. Holmes' audience not to feel that he was right in the assertion that children are nagged too much and that boys especially should be allowed to develop naturally along their own lines.

"Mothers often forget," said he, "that, while their own way is to arrive at conclusions by intuition, boys are more logical and feel imperatively a need to work out things for themselves.

"Until he is nine or ten perhaps you may tell a lad not to do this thing or that, but from then on he will demand the reason why, and just here you will be shocked to discover that his ideas of right and wrong do not coincide with yours. Only the wise and unselfish mother will realize that there comes a time when she must withdraw from the growing boy and let him grow forth into the man's world, where she will only misunderstand should she follow.

"We older folks live in the past and worship the truths consecrated by age, but a boy naturally lives in the future. The very fact that a law, whether physical or ethical, is old is just why he wants to test its strength.

"You find it first when the boy chafes at parental authority and scoffs at family traditions, but if you are wise you will let him alone. He is manufacturing manhood. It is only the lad who questions and wonders and insists upon settling things for himself that amounts to anything worth while.

"Above all things, be careful that you do not condemn him for deeds whose motives were right and pure. His ideas may be different from yours, but if he does a thing and thinks it right then it is right, no matter whether any one else condemns or approves."

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

Uncle Sam Sends Books Free on Cookery Matters.

The foods used to give variety to the diet in the home vary with time, place and circumstances, but the staple foods the country over are cereal grains and their products, meat, dairy products, eggs and the more usual vegetables and fruits.

According to the results of a large number of carefully conducted studies in American homes, it appears that meat and poultry supply 16 per cent of the total food material, 30 per cent of the protein and 59 per cent of the fat in the average American dietary; dairy products, 18 per cent of the total food, 10 per cent of the total protein, 36 per cent of the total fat and 4 per cent of the total carbohydrates; cereals and their products, 31 per cent of the total food material, 43 per cent of the total protein, 9 per cent of the total fat, 62 per cent of the total carbohydrates; vegetables and fruits, 25 per cent of the total food, 9 per cent of the total protein, 2 per cent of the total fat and 16 per cent of the total carbohydrates.

These figures indicate clearly the relation which the principal agricultural products must necessarily bear to home problems. It is evident that utilization of these staple foods to the best advantage is of great importance to every housekeeper.

Bread, meat and vegetables form a large part of the food of the nation, and their purchase, care and preparation for the table are the themes of farmers' bulletin 256 ("Preparation of Vegetables For the Table"), 375 ("Care of Food In the Home"), 389 ("Bread and Breadmaking") and 391 ("Economical Use of Meat In the Home"). These publications may be had free by sending to the United States department of agriculture, Washington.

These bulletins are not "cookery books," although a large number of recipes for cooking vegetables and meats and mixing and baking bread are found between their covers.

Good Cake Making.

There are some general rules for cakemaking that must be observed:

First.—The ingredients must be of the best, for the best are the most economical.

[illegible] Never allow butter to get too soft or oily before creaming it with the sugar.

Third.—Always have an earthen or enameled dish to mix and work the materials for cake. Tin, if not new, is apt to discolor the materials. Remember that eggs will tarnish even silver. Always use a clean wooden spoon.

Fourth.—As a rule, in mixing cake first beat the sugar and butter together to a cream, then add the yolks of the eggs. If spices are used, these go in with the yolks of the eggs; then comes milk and last the thoroughly beaten whites of the eggs and flavoring. If fruit is a portion, this is put in with the flour.

Fifth.—For small cakes the oven should be pretty hot; for larger cakes only moderately so. If a broom straw pushed through the thick part of the cake comes out clean and free from dough, the cake is done; also if the cake has left the sides of the plan and does not make the slightest hissing.

Sixth.—Some cooks take cake immediately from the pans and do not cover; others leave in the pans fifteen minutes and then cover. Experiment and experience must make the decision in each household.

FIGHTING A CROCODILE.

An Exciting Adventure In a Chinese Timber Camp.

A chance visitor to a Chinese timber camp has related in Chamber's Journal an extraordinary adventure with a crocodile, in which the crocodile came very near having the best of it: "Arriving in my boat at the little jetty or landing place, I was astonished to find Graham, the white man in charge of the camp, lying on a rattan couch within a few yards of the bank, with a heavy express rifle across his knees, gazing intently at a rough fence erected in the stream.

"Throwing myself down near him in the welcome shade, I learned the following story:

"Two nights before Graham was sleeping peacefully in his little palm leaf house in a clearing about twenty yards from the river bank, when his dog began to growl. Graham turned out and walked round the hut to ascertain the cause of the disturbance, but, seeing nothing, addressed himself to the dog in his usual vigorous sailing ship language and retired to bed again.

"Five minutes later he was once more aroused by a yelp from the dog, and this time, really annoyed, he seized a stick and sallied forth to inflict punishment on the disturber of his dreams. Suddenly a dark form glided swiftly from the shadows, and Graham felt himself seized by the right knee as in a vise. Stooping to free himself, he found he was in the grip of a large crocodile, whose teeth were firmly embedded in the flesh.

"Backward and forward the struggle swayed, the crocodile striving to pull its destined victim to the water's edge and Graham, hampered as he was by his imprisoned leg, fighting for his life to reach higher ground. At last the beast, hurling its victim to the ground with a shake of its powerful head, began to drag him swiftly toward the water.

"Poor Graham, feeling, as he expressed it, that it was 'all over bar the shouting,' determined to make one last effort for his life, and, taking advantage of a momentary halt as the brute was steering past a tree stump, he sat up and succeeded in getting both his thumbs into the reptile's eye sockets—the only vulnerable part of a crocodile's head.

"The rest of the story is perhaps best told in Graham's own words, or as nearly as circumstances will permit:

"'As soon as I gets my thumbs made fast in 'is eyes, 'e opens 'is mouth to shout an' lets go my leg. Then first thing next mornin' the coolies lays 'is breakfast for 'im, as you see, an' I gets into this chair an' 'ere I stays, if it's a month.'

"Vainly I tried to persuade him to come away with me to the next station and see a doctor. I argued with him, I implored him, but it was absolutely useless. He refused to move from that chair till he had bagged his crocodile, and I was at last obliged to leave him, having dressed his leg and exhausted every known means of persuasion short of brute force.

"I met him again a week later in a hospital bed, suffering severely, but quite happy in the knowledge that the bones of that crocodile were bleaching in the sun outside his house."

Books of the Old Testament.

The Great Jehovah speaks to us
In Genesis and Exodus;
Leviticus and Numbers see,
Followed by Deuteronomy;
Joshua and Judges sway the land,
Ruth gleans a sheaf with trembling hand;
Samuel, and numerous Kings appear,
The Chronicles we wondering hear;
Ezra and Nehemiah, now
Esther, the beauteous mourner, show;
Job speaks in sighs, David in Psalms,
The Proverbs teach to scatter alms;
Ecclesiastes now comes along,
And the sweet Song of Solomon;
Isaiah, Jeremiah then
With Lamentations takes his pen;
Ezekiel, Daniel, Hosea's lyres
Swell. Joel, Amos, Obadiah's
Next, Jonah, Micah, Nahum come
And lofty Habakkuk finds room,
While Zephariah builds the walls,
And Malachi, with garments rent,
Concludes the ancient Testament.

The Certainty of Fate.

The Mohammedans have a fable which they repeat to illustrate the certainty of fate.

A sultan was once asked by his favorite, the grand vizier, for permission to leave at once for Smyrna, although a brilliant court fete was then in progress. Upon being asked his reason for such haste the vizier replied:

"Because I just saw the angel of death yonder in the crowd. He looked at me so earnestly that I know he has come for me. I wish to escape him."

"Go! Go at once!" said the sultan, who then beckoned to the angel and asked why thel atter had looked so earnestly at the vizier.

"I was wondering," replied the angel of death, "[illegible] here, for I have orders to kill him in Smyrna."

A Stroke of Business.

A writer who was very intimate with Frank R. Stockton says that when the Stockton family lived in Bucks County, Pa., Frank and his brother had a dog which they trained solely to hunt cats. The brothers were overhauled one day by a farmer whose cat they were chasing. To placate the farmer they gave him a dollar for a pig, which they took home. By driving away their father's pigs at feeding time they soon made their own the fattest pig in the pen and sold him at a profit of $7. Frank R. Stockton always considered the deal a tribute to his business acumen.

Meyerbeer and Thunder.

Meyerbeer, like Handel, composed best in a thunderstorm. He had a room made at the top of his house with glass roof and sides, so that he might enjoy these conditions to the full whenever they presented themselves. It is said that no beast of the field, no raven or nightjar, could scent the approach of a storm more unerringly than Meyerbeer, and nothing was allowed to interfere with his solitary enjoyment of it when it arrived. Wherever he was he would leave at the first premonitory rumble.

A CHANGE -- A REST

Three years ago the 16th of January last Mr. Browett Dr. of Optics of Philadelphia moved his family to Peterborough, located permanently as a citizen and began to establish an Optical business here and since that time he has never spent more than a day out of the city. This seemed neccessary to establish a new business and now for the first time he is spending a few days on a business trip teaching and examining Opticians. Mr. Browett has received a permit to see every detail of the process of the manufacture of lenses and spectacles of the famous Bauch & Lomb Optical Co. in Rochester, N. Y., and will before returning be shown through the immense factory where about 3000 hands are employed. Mr. Browett hopes to return by the 18th., much refreshed by his holidays and with new Ideas and equipment for carrying on the ever business of The Optical Institute. Mr. Browett wishes to thank the citizens of Peterboro' and the people of the vicinity for the patronage which has been given during the past three years and assure them that it shall be his constant endeavors to render the best possible service in the examination of the eyes for glasses and supplying the most modern styles of finest quality and best value.

VICTORIA PROFESSOR SAYS STAFF WILL RESIGN EN MASSE

Another Stormy Scene Occurs in Toronto Conference and Resolution is Prepared Which Will Probably Result in Handing Whole Thing Over to General Conference for Discussion.

Toronto, June 14.—"Viewing with much concern the apparent spirit of unrest in the minds of many regarding the sacred truths of our religion, and fearing that some may make shipwreck concerning the faith, we, the members of the Toronto Conference, memorialze the general conference to take such action as it may deem necessary and wise for the conservation of the essentials of our faith in the teaching of our colleges and pupils, especially with relation to the reality and personality of God, the work of redemption, the Deity of Jesus Christ, the divine inspiration and authority of holy Scriptures and the necessity of regeneration of the holy spirit."

The above resolution, moved by Rev. Dr. W. L. Armstrong of Metropolitan Church, and seconded by H. L. Lovering, Coldwater, will probably be accepted by the conference to-day in preference to Dr. Cleaver's, which was the cause of a stormy debate in the conference yesterday.

The chief feature of yesterday's session was the revival of the attack on Rev. Dr. Jackson's alleged "heretical" views, and a defence of him by Professors Bowles and McLaughlin, also of Victoria College.

Prof. McLaughlin clinched his arguments by demanding that the conference appoint a commission of the church to investigate the kind of theology that is taught at Victoria.

"I have felt very keenly the course of this discussion, especially the reflection on the professors in Victoria," he said. "We cannot pass an intelligent vote on the question. The seconder of the motion admitted that 90 per cent. had not read the book. As far as I understand the book, there is no contradiction to our articles of faith. He believes as much as you do, that the Bible is the Word of God. The scientific spirit is abroad in this age; it demands the fullest investigation. The question for you is whether you will have such criticism in the hands of men of force. "I do not believe that the general spirit of the book is right. I throw back to the men who made the statement that this is Unitarianism. I believe in the deity of Jesus Christ and I am sure that Mr. Jackson does too. He has differed in matters of interpretation from some of you. This has been the case all through the history of the church.

"How many of you believe that the first chapter of Genesis is history? Very few of you, I am sure. I do not believe that the book of Jonah is literal history, but I do believe that it is one of the best examples of revelation in the Old Testament. Until to-day I have never been accused of unorthodoxy. I say to you who have made accusation that it is your duty to bring the charges to a court of trial; you cannot stand as men of honor if you do not." (Long applause.)

"Our brethren don't understand," said Prof. Bowles, "what we professors have to contend with." Students get their ideas, not in our colleges, but before they come to college. Questions arise in their minds regarding theology, and you can't keep these questions from young people any more than you can keep these young people from the winds that blow. It centres on this, brethren, whether these questions will be answered by men like Chancellor Burwash, or by infidels.

"You may as well close the doors of the university as to tell us what we will or will not teach. We must have liberty or we can't teach. I challenge anybody to say that our teachings are not in accord with Methodism. I challenge anybody to prove that Dr. Cleaver understands the principles of Methodism better than I do. There is no man loves the Bible, or is more devoted to the Bible than Rev. George Jackson. Brethren, take care lest you spill the warmest life-blood of your church, by your action to-day."

It was like a bolt from the blue when S. R. Parsons, teacher of a Bible class at Sherbourne street church, frankly told the conference that he was glad to say he was wholly in accord with Rev. Mr. Jackson's views on theology. Turning to a minister, who in a stage whisper was denouncing the speaker's remarks, Mr. Parsons said forcibly: "You don't believe in a literal hell of fire and brimstone. You used to do it."

"We do still," said Rev. Dr. Cook.

"You do not. You have got a saner view of the situation now," was Mr. Parson's reply.

There was more stormy discussion in which Rev. Dr. Speer observed: "I have studied the question for years. The more I have read, I am more convinced that the majority of these men, educated as they may be, are deluded. Many people have left the churches because they have lost faith in the old Bible. Think of this. The professors have so steeped their intellect in German destructive criticism, that they are deluded."

MAY BE THIRTY KILLED IN MONTREAL HEARLD DISASTER

Two Bodies Are Recovered—Twenty-Seven Persons Are Still Missing and Many Are Injured in Fire Horror—Victims Pinned Under Debris, Face Slow Death by Flames—Back Wall Crumbled.

Montreal, June 14.—Without the slightest warning the huge water tank on top of The Montreal Daily Herald building on St. James street collapsed at 10.30 yesterday morning, crashed down through the building, causing fire and explosions, and resulting in the most appalling catastrophe in Montreal's history, with a monetary loss of about half a million.

Last night two bodies only have been recovered from the hugh mass of smouldering debris, while 27 are reported missing. A score are in hospitals, some so badly hurt that they may die.

All the dead or missing were employed as printers, pressmen or bindery girls.

Last evening the walls alone are standing. As for the number beneath the ruins who must have been taken down to death by the falling floors, the estimate is a varied one, as there is no possible way at present to get at either the victims or their names, as all the records and books are destroyed.

John Taylor, business manager, says he fears that there are 25 dead, while James Brierley, president of the company, hopes that there are no more than ten or twelve. It is, in fact, difficult to get at the death roll for the reason that some of the poor girls down as missing may have gone home in the excitement of the moment without reporting themselves.

Being spoken to Mr. Brierley said: "The loss? I don't know any more than you. It is certainly heavy, especially as we just had some new machinery installed, but we cannot tell even approximately as yet.

"I think the reports of the dead are exaggerated. It seems to me you will find only five or ten have been fatally injured. Everyone who missed a friend believes he has been killed, and so the report spreads. A man told me about an hour ago his brother must be killed. A few minutes later I saw that brother on the street. I hope it will prove similar in many cases."

The value of the building is said to be about $150,000. While the plant brings the total value close to the half million mark. The insurance on the plant reaches $200,000.

The Herald, which got out an edition from The Gazette office, speaking of the accident, appears to lay the blame on the rear wall, which crumpled away, bringing down the tank with it, and if this is the case, the fault is with the building inspector. Mr. Brierly stated, however, that no attempt will be made for a day or two to find out the cause of the tank's fall. It can be stated, however, that one side of the tank rested on the wall, and this is the side that crumpled, while iron supports brought up from below held the other side. The tank was erected a little over a year ago.

The tank, weighted with 30,000 gallons of water, crashed down through the rear of the four floors of the building as though they had been paper. On the top floor, which was devoted to the bindery business, there were 68 employes. On the fourth floor, where the job composing-room was situated, there were some 70; on the third floor, where the job printing-room was situated, there were 138 people engaged. In the editorial department, which occupied the front section of the second floor, there were 20 men and two women, and the ground floor some 16 men and six women.

The employes on the top floor suffered worst. There is a big brick wall dividing the fourth storey into two sections, and when the tank fell it knocked this wall down. The brickwork fell upon those girls and men engaged at work on the ruling machines at the time, crushing some to death on the spot and carrying others down to the bottom with it. It smashed through the stereotyping department at the rear of the third storey, upsetting the machinery and breaking down the rear wall. It ended its descent close to the business manager's desk on the ground floor.

Bodies Found.—Campbell Morrison, proofreader; Lena Amese, forewoman.

Missing.—D. J. Miller (president Typographical Union 176), Isaac Johns, Alphone Therrien, S. Hopkins, Frank Janson, printer; John Wade, printer; Gustave Lippo, printer; Rene Littlejohn, printer; Clement Brosmans, printer; William Murphy, printer; R. Harris, printer; William Smith, Miss Florence Pitcher, Miss Jennie White, Miss Robinson, time clerk; P. F. Qpinral, printer; Bernice Campbell, Rose Stephenson, May Butler, Dorothy Ward, Miss Beaudry, Frank Cossitt, Ed. Saucier, John Cunningham, Isabella Phillips.

Injured.—Some of whom may die, while others are seriously maimed—Joseph Thibert, many cuts and bruises about face and body; — Wallace, broken ankle; Joseph Langlois, arm cut; Adie Kiser, face and head cut; Albert Bolduc, arm broken; Charles Cross, eye badly hurt; Stanley Switzer, head badly cut; — Vedal, leg and ribs broken; Wilfrid Bedon, leg broken; Hector Leroux, leg broken; William Smithman, seriously injured; William Cuddy, seriously injured; John Dickson, 15 years, deep cut on head, not serious; Hector Larose, head and face cut, not serious; William Pyrne, arm broken and chin cut; Thomas Jackson, 12 years, internal injuries, very serious; Lorne Dwinelle, head badly cut; Blanche Thibadeau, 18 years, seriously injured.

When the wreckage went through the stereotyping department, it overturned the large caldrons of molten lead and broke the gas feed pipes, resulting in fire. This, however, did not develop for several minutes, and in the meantime editors, reporters and employes of the different floors rushed to the hundred windows, and with the cry of "women first," and then men and boys, the firemen and others began the work of rescue.

The women and girls in the top storey had rushed forward to the front of the building immediately the disaster took place, and were there awaiting the fire escapes. The girls behaved with remarkable courage, considering the nature of the disaster. One, whose name has not yet been ascertained, stood at the top of the ladder as soon as it had been mounted against the walls, and aided her fellow-workers to get safely on to it.

In the meantime, from the sidedoor victims who had been brought down with the tank as it fell, were one by one rescued and brought out into the light. There were in attendance all the available ambulances in the city, and the injured, mainly women and girls, were rushed off to the various hospitals.

The spread of the flames made it impossible for rescuers to enter the wrecked building, although Police Inspector McMahon, roused by the shouts and groans from the interior, tried in vain to lead a party of volunteers to their aid.

It was at the rear of the premises on Notre Dame street, that the dead and dying lay buried beneath the debris, and here some excruciating sights were witnessed. The firemen could hear cries and heartrending appeals of girls and men pinned down beneath the wreckage, but were powerless to help.

GOVERNMENT EXPRESSES CONFIDENCE IN GORST

Balfour Commends Ex-President, and Says Criticism of Liberal Party's Administration in Egypt Was Quite Justifiable.

London, June 14.—Replying to an appellation by Sir Henry James Dalziel in the House of Commons yesterday, Sir Edward Grey declared that Sir Elden Gorst, the British agent and consul-general in Egypt, had the complete confidence of the Government. Sir Henry thereupon requested the Foreign Secretary to send a copy of his reply to Mr. Roosevelt. Sir Edward answered that he could see no reason for doing anything of the kind.

Roosevelt's speech led to a lengthy discussion of Egyptian affairs in the House of Commons last night, the Conservatives demanding to know what course the Ministers proposed to pursue, and some of the Liberal members denouncing what they termed Mr. Roosevelt's interference.

Arthur J. Balfour, leader of the Opposition, expressed warm appreciation of Mr. Roosevelt's sympathetic and kindly treatment of the subject. There was nothing in the speech, he said, to which the most sensitive Briton could take exception. The situation in Egypt, he declared, called for prompt action, and he hoped that the Government would take steps to give support to the British representatives there, without which they will be helpless.

Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary, replying to the criticisms in behalf of the Government, announced that Mr. Roosevelt's speech had been communicated to him before it was delivered. He had seldom listened to a speech with greater pleasure. Its friendly intention, he said, was obvious, and, taken as a whole, it was the greatest compliment to the work of one country ever paid by a citizen of another.

There was nothing in the present situation in Egypt, the Foreign Secretary declared, to occasion disquiet or justify a sudden resort to unusual methods, but if the symptoms already noted of anti-British agitation continued, the Government would take measures to assert its authority and protect the Egyptian Ministers who followed the Government's advice.

Interpellations were submitted in the House during the course of the day bearing on the same subject, to which the Secretary of Foreign Affairs made a brief reply.

Hut Falling, Killed Man.

Belleville, June 14.—John Lowden, an old resident of Prince Edward County, was in a disused fishing hut near Wellington, when it fell on him and crushed him so badly that he died.

GRUESOME WORK OF DIGGING UP DEAD

Special to the Review.

Montreal, June 14.—The work of digging out the bodies of the victims of the Herald building disaster of yesterday is proceeding very slowly owing to the great pile of debris and machinery mixed up in an almost inextricable mass. Two more bodies were taken out this morning up to 11.20, making a total of four so far recovered They were those of Messenger Gundy, and Reuben Morrison, a stereotyper. As there is no alteration in this list, the total is now 31, and it is feared this is more likely to increase than to diminish.

"GUNNER" MOIR ATTEMPTS ESCAPE

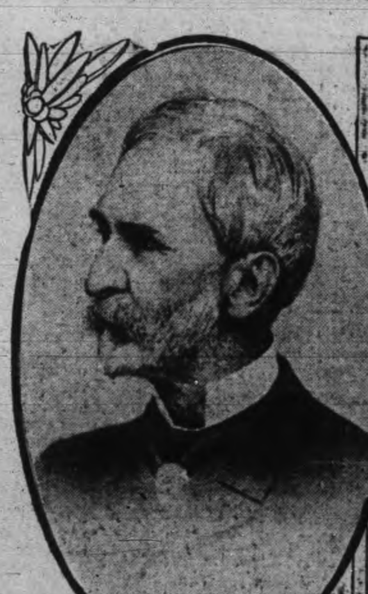
Hamilton, June 14.—"Gunner" Moir, the London murderer, who shot and killed Col.-Sergt. Carruthers, of Wolseley Barracks, planned a sensational escape from the Hamilton Asylum, where he was sent after the court adjudged him insane. During the night Moir was discovered with four of the iron bars of his window cut clear through. An attendant noticed him hovering around the window when he should have been in bed and made an investigation. In a few minutes Moir would have been a free man.

That he had outside assistance is certain, as two men in a buggy, who were waiting on the road, drove rapidly away when attendants appeared.

LOOKS FOR BIG YEAR

Ottawa, June 14.—Dr. William Saunders, director-general of experimental farms, has returned from a tour of the northwest. He states that the frosts have not damaged the wheat crop, and he looks for a big year. Crops at Lacombe looked well and small fruits escaped any serious damage. At Scott, Sask., land is being broken, and there will be crops next year. In the Calgary, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat districts the drought was severe on winter wheat, and fifty per cent. has been reseeded. The snow at Scott and from Edmonton to Calgary supplied much needed moisture. He was much impressed by the development of the country by the American farmers.

ISAAC CHAUNCEY WYMAN AND HIS HOME



ISAAC CHAUNCY WYMAN WHO LEFT GREAT FORTUNE TO PRINCETON

HOME OF ISAAC C. WYMAN OF SALEM AT FOREST RIVER

A report from Salem, Mass., says:—From authoritative sources it is learned that the estate of the late Isaac C. Wyman, [illegible] city, who left the bulk of his vast wealth to Princeton University, may total more than $20,000,000.

J. F. Raymond, neighbor and intimate of Mr. Wyman and executor of the Wyman will, has admitted that the total value of the real and personal property may far exceed the first inventory.

Mr. Raymond said that it may be several months before definite knowledge of the estate may be had, as the greater portion of it is represented in government bonds and stocks.

Mr. Raymond stated some weeks must elapse before legal steps can be taken towards carrying out the provisions of the will providing for Princeton. He added that Mrs. Susan Dickinson, niece of Mr. Wyman, and one of the beneficiaries of the will, expressed herself as fully satisfied with any provision the executors may make toward insuring her a sufficient income for her support during life.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Mrs. Frank Moon's spine was broken in a fall from a carriage at Kenora.

The Baptist Church and parsonage at Hillsboro, N.B., were destroyed by fire.

It is believed that at least 150 persons have been killed in Germany by a cloudburst.

Charles K. Hamilton flew in his aeroplane from New York to Philadelphia and back.

Miss Winnifred Black of Orton has been committed for trial on a charge of sprinkling Paris green on lilac bushes to prevent school children from picking the flowers.

Howson's furniture store at Midland was destroyed by fire and an adjoining building damaged. Mr. Howson and an employe had a narrow escape, having to jump from an upper window down on the awning.

The evidence in the inquest on Jos. Cong at Streetsville showed that a dog belonging to a lady of the village gave the alarm when the attack was made, but two men who went over to the laundry reported that all was quiet.

SAVED LIFE BY NIGHT LONG WALK

Kingston, June 14.—Seeing his young wife take a mouthful from a bottle containing laudanum, William Benn snatched the bottle away and rushed the girl to a doctor. She was taken to the General Hospital, and there kept walking up and down a corridor all night. In the morning the effects of the drug had been nullified and Mrs. Benn was able to return home.

CONFERENCE OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED

London, June 14.—The conference between the two predominant parties over the constitutional clash between the House of Lords and the House of Commons has now entered upon an official stage.

Heretofore, the Ministers have avoided committing themselves in the matter, but Premier Asquith announced in the House of Commons yesterday that communications on the subject had been exchanged by A. J. Balfour, former Prime Minister, and now leader of the opposition, and himself, communications which, the Premier added, "I hope may lead to an early meeting between us."

Will Modify King's Declaration.

London, June 14.—Premier Asquith announced in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon that the Government will introduce a bill modifying the coronation oath in reference to the Roman Catholic faith.

Port Hope Times Sold.

Port Hope, June 14.—The Port Hope Times, one of the oldest weekly newspapers in the county, changed hands yesterday, William Grant transferring it to W. H. M. Purser of Cobourg, a well-known journalist.

Simpson of the "Pericles."

Hitherto there has been no more fortunate sea-captain than Captain Alexander Simpson, the master of the Pericles, which was wrecked recently in Australian seas. It was the proud boast of Captain Simpson, who has risen to his present position from cook's boy, that, although he holds the records for speed in sailing ships from England to Australia, he had never lost as much as a boat. "Simpson's luck" was an expression known throughout the shipping world. Captain Simpson is considered to be the greatest living authority on sea-currents.

Three Classes.

Henry Thomas Buckle's thoughts and conversation were always on a high level. Once he remarked:

"Men and women range themselves into three classes or orders of intelligence. You can tell the lowest class by their habit of always talking about persons, the next by the fact that their habit is always to converse about things, the highest by their preference for the discussion of ideas."

TO DIE POOR GIVES FORTUNE TO SCHOOL

St. Louis, June 13.—To die poor, David Ranken, jr., has not only given up his fortune of more than $3,000,000 to the support of his favorite school, but the $3,000 per annum he has reserved for his own support during the rest of his life will revert to the institution at his death.

The David Ranken Junior School of Mechanical Trades, the beneficiary of its founder, is to be made one of the largest of its kind in the world.

Few people, even in St. Louis, know Ranken personally, for he avoids publicity. He is a bachelor, [illegible] years old and a native of Ireland. He amassed his fortune in real estate and stock deals.

BRUTE GETS FOUR YEARS

Barrie, June 14.—Eugene Beckwith, a Frenchman, aged 45, employed in a stave factory in Fesserton, was yesterday sentenced to four years in Kingston by Judge Wismer, for incest. He is the father of one boy of 12 and two girls of 13 and 15 years.

Information was laid by the elder girl. "I wish to save my little sister from the life of shame into which I have been dragged by my father," said she.

Beckwith denied all knowledge of the crime. A. M. Hunter, secretary of the Children's Aid Society, secured homes for the three children, the mother being dead.

WILL RUN INTO ST. JOHN THIS YEAR

St. John, N.B., June 14.—Trains will be running into St. John and Halifax over the Grand Trunk Pacific by way of Moncton and the Intercolonial, before the snow flies. President Hays is coming to St. John about ten days hence, to inspect Courtenay Bay and terminal sites recently purchased here by his company, as well as to make personal observations of St. John and such surrounding territory as is of interest to his company's enterprises.

As soon as the Transcontinental is completed through New Brunswick and Quebec, this section will be operated, and while Quebec bridge cannot be completed for some years yet, car ferries will be employed to carry trains across the St. Lawrence at that point. The G.T.P., of course, has running rights over I.C.R., and so will be enabled to reach both St. John and Halifax as soon as new trackage from Moncton westward has been finished.

Father Lennon who has been the pastor for a score of years. The bishop in his address declared it was a well-known fact that many serious obligations imposed on the pastor had not been complied with, the reason given being the precarious condition of the health of the pastor.

HOW MANY REALIZE THE MARVELLOUS VALUE OF FRUIT IN CURING MANY DISEASES?

Wonderful Success of "Fruit-a-tives" —The Famous Fruit Medicine

Fruit juice consists of about 91% water, 8% of sweet matter, and only 1% of an intensely bitter substance. Careful experiments show that it is this bitter principle, which is the active or medicinal material of fruit juice.

Under certain conditions, the bitter principle can be made to replace or transform some of the sweet atoms in the juice, thus making a new compound which is much more active medicinally than the ordinary juice.

Many fruits were analyzed and it was found that the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes gave the best results. These fruit juices, having been made more active by the secret process of changing the sweet principle into the bitter, are combined with tonics and antiseptics and made into tablets. These tablets are the famous fruit medicine—"Fruit-a-tives"—known in every part of Canada for their wonderful curative qualities in diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c.

OUR LEADER

Peterborough was honored last evening by a short and informal visit from Mr. R. L. Borden, leader of the Conservative party at Ottawa.

Mr. Borden was met by a large number of prominent Conservatives of the district and many who had not before had the pleasure of meeting the distinguished gentleman had that honor.

At once affable and approachable, Mr. Borden is a man who wears well. There is no cant or two sides to his nature. He is straightforward. His character is unblemished and his life transparent.

Mr. Borden is enjoying excellent health and looks forward to a very successful campaign, the opening meeting of which is being held in Campbellford this afternoon.

THE LONE HIGHWAY MAN

Just the other day the papers had an account of a lone highwayman who held up a train and went through the passengers individually and disappeared. Of course it was in the United States, but people will admire his nerve even if he is a highway man. That's what makes the wheels go round. A man with nerve seldom fails, and the more sublime the nerve the bigger the success. He may not have much ability, but audacity and a good suit of clothes and a line of talk has carried many a man through a pinch and set him up to a good start in the great struggle. Holding up a train, and buncoing the public requires nerve and so does any kind of startling success. The man who builds a factory or starts a company, has to have nerve and his nerve must not fail. The leader of a township council, or a great party needs nerve, if he is to be anything worth while.

All eyes have been turned towards Africa, because Theodore Roosevelt, the man with the nerve, has been disporting there, but nerve does not always bring a man to the camera, or loosen his tongue into perpetual talking. Years ago a quiet man with indomitable nerve went into that unknown wilderness—Livingstone was his name, and later a man with nerve went to find him, and Stanley added his name to the scroll.

There are many people in Peterborough, Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton and everywhere, who were meant for big success, but they lack the nerve to get out from the crowd, out from the rabble. They lack self confidence.

An associated press despatch from Chicago, dated Monday, tells in laconic language of the final windup of Zion City, that model community founded by Alexander Dowie, within whose precints none could smoke, much less chew and drink. Dowie is dead and when he died a few years ago a man with a most collosal nerve passed out of existence. Unknown, and from another country, he came here and said he was Elijah the Second, and people believed him and gave him millions for the privilege of being fooled. The lame walked, the paralyzed sat up. Dowie didn't heal them, though they thought he did. They healed themselves. He took two train loads of converts to New York to save Gotham and rented Madison Square gardens capable of holding 25,000 people, but Gotham refused to be saved by Elijah the Second.

Alexander Dowie, they say, was a humbug, and Kernaghan says that the most pitiable spectacle is a humbug who is humbugging himself. But Alexander Dowie rose because he had unlimited confidence in Alexander Dowie.

TWO INSTANCES

Sydney, N. S., June 12.—Sydney is somewhat exercised over an incident that took place in Victoria Park this afternoon, when a detachment of sailors from the French cruiser Surcouf, who, in charge of an officer, were indulging in games, were ordered to desist by a policeman, who was brought to the scene by a member of the Lord's Day Alliance. Some days ago the commander of the Surcouf applied to Sydney Park Commissioners for permission for his men to come ashore and indulge in games there, and every afternoon for some days the French sailors have been playing rugby football as it is played by very few teams in the Provinces. A party came ashore this afternoon, and had been playing football and going through gymnastic exercises in a remote portion of the park for about half an hour when some prominent men of the Lord's Day Alliance accompanied by a stalwart policeman, came up and ordered the men to cease their games. The sailors explained that it was customary in France to indulge in games after noon on Sunday, and that they did not know they were violating any law. At the same time that the seamen were being ordered away, several hundred citizens were on board the cruiser, which was thrown open to visitors.—Globe.

In view of the conference, Mr. Blakeley has been requested to give a short organ recital after service Sunday evening, so that the ministers from the outlying districts may have an opportunity of hearing the Sherbourne street organ. Mr. Blakeley will play Hollins' new pastorale, "In Springtime."—News.

The observation of the Lord's Day is not really so much a matter of a clean shirt as a clean mind. Men and women cannot be driven into church although they may be made to stop work and also stop recreating and enjoying themselves on the Sabbath. Then again there is the question which is the day to observe. In Battle Creek, many stores are open on Sunday, while the Saturday is observed by church services and the closed store of others.

Years ago the question of Sunday street cars was agitated in Toronto and a clerical body connected with the evangelical churches were dead set against it, while with the exception of the World, none of the opinions expressed in the Toronto press were at all worth while. To-day the street cars stop in front of the city churches, and many a good church member, Bible in arm, and many a parson, notes in pocket, is taken on board it.

In so far as the Lord's Day Alliance makes it easier for the working host, it is to be heartily commended. Through its efforts thousands of men have a rest on Sunday, who would not, only for its efforts. But when this Alliance says; "Thou Shalt Not," to man who would gratify some little hobbby, or who would cut his grass, shingle his shed, or paint his fence, or indulge in some harmless recreation, this seems to be taking away a rightful personal liberty, and dealing with a matter that should be in this enlightened country, settled between the individual and his Maker.

Visiting the French cruiser Sunday thrown open to the public, was not an offence although it was a recreation, and the playing of the crew in a remote corner of a park, was.

The Lord's Day Alliance would seek to make it an offence to sell ice cream on Sunday, and many fines have been collected for selling a cigar on that day. But what is the difference between that and the organ recital noted above.

WHITHER ARE WE DRIFTING?

The press of Ontario are forgetful of their golden opportunity and for many moons no editorial pen has dipped into the inkpot to write on that vast question, "Whither are we drifting?"

The World long ago settled that live problem, where can the hired man wash his feet and I decided the proper number of pieces of pie to be cut from a single circle. But none of the Toronto, Hamilton, Montreal or London papers have written on this crying subject "WHITHER ARE WE DRIFTING?" There is mustard in the crop. Whither are we drifting? The fishing season is opening this week and Annanias will again come from the grave and walk forth. The barbers complain that whiskers are slow in sprouting and blame the cold weather. Now whither are we drifting? Spain is going to allow religious liberty, and Theodore Roosevelt refuses to sit down and be a good boy, but will perhaps form a new party. Whither are we drifting? A minister in a western Ontario town has refused a call to a larger salary and Rev. Mr. Atias has gone to penitentiary for six years because he had sticky fingers, and the comet has left us without an excuse for being out late at night. Whither are we drifting?

Thousands of farmers from Uncle Sam's land are coming over to visit us and remain with us in our western country each year. Thither they are drifting. The peach crop has been ruined three times this year and the price of strawberries and cream keeps up and the mustard crop never fails. Whither are we drifting? Ye gods and little fishes, gentlemen of the press, speak out, or forever hold your peace.

A STRANGE APPOINTMENT

The Laurier Government has made a singular appointment which is causing a good deal of stir. One of the best and most responsible positions in its gift is that of Trade Commissioner to New Zealand. The salary is $3,000 a year and expenses. The holder is the representative of Canada in a Dominion of the British Empire, and assuredly should be a person of standing and high reputation. The person selected for this post is W. A. Beddoe, who edited newspapers on both sides of politics in the Yukon, and who has been the salaried political writer of the Laurier Government for some years. It was his letter, by its extravagant untruthfulness, which earned the attention of the House of Commons last session. The Conservatives drew the notice of the House to the fact among others, that he said that the Liberals were promoting and the Conservatives were attacking the Miller Bill; whereas Conservatives were among its warm supporters, and the principle opposition came from two Liberals, Hon. Mr. Aylesworth and Mr. McColl. On this occasion the Liberals attempted no defence on the letter. It was he, who in the columns of the Oshawa Reformer, attacked the personal character of the Rev. John Pringle.

On the announcement of the appointment being made, protests were made Major Henry J. Woodside, a Liberal of high character, who edited a newspaper in the Yukon, wrote to the Ottawa Journal an indignant protest. The Journal itself editorially condemned the appointment. It gave a setch of Beddoe's career, and stated that he had been dismissed from the editorship of the Yukon News under the following circumstances: Under his guidance the News had evidently assailed the Bronson-Ray concession, of which J. P. Tyrrell, the well-known mining engineer, was manager. After these attacks had continued for some time publicly asserted (Mr. Tyrrell) that Beddoe had come to him privately with the offer to cease hostilities in return for a valuable consideration. Upon this charge appearing that the News had sought to be bought off, the proprietors of the newspapers informed Beddoe that he must secure a verdict against Mr. Tyrrell or leave the newspaper. Beddoe accordingly brought suit against Mr. Tyrrell and the jury threw out the charges. That is the jury found that Mr. Tyrrell had been justified in charging Beddoe with attempted blackmail. Therefore Mr. Beddoe's connection with the Yukon News terminated.

This is the man who has been sent to represent Canada in New Zealand.

By a curious coincidence, at the very same time another famous Laurier Government trade commissioner is in the courts. J. B. Jackson, Sir Richard Cartwright's old friend, has been sued by D. Guthrie, of West Oxford, for $2,325. Jackson induced Guthrie to put the money into a wheat deal in Chicago on the agreement that they should show losses and profits. The sum raised was $4,500 and Jackson informed Guthrie that this had all been lost. Judgment was given Guthrie for the full amount of the claim with interest.

THE POINT OF VIEW

LONGFELLOW'S PEDIGREE.

Everybody's Magazine.

A teacher in a New England grammar school found the subjoined facts in a composition on Longfellow, the poet, written by a 15-year-old girl: "Henry W. Longfellow was born in Portland, Me., while his parents were travelling in Europe. He had many fast friends, among whom the fastest were Phoebe and Alice Carey."

HIS REGRET.

Newark Star.

An eminent speaker at the Congregationalist meeting in the First Congregational Church, East Orange, was telling the other day of a Westerner's opinions of the east.

"This man," said the speaker, "was a prominent churchman and had occasion to visit New York, where he remained for a few days. In writing of his experience to his wife in the west he had this to say:—

"New York is a great city, but I do wish I had come here before I was converted."

MONTREAL, June 13.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the offerings amounted to 700 cattle, 75 sheep and lambs, 925 hogs and 300 calves. Cattle prices since this day week have scored a further advance of 15c per 100 lbs., as the bulk of the stall-fed cattle thruout the country have now been pretty well marketed, and the farmers are demanding more money for the few left, as grass cattle will not be in fit condition to move for two or three weeks. Therefore, supplies of good, useful cattle in this market will likely become scarcer. A few extra choice steers made as high as 8c, but the bulk of the trading was done in choice at 7½c to 7¾c; good at 7c to 7¼c; fairly good at 6¾c to 7c; fair at 6¼c to 6½c, and common at 5½c to 6c per lb. There was an improved demand for bulls at from $6 to $6.60, while cows brought from $4.90 to $6.25 per cwt. There was no change in the condition of the market for hogs. Supplies were ample, with sales of selected lots at $10 per cwt. The trade in small meats was quiet. Old sheep sold at 5c to 6c per lb.; spring lambs at $4 to $6 each, and calves at $3 to $8 each.

The Mystery of The Yellow Room

By GASTON LEROUX

COPYRIGHT, 1908, BY BRENTANO'S

CHAPTER I.

In Which We Begin Not to Understand.

"THE yellow room!" Who now remembers this affair which caused so much ink to flow? On the 25th of October, 1892, the following note appeared in the latest edition of the Temps:

"A frightful crime has been committed at the Chateau du Glandier, on the border of the forest of Sainte Genevieve, above Epinay-sur-Orge, at the house of Professor Stangerson. In the night, while the master was working in his laboratory, an attempt was made to assassinate Mlle. Stangerson, who was sleeping in 'the yellow room,' a chamber adjoining this laboratory. The doctors do not answer for the life of Mlle. Stangerson."

The impression made on Paris by this news may be easily imagined. Already at that time the learned world was deeply interested in the labors of Professor Stangerson and his daughter. These labors—the first that were attempted in radiography—served to open the way for M. and Mme. Curie to the discovery of radium. It was expected the professor would shortly read to the Academy of Sciences a sensational paper on his new theory, the dissociation of matter, a theory destined to overthrow from its base the whole of official science, which based itself on the principle of the conservation of energy.

On the following day the newspapers were full of the tragedy. The Matin published the following article, entitled "A Supernatural Crime."

"These are the only details," wrote the anonymous writer in the Matin, "we have been able to obtain concerning the crime of the Chateau du Glandier. The state of despair in which Professor Stangerson is plunged and the impossibility of getting any information from the lips of the victim have rendered our investigations and those of justice so difficult that at present we cannot form the least idea of what has passed in 'the yellow room' in which Mlle. Stangerson, in her night dress, was found lying on the floor in the agonies of death. We have at least been able to interview Daddy Jacques, as he is called in the country, an old servant in the Stangerson family. Daddy Jacques entered 'the yellow room' at the same time as the professor. This chamber adjoins the laboratory. Laboratory and yellow room are in a pavilion at the end of the park, about a thousand feet from the chateau.

"'It was half past 12 at night,' this honest old man told us, 'and I was in the laboratory, where M. Stangerson was still working, when the thing happened. I had been cleaning and putting instruments in order all the evening and was waiting for M. Stangerson to go to bed. Mlle. Stangerson had worked with her father up to midnight. When the twelve strokes of midnight had been sounded by the cuckoo clock in the laboratory she rose, kissed M. Stangerson and bade him good night. To me she said "Good night, Daddy Jacques," as she passed into the yellow room. We heard her lock the door and shoot the bolt, so that I could not help laughing and said to monsieur: There's mademoiselle double locking herself in. She must be afraid of "the Bete du Bon Dieu."

"'Monsieur did not even hear me, he was so deeply absorbed in what he was doing. Just then we heard the distant miawing of a cat. "Is that going to keep us awake all night?" I said to myself, for I must tell you, monsieur, that, to the end of October, I live in an attic of the pavilion over the yellow room, so that mademoiselle should not be left alone through the night in the lonely park. It was the fancy of mademoiselle to spend the fine weather in the pavilion. No doubt she found it more cheerful than the chateau and, for the four years it had been built, she had never failed to take up her lodging there in the spring. With the return of winter mademoiselle returns to the chateau, for there is no fireplace in the yellow room.

"'We were staying in the pavilion then—M. Stangerson and I. We made no noise. He was seated at his desk. As for me, I was sitting on a chair, having finished my work and, looking at him, I said to myself: "What a man! What intelligence! What knowledge!" I attach importance to the fact that we made no noise; for, because of that, the assassin certainly thought that we had left the place. And, suddenly, while the cuckoo was sounding the half after midnight, a desperate clamor broke out in the yellow room. It was the voice of mademoiselle, crying "Murder—murder—help!" Immediately afterward revolver shots rang out, and there was a great noise of tables and furniture being thrown to the ground, as if in the course of a struggle, and [illegible] voice of mademoiselle calling, "Murder—help—papa—papa!"—

"'You may be sure that we quickly sprang up and that M. Stangerson and I threw ourselves upon the door. But, alas, it was locked, fast locked, on the inside by the care of mademoiselle, as I have told you, with key and bolt. We tried to force it open, but it remained firm. M. Stangerson was like a madman, and, truly, it was enough to make him one, for we heard mademoiselle still calling "Help, help!" M. Stangerson showered terrible blows on the door and wept with rage and sobbed with despair and helplessness.

"'It was then that I had an inspiration. "The assassin must have entered by the window!" I cried. "I will go to the window!" and I rushed from the pavilion and ran like one out of his mind.

"'The inspiration was that the window of the yellow room looks out in such a way that the park wall, which abuts on the pavilion, prevented my at once reaching the window. To get up to it one has first to go out of the park. I ran toward the gate and on my way met Bernier and his wife, the gate keepers, who had been attracted by the pistol reports and by our cries. In a few words I told them what had happened and directed the concierge to join M. Stangerson with all speed, while his wife came with me to open the park gate. Five minutes later she and I were before the window of the yellow room.

"'The moon was shining brightly, and I saw clearly that no one had touched the window. Not only were the bars that protect it intact, but the blinds inside of them were drawn, as I had myself drawn them early in the evening, as I did every day, though mademoiselle, knowing that I was tired from the heavy work I had been doing, had begged me not to trouble myself, but leave her to do it, and they were just as I had left them, fastened with an iron catch on the inside. The assassin, therefore, could not have passed either in or out that way, but neither could I get in.

"'It was unfortunate—enough to turn one's brain! The door of the room locked on the inside and the blinds on the only window also fastened on the inside, and mademoiselle still calling for help! No, she had ceased to call! She was dead perhaps. But I still heard her father, in the pavilion, trying to break down the door.

"'With the concierge I hurried back to the pavilion. The door, in spite of the furious attempts of M. Stangerson and Bernier to burst it open, was still holding firm, but at length it gave way before our united efforts, and then what a sight met our eyes! I should tell you that, behind us, the concierge held the laboratory lamp—a powerful lamp that lit the whole chamber.

"'I must also tell you, monsieur, that the yellow room is a very small room. Mademoiselle had furnished it with a fairly large iron bedstead, a small table, a dressing table and two chairs. By the light of the big lamp we saw all at a glance. Mademoiselle, in her nightdress, was lying on the floor in the midst of the greatest disorder. Tables and chairs had been overthrown, showing that there had been a violent struggle. Mademoiselle had certainly been dragged from her bed. She was covered with blood and had terrible marks of finger nails on her throat, the flesh of her neck having been almost torn by the nails. From a wound on the right temple a stream of blood had run down and made a little pool on the floor. When M. Stangerson saw his daughter in that state he threw himself on his knees beside her, uttering a cry of despair. He ascertained that she still breathed.

"'But how to explain that he was not there, that he had already escaped? It passes all imagination. Nobody under the bed, nobody behind the furniture! All that we discovered were traces, blood stained marks of a man's large hand on the walls and on the door, a big handkerchief red with blood without any initials, an old cap and many fresh footmarks of a man on the floor—footmarks of a man with large feet whose boot soles had left a sort of sooty impression. How had this man got away? How had he vanished? Don't forget, monsieur, that there is no chimney in the yellow room. He could not have escaped by the door, which is narrow and on the threshold of which the concierge stood with the lamp while her husband and I searched for him in every corner of the little room, where it is impossible for any one to hide himself. The door, which had been forced open against the wall, could not conceal anything behind it, as we assured ourselves. By the window, still in every way secured, no flight had been possible. What then?

"'But we discovered my revolver on the floor—yes, my revolver! Oh, that brought me back to the reality! The devil would not have needed to steal my revolver to kill mademoiselle. The man who had been there had first gone up to my attic and taken my revolver from the drawer where I kept it. We then ascertained, by counting the cartridges, that the assassin had fired two shots. Ah, it was fortunate for me that M. Stangerson was in the laboratory when the affair took place and had seen with his own eyes that I was there with him, for otherwise, with this business of my revolver, I don't know where we should have been—I should now be under lock and bar.'"

The editor of the Matin added to this interview the following lines:

"We have, without interrupting him, allowed Daddy Jacques to recount to us roughly all he knows about the crime of the yellow room. We have reproduced it in his own words, only sparing the reader the continual lamentations with which he garnished his narrative. We should have liked to put some further questions to Daddy Jacques, but the inquiry of the examining magistrate, which is being carried on at the chateau, makes it impossible for us to gain admission at the Glandier, and, as to the oak wood, it is guarded by a wide circle of policemen who are jealously watching all traces that can lead to the pavilion and that may perhaps lead to the discovery of the assassin.

"We have also wished to question the concierges, but they are invisible. Finally, we have waited in a roadside inn, not far from the gate of the chateau, for the departure of Monsieur de Marquet, the magistrate of Corbeil. At half past 5 we saw him and his clerk and, before he was able to enter his carriage, had an opportunity to ask him the following question:

"'Can you, Monsieur de Marquet, give us any information as to this affair, without inconvenience to the course of your inquiry?'

"'It is impossible for us to do it,' replied Monsieur de Marquet. 'I can only say that it is the strangest affair I have ever known. The more we think we know something, the further we are from knowing anything!'

"We asked Monsieur de Marquet to be good enough to explain his last words, and this is what he said, the importance of which no one will fail to recognize:

"'If nothing is added to the material facts so far established, I fear that the mystery which surrounds the abominable crime of which Mlle. Stangerson has been the victim will never be brought to light, but it is to be hoped, for the sake of our h[illegible] son, that the examination of [illegible] and of the ceiling of the yell[illegible] room—an examination which I shall [illegible]morrow intrust to the builder who constructed the pavilion four years ago—will afford us the proof that may not discourage us. For the problem is this: We know by what way the assassin gained admission—he ent[illegible] the door and hid himself [illegible] bed, awaiting Mlle. Stangerson. But how did he leave? How did he escape? If no trap, no secret door, no hiding place, no opening of any sort is found; if the examination of the walls—even to the demolition of the pavilion—does not reveal any passage practicable—not only for a human being, but for any being whatsoever—if the ceiling shows no cracks, if the floor hides no underground passage, one must really believe in the devil!'

"We wanted to know what Daddy Jacques meant by the cry of 'the Bete du Bon Dieu.' The landlord of the Donjon inn explained to us that it is the particularly sinister cry which is uttered sometimes at night by the cat of an old woman—Mother Angenoux, as she is called in the country. Mother Angenoux is a sort of saint, who lives in a hut in the heart of the forest not far from the grotto of Sainte-Genevieve."

In conclusion and at a late hour the same journal announced that the chief of the Paris police had telegraphed to the famous detective Frederic Larsan, who had been sent to London for an affair of stolen securities, to return immediately to Paris.

CHAPTER II.

In Which Joseph Rouletabille Appears For the First Time.

I FIRST knew Joseph Rouletabille [pronounced Rule-ta-bee] when he was a young reporter. At that time I was a beginner at the bar and often met him in the corridors of examining magistrates when I had gone to get a "permit to communicate" for the prison of Mazas or for Saint-Lazare. He had, as they say, "a good nut." He seemed to have taken his head, round as a bullet, out of a box of marbles, and it is from that, I think, that his comrades of the press, all determined billiard players, had given him that nickname, which was to stick to him and be made illustrious by him. He was always as red as a tomato, now gay as a lark, now grave as a judge. How while still so young—he was only sixteen and a half years old when I saw him for the first time—had he already won his way on the press? That was what everybody who came into contact with him might have asked if they had not known his history. At the time of the affair of the woman cut in pieces in the Rue Oberskampf, another forgotten story, he had taken to one of the editors of the Epoque, a paper then rivaling the Matin for information, the left foot, which was missing from the basket in which the grewsome remains were discovered. For this left foot the police had been vainly searching for a week, and young Rouletabille had found it in a drain where nobody had thought of looking for it. To do that he had dressed himself as an extra sewer man, one of a number engaged by the administration of the city of Paris owing to an overflow of the Seine.

When the editor in chief was in possession of the precious foot and informed as to the train of intelligent deductions the boy had been led to make he was divided between the admiration he felt for such detective cunning in a brain of a lad of sixteen years and delight at being able to exhibit in the "morgue window" of his paper the left foot of the Rue Oberskampf.

The boy faced reporter speedily made many friends, for he was serviceable and gifted with a good humor that enchanted the most severe tempered and disarmed the most zealous of his companions. He began to win a reputation as an unraveler of intricate and obscure affairs which found its way to the office of the chief of police. When a case was worth the trouble and Rouletabille—he had already been given his nickname—had been started on the scent by his editor in chief he often got the better of the most famous detectives.

Tom Mann, the well-known labor leader, returned to England after eight and a half year's residence in Australia.

The State apartments at Windsor Castle and Kensington Palce will be closed to the public until further notice.

Cook in Comfort

You no longer need wear yourself out with the weakening heat of an intensely hot kitchen. You can cook in comfort.

Here is a stove that gives no outside heat. All its heat is concentrated at the burners. An intense blue flame (hotter than either white or red) is thrown upwards but not around. All the heat is utilized in cooking — none in outside heating.

New Perfection
WICK BLUE FLAME
Oil Cook-stove

entirely removes the discomfort of cooking. Apply a match and immediately the stove is ready. Instantly an intense heat is projected upwards against the pot, pan, kettle or boiler, and yet there is no surrounding heat — no smell — no smoke.

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

Why? Because The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is scientifically and practically perfect. You cannot use too much wick—it is automatically controlled. You get the maximum heat—no smoke. The burner is simple. One wipe with a cloth cleans it—consequently there is no smell.

The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is wonderful for year-round use, but especially in summer. Its heat operates upward to pan, pot, or kettle, but not beyond or around. It is useless for heating a room.

It has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot.

It has long turquoise-blue enamel chimneys. The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

"UNDER THREE FLAGS" WINDOW DISPLAY

The Banks Bicycle and Sporting Goods Co., local agents for the E.M.F. 30 horse power and the Flanders "20" autos, have a most attractive window display of a large map of Canada, United States and Mexico, with a red line showing the route of the Flanders "20" from Quebec to Mexico City, a distance of 4,500 miles. FELL FROM WINDOW AND IS DANGEROUSLY INJURED

Accident to Coroner Dr. Gray at His Home, Shortly After Two O'clock This Morning—Patient is in a Serious Condition

Coroner Dr. Gray fell from the window of his room at his residence, 205 Sherbrooke street, about two o'clock this morning, and is now in the Nicholls Hospital, suffering from concussion of the brain. Several ribs were also broken and doctors in attendance on the patient report that his condition is very serious.

The doctor was found by his wife, who was attracted by groanings, lying on the granolithic walk leading to his office. He had fallen headfirst from the window, striking the walk in that manner.

Dr. King was immediately called, and later Dr. Young was summoned, and the injured man was taken to the hospital. It is feared that the patient received internal injuries.

AND THEY WAITED IN VAIN FOR THAT CAMP BOUND TRAIN

Private Grant, of the 45th Regiment, of Lindsay, is a much chagrined militia man, and seven comrades in arms share his disappointment.

Private Grant is a member of No. 2 Company of the 45th, and with the septette referred to anticipated a pleasant outing at the annual camp at Kingston. But they were ill-advised as to train connections with the result that instead of humming merrily along for the camp on the C.P.R. train yesterday afternoon they wer ewalking around the streets of Peterborough waiting for the earliest return train to Lindsay.

Private Grant explained to the Review that the eighty men got off the train at the C.P.R. station to wait for another train by which they were informed they had to make connections for Kingston. (They should have stayed with th etrain they were on, however, as that was the one bound for the camp, and the other train which they anticipated did not sho wup; hence the enforced return to Lindsay.

HAAG'S CIRCUS WILL BE IN PETERBORO ON JUNE 28TH

E. Haag, proprietor of the Mighty Haag Shows, which exhibit in Peterborough on June 28, is considered the Circus King below the Mason and Dixon line, has decided in his sixteenth transcontinental tour to come north of the Mason and Dixon line, being the first time the big southern circus has ever been out of its own territory.

The invasion will be watched by jealous eyes by the big northern kings of circusdom, and a big novelty is in store for the northern people as they will have a chance to see the southerner as he really and truly is in all phases of his life, as the show is managed, directed, owned and all departments are peopled by southerners only.

There will be real southern beauties riding blue ribboned Kentucky bred horses; the southern colonels will be in evidence, with his wide brimmed white hat, together with the "yes sah" that has made the southerner famous.

Mr. Haag also claims to have the finest sixteen head of Kentucky mules which are world wide renowned, and will be of great interest to horsemen of this section. Taking it all in all a great treat is in store for the public wherever the Mighty Haag Shows exhibit.

MAGISTRATE DISMISSED CHARGE AGAINST CHARD

In the case of the charges against two Havelock men, by name Chard and Edwards, Magistrate Edmison yesterday dismissed the case against Chard at the consent of Crown Attorney Wood, after some evidence had been taken, which tended to show that the accused was not guilty.

The two men were charged with being implicated in the theft of a colt and were arrested by High County Constable Cochrane last week.

Some evidence was also given against Edwards, but it was not very satisfactory, and it was decided to have the case stand over, to be enlarged from time to time until July 4th, during which time an endeavor will be made to secure more evidence.

BOLD THIEVES.

Two small children, aged nine and twelve years of age, appeared before his Worship, charged with stealing a sum of money. They secured an entrance into a residence by way of a cellar and stole between five and six dollars.

His Worship did not deal with the case, but left it in the hands of the Havelock authorities to await his further instructions.

THE OPENING SESSION OF THE BAY OF QUINTE W.M.S.

[illegible] the Bay of Quinte branch of the W.M.S. of the Methodist church met in the Charlotte street church this morning at 10 o'clock. The President, Mrs. Platt, of Picton, was in the chair.

The meeting was opened by devotional exercises conducted by Mesdames Harrison and Campbell, the vice-presidents.

The Courtesy and Press Committees were then appointed, after which the corresponding secretary read a number of memorials, which were passed on to be discussed in open session.

Miss Joness, of Bowmanville, then gave a paper on "The Delegates' Report as it Ought Not to Be," which will be printed in full, and is well worth reading, digesting and putting "How a Report Ought to be Given" into practice. Organizers' reports then followed, a summary of which will be published later. There were 148 delegates who registered at the morning session. The meeting adjourned, to meet again at 2 p.m.

SHAM BATTLE A LITTLE TAME NOT ENOUGH AMMUNITION

The 57th Regiment, accompanied by the band, had a marchout to Jackson Park last evening, returning to the armouries about ten o'clock, when a sham battle was fought. The realism of it however, was somewhat handicapped by lack of ammunition. Monday evening, however, a supply of cartridges will have been received from Kingston, and will enable the regiment to have a thorough sham battle.

The following orders were issued:—

Headquarters,
Peterborough,
June 13th, 1910.

No. 1—Detail of duty for the week ending June 20th, 1910: Captain for th week, Captain McWilliams; next for duty, Captain McLean; subaltern for the week, Lieut. Higgins; next for duty, Lieut. Hodgson.

FRENCH CONSERVATIVES READY TO SUPPLY IMMEDIATE AND EFFECTIVE AID TO THE EMPIRE IF NECESSARY

Says Mr. R. L. Borden in Interview With the Review—Hon. Mr. Hanna Speaks Enthusiastically of Success of Central Prison Farm—Peterborough Conservatives Welcome Their Chief—Mr. Borden Quietly Entertained During Short Stay in City.

Mr. R. L Borden, the leader of the Opposition at Ottawa, accompanied by Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary; Hon. Charles J. Doherty, member in the Dominion House for St. Anne's, Montreal, and Mr. J. Stewart Carstairs, Conservative organizer for Ontario, arrived in the city yesterday afternoon on the 4.38 C.P.R. en route for Campbellford, where Mr. Borden is the principal speaker at the first of a series of eight Conservative picnics to be held during the next two weeks.

EIGHT CONSERVATIVE PICNICS.

The complete itinerary is: Campbellford, Tuesday, June 14th; Wednesday, Long Branch, Toronto; Thursday Ingersoll; Friday, Aylmer; Monday, Niagara Falls; Tuesday, Trenton; Wednesday, Port Perry; Saturday, Finch..

A BRILLIANT DEBATER.

Mr. Doherty represents St. Anne's division, Montreal. He is a very able jurist, who retired from the bench after fifteen years' service, and who was induced, with great reluctance on his part, to enter public life. He has already won for himself a distinguished place among the foremost debaters of the House of Commons. He will be present at the first of the picnics, but is obliged to sail next week for England to argue an important case before the Privy Council.

RECEIVED BY PROMINENT CONSERVATIVES.

The Conservative leader was met at the station by a committee of prominent Conservatives of Peterborough and was very cordially greeted as he stepped from the train. Among those who greeted Mr. Borden and his distinguished associates were:

Mr. H. Waddell, Ald Phelan, vice-president of the Conservative Club; R. M. Waddell, secretary; Ald. Buller, Lieut.-Col. Miller, W. G. Howden, reeve of North Monaghan; J. H. Burnham, G. W. Hatton, Joseph Mills, James Edgar, John Green, W. E. Murphy, James P. Metheral and J. J. Turner.

The party were taken over the lift lock in Mr. T. H. Hooper's launch, "May Belle," and enjoyed a trip up the canal. On the return to the city a number of Conservatives dined with them at the Oriental. During the evening a great many citizens called at the hotel and paid their respects to the leader and his assistants.

THE IMPORTANT QUESTIONS..

"The picnic at Campbellford," said Mr. Borden to the Review last night, "is the first of a series of eight we are holding within the next two weeks. In the late summer or early autumn we will hold a large series of meetings in Central points in Ontario. In the meantime I am going to the Maritime Provinces to visit my own constituency. I expect to hold a number of meetings in the Maritime Provinces."

"The past session of Parliament," continued Mr Borden. "has been a very interesting one, and the naval question naturally overshadowed other subjects. Before the conclusion of my present tour I shall speak at length on this subject.

FRENCH CONSERVATIVES ATTITUDE.

"In the meantime it might be well to observe that the attitude of the French Conservatives in the Province of Quebec has possibly been misunderstood in the English provinces. The French-speaking Conservatives are quite prepared to supply immediate and effective aid to the Empire in case of actual danger or emergency, but they are not satisfied that any such danger or emergency exists at the present time.

"The Conservative members of Parliament regret the necessity of postponing the convention which they proposed holding during the present month, but in view of considerations most in mind it was thought best to lay over any general convention until next year."

A SUCCESSFUL EXPERIMENT.

Hon. W. J. Hanna, the Provincial Secretary, when questioned by the Review, gave very interesting and timely information concerning the Central Prison farm at Guelph.

"This year we have three hundred acres of grain, fifty acres of roots and 100 of hay," said Mr. Hanna.

"Sixty-four prisoners are at work on the farm, and without the use of a gun or handcuff and they are a most law-abiding lot. They work intelligently, and as to quantity and quality of work do just as good and as much work as we could get from paid help.

"The prisoners' interest in the work is growing and up to date there has not been the slightest attempt to escape, and there has not been a single breach of discipline.

"We are, of course, simply in the experimental stage, but our experience to date could not be more encouraging.

"We are sending up fifteen to twenty prisoners to the farm each week.

"The papers have been asked generally not to give the question too much attention for the present, but a little later on we will be glad to let them see for themselves what is happening."

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL ASS'N

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Sunday School Association, was held last evening in the Y. M. C. A., when there was a fairly large number of workers present. A splendid address was given by Rev. Mr. Halpenny, secretary of the Ontario Sunday School Teachers' Association. It was teeming with instruction for the Sunday school teacher, and it was unfortunate that there were not more present. The chair was taken by the president, Rev. J. R. Webb, and opening devotional exercises were conducted by Mr. Webb and Mr. A. I. Johnson

The minutes of the last annual meeting were read by the secretary, Mr. F. E. Kerr, and Mr. Johnston read the treasurer's report, which showed the finances to be in a healthy condition.

In his opening remarks the chairman spoke of the splendid work of the secretary, Mr. F. E. Kerr, in the interests of the association. He was delighted to have Mr. Halpenny present and he was sure he had something instructive to tell him.

Mr. A. J. Johnston read the treasurer's report. Total receipts, $80.72. Cash on hand, $6.67. Moved by Rev. Mr. Coon and Mrs. Martin, that the treasurer's report be accepted.—Carried.

Rev. E. W. Halpenny then addressed the association. He spoke encouragingly regarding the progress of Sunday school work, but deplored the fact that many teachers had not a proper conception of the true idea of Sunday school work. He spoke of the world's convention, and of the enthusiasm that prevailed. They had even gone so far as to determine to send the Bible to the last place on the face of the world which had not received it, in South America.

He cleared up a misconception of some people as how the money was spent, a portion going to the International Association, and the remainder to help along Sunday school work. He spoke of the fact that only about one-quarter of the people are associated at all in Bible study work in any capacity and the average attendance of those who were enrolled would be far below that. Far too few are thus engaged in the Bible study, and he hoped that soon all the church members would come out to Sunday school and Bible classes.

Mr. Halpenny hoped that instead of annual meetings of S. S. associations, that we have an annual convention instead. He thought that twenty-four hours was not too much time to spend upon investigation of S. S. problems.

Once in a while there needs to be a canvass of the city to rouse the people to further church attendance, who would not otherwise attend divine service.

Another thing that must come is the conduct of a class to train teachers. Also there must be meetings of the primary teachers to discuss problems of their peculiar and particular works. The superintendents ought to have meetings also, to get help from one another. Then, also, the teachers of Bible classes should have conferences. Our Sunday schools have not enough business men's classes or classes for the older people.

One of the vital problems of to-day in Sunday school was the procuring of properly trained teachers. Times are changing from what they were. Too many teachers had not proper information on the Sunday school lessons even. The ideas regarding teaching were often false. We teach truly only when we vitalize. We must study our audience. The incorrigible boy, for example, should be studied in order to find out his make-up. The discouragements of many teachers were due to the fact that they did not know how to handle the conditions.

There are a few lines of teaching that we must know. We must know the combination to enter the safe. Disorder is often due to the fact that teachers do not get to their classes early enough to control the situation. Inattention by pupils is because the pupils are more attracted by something else than what you are giving them. The fault is the teacher's, and he must see where the fault is, as a child will naturally be attentive if he is interested. Thus you must know your child, the truth and the way to get the one to the other. Don't be discouraged, victory comes in the constant plodding along the best lines.

The day school force is coming to the aid of the Sunday schools, because they realize that the two should go hand in hand. The Sunday school has much to learn from the day school regarding methods of pedagogy. The Sunday school teacher is apt to be good at exhortation, but not at real teaching. Children do not enjoy the work in Sunday schools as they should because of the lack of real, proper method.

Sunday school work is to be a perpetual thing. Let us now lay down the foundation for future greatness. Teachers must be trained. Already that has become well established in some places, and we should start at once. Start a regular class for teacher training; have the class pledged to attend regularly and have graduating exercises at the next convention.

OPENING OF JUNE SESSIONS OF COUNTY COURT TO-DAY

The June sessions of the County Court opened this afternoon at one o'clock. His Honor Judge Huycke, is presiding. The docket is is made up of [illegible] tions. three jury and three non-jury.

The following comprise the grand jury;—J. W. Miller, foreman; Christopher Armstrong, Thos. Chamberlain, M. Comstock, R. Chowen, F. Clementi, Ed. Conroy, J. R. Darling, W. S. Johnston, H. Moore, W. F. Nelson, Jos. Mills.

The action of W. H. Clysdale, of Dummer, vs. Mutual Life Insurance Co., was first proceeded with. Dennistoun, Peck & Kerr for plaintiff; Hunter & Hunter for defendants.

In his address to the members of the grand jury, His Honor Judge Huycke, said he was glad to welcome them to court. He had observed that some had failed to respond to the call of their names and the court registrar would investigate as to their non-appearance. For such cases a severe punishment could be administered. To act in the King's court was not only a duty, but a privilege as well.

His Honor remarked on the significance of the drapings in the court. The time for their removal had not elapsed he said and he was glad that the drapings were hanging at the coming together of the King's Court.

It was something wonderful to consider the feeling of sorrow and pain which swept over the whole land as a result of [illegible]

It was noticeable that while he was called Imperial Edward, he was not the less honored in the provinces and colonies as well. The late King was the first monarch who held the title of King of the Dominions over the seas.

Judge Huycke closed his remarks with reference to one of the last of the late King's kindly acts, that of sending a cablegram to Goldwin Smith, former tutor.

In outlining the duties of the grand jury, his Honor noted that that the matters before them were not very serious, but nevertheless, they should give their close attention to their charge.

A NEW IDEA

In the West Indies people who have long worn cotton and linen clothing in the hot weather, are now using pure wool homespuns and find them most agreeable. The Hewson woolen people of Amherst, N.S., are developing this trade very successfully. Canadians might do well to wear more homespuns in summer.

CENTRALS TOOK SECOND OF SERIES WITH LAKE ST.

The Senior City School Baseball League came to a close at the Oval yesterday afternoon, when the Centrals again defeated the Lake street team by a score of 5—3. The figures were the same as in the last game, and the two results give the winners the undisputed title of champions by a margin of four runs.

The contest yesterday, save for several wild pegs to first, was a good exhibition. Both twirlers handled themselves nicely, and their help behind contributed some fast fielding.

The winners have had a particularly successful season, having only lost one game.

The teams:—

Centrals—Cavanah, c; Pearson, ss; Long, 3b; Dobson, 2b; Moran, cf; Smith, p; Knapman, 1b; Mulhern, rf; Goodfellow, lf.

Lake Street—V. O'Connell, 3b; Rose, ss; McDonald, c; W. O'Connell, p; Carson, 3b; O'Brien, lf; Briou, 1b; Condon, cf; Christopher, rf.

HAVELOCK JUNIORS HAVE LEAD OF FOUR IN SEMI-FINALS

From Our Own Correspondent.

Havelock defeated Warsaw juniors in the first game of the semi-finals at the Havelock Park on Friday evening last by a 5—1 score. The local juniors have worked up a very nice combination this year, which is responsible for the one-sided score, although the Warsaw team put up a good stiff argument at all stages of the game.

When play first commenced the Warsaw team looked like winners, and worked in some good combination play but a few rushes against the Havelock defence took some of the life out of them. About fifteen minutes after play commenced, after a series of rushes the Havelock centre man succeeded in notching the first goal for the home team. The scoring awakened the Warsaw men up to the situation, and they made it real interesting for a time. Shortly before half time the game had to be called on account of rain, but the teams went back for the second half after the rain had put the grounds in such a state that good football was impossible.

During the last half the railroad town went right in for scoring, and succeeded in placing four more between the stakes. The Warsaw defence put up a strenuous fight and cleared the back line many times, but once in a while the Havelock team would put in a counter.

Mr. Darling, of Warsaw, made a satisfactory referee.

The Havelock team go to Warsaw on Wednesday to play the return game and it will likely be an interesting feature, as Warsaw are confident that they can make a much better showing on their home grounds.

57TH BAND TO BE ON HAND AT BENEFIT GAME

The city baseball league has many friends and this same old burg has lots of sports clean and true to the core. Last evening representatives of the league waited on the 57th regimental band and their request that a detachment of the organization take part in the benefit game for Jack Pilling, which will be played at the Riverside Park Saturday afternoon, received approval and as a result there will be lots of music for the fans.

A parade of the players of the All Stars and T.A.S. headed by the band, will be held from the corner of Simcoe and Water streets, the corner of Charlotte and George streets and up George street to Hunter and over to the grounds.

The game will be called at three o'clock, and Tommy Darke, the league's official umpire, will handle the exhibition.

Tickets are now out for ladies and gentlemen and may be secured from city league clubs, officials and players.

SPORTLETS

A representative of the West Ends, P.A.C. and Strathconas and President Yenney will meet at the West End rooms to-night at 8 o'clock to pick the team for Saturday's game at Riverside with the T.A.S.

The City League has decided on a game here for July 1st, and an outside team will be booked for that date.

The Central school baseball team, champions of the School League, are to be congratulated on the splendid showing they have made this season. The boys have played the game as it should be played. They have been guided by Principal Downey, and he has played no small part in bringing the honors to the school.

How the Cobra Gives Warning.

The most dangerous reptiles of India and Africa are the cobras. No snakes, not even rattlesnakes, are more dreaded, and with reason. As the rattlesnake warns the ear by its significant "rattle," so the cobras warn the eye by the mode in which they expand the upper part of the body when irritated. This expansion is produced by a sudden movement of the ribs of that region of the body. Usually they incline backward, but the animal when irritated makes them stand out at right angles to the body and so, of course, forces outward the skin which covers them. Thus the neck, or part just behind the head, becomes greatly expanded and flattened, as it also does, though in a less degree, in the Aus[illegible] This expansion [illegible] called a hood, and so the animals are called hooded snakes. In some of them there is on the back of the hood a dark mark, something like a pair of spectacles, and they have therefore been called spectacle snakes.

A Trick of Thieving.

A London bank cashier continually found himself short after balancing the day's transactions. Usually the deficiency was for small sums. It puzzled him for a long time, but eventually the mystery was solved by an accident. A clerk in the office was in the habit of handing him a book to initial each day. The book was laid on the desk where usually there were a number of loose gold coins lying about, was duly marked and lifted up again. One day the clerk, in taking back the book, was not so cautious as usual, and the cashier caught the glint of a coin adhering to the back of it. Struck by this defiance of the law of gravity, he grasped the book and found on it a small piece of wax to which the coin was adhering, and now the clerk is numbered among the unemployed.

STARVATION AMID PLENTY.

An Odd Situation, Yet It Is the World's Greatest Danger.

Nitrogen is possibly the oddest of all the chemical elements. It has no taste, no color, no odor, no marked affinity for other elements. It is neutral, negative and a non-supporter of life and combustion. Nevertheless, it is a very important element. It constitutes the main difference between the animal and vegetable kingdoms. It is the basis of practically every explosive known to science, and the frightful power of dynamite, nitroglycerine, cordite and gunpowder is due to this queer element.

A trace of this harmless nitrogen, added to a bit of the fluffy, innocent cotton so common in our households, converts it into the deadly guncotton. Although it has no odor, yet when it is combined with hydrogen, another gas without odor, it forms the strong-smelling gas known as ammonia. The sweetest perfumes known to man are all nitrogen compounds. Although it has no color, yet when combined chemically with two parts of oxygen, it makes a gas that is a brilliant cherry red.

Although it is inert, and we breathe gallons of it every hour, yet when chemically combined in still another proportion with oxygen, it forms the well-known laughing gas, so commonly used as an anaesthetic by dentists. Though it has no apparent effect upon the body, yet when combined with carbon, hydrogen and oxygen in the form of meat, the body finds it the hardest element to get rid of, and too often it is the cause of the most fatal of all kidney diseases.

Air is a mechanical mixture. By this is meant that the constituents are distinct and separate, even as sugar is distinct from the water in which it is dissolved.

Were nitrogen to form a chemical combustion with the other constituents of the atmosphere, all life would become extinct almost instantly. An atom of nitrogen, so inert and harmless, combined with another atom of an equally harmless substance, carbon, sometimes called soot, makes the deadly gas known as cyanogen, the basis of prussic acid, one drop of which will cause almost instantaneous death.

Although there is so much nitrogen all around us, the world is slowly starving to death for lack of it. Animals must have it in the combined form, and it must be given to the soil, if we want wheat, and corn, and other grains. Hundreds of years ago, birds deposited a nitrogen-bearing substance on the sea cliffs and in the sea caves along the coast of Chile, in far off South America.

Man has gone there after this precious nitrate and borne it away, shipload after shipload, to be used as a fertilizer on the impoverished fields of Europe and America. Now the deposits are nearly all gone and nitrogen must be sought elsewhere. In Germany they are taking it from the air by means of electricity.

If this method proves itself to be a success the world life will be saved; if it does not and no other natural deposit is found, or no other means of fixing the nitrogen in the air in a soluble form so that plants may feed upon it, all earth life is doomed, even though it be postponed for hundreds of years. The time is surely coming when our descendants shall suffer from a nitrogen famine, although living in a sea of it.

Even to-day we are feeling it, and the countless abandoned farms in New England are silently eloquent of the nitrogen that was theirs once, but is now theirs no more. Truly, nitrogen is a queer element and it behooves us to become better acquainted with it unless we wish our descendants to face the frightful danger of starvation due to the lack of this strange gas so abundant, and yet so hard to obtain in the form needed by plants.

Liberty In Three Nations.

An Englishman loves liberty as he does his lawful wife. She is a possession. He may not treat her with much tenderness, but he knows how to defend her. A Frenchman loves liberty like an affianced bride. He will commit a thousand follies for her sake. A German loves liberty like his old grandmother. And yet the surly Englishman may some day in a fit of temper put a rope around her neck, and the inconstant Frenchman may become unfaithful to his adored one, but the German will never quite abandon his old grandmother. He will always keep a nook for her in the chimney corner, where she can tell her fairy tales to the listening children.—Heinrich Heine.

Would Drown All Sounds.

The agent of the apartment house was trying to discourage him from applying for a flat.

"Your nerves would be ruined," said the agent. "There is a phonograph on the second floor that runs day and night."

"Dot was nuttin's," responded the little man in the red and blue cap.

"On the third floor a girl practices on the piano all day."

"I vud hear her nod."

"And just across the shaft a lunatic blows the cornet at all hours."

"Der soundsv ud nod reach me."

"Great Josephus! Are you deaf?"

"Nein! I blay der drombone."

Mother's Task.

When mother gets breakfast she must remember that father likes his breakfast food without cream, Johnny wants both cream and sugar, Susie doesn't like breakfast food at all and must have a substitute, Mary has to have grapefruit and the rest of the family want oranges and apples. No two agree on anything, but she must remember what each one wants or the family doubt her devotion. What is it, do you suppose, that keeps the mother of a large family from going crazy?

The Rubber Plant In 1735.

The first accurate information regarding the wonderful rubber plant was furnished by La Condamine, a French scientist who was sent in 1735 by the Government of France to measure an arc of the meridian near Quito. This brought him to the heart of the rubber growing country, and much valuable information was thus obtained.

Abe Tompkins, a Central Ontario Railway brakeman, was fatally crushed at Trenton.

FARM LANDS.

The Story of Their Rise In Value Reads Like a Romance.

The farmer, not the money king of Wall street, is the real owner of the United States. The glean of his fields is another Aladdin story, only instead of rubbing a lamp he has simply scraped the ground.

Our cereal crops last year were worth $3,000,000,000, which is sufficient to pay for all the tools, implements and machinery of the whole of American industry. While this sum seems huge as it stands alone, you have only to go back a few years in the story of our agriculture to see the miracle of the steady increase that has been achieved. Eleven years ago the value of all our farm products for a single year was reckoned at $4,417,000,000. You have already seen how that figure was doubled by 1909. During these years the sum total that the soil has yielded the farmers is $70,000,000,000. The advance is so steady and sure that you can almost calculate upon it year by year.

Compare this record with the ebb and flow of earnings in steel or any other industry and you realize as never before how agriculture keeps the even tenor of its prosperous way unmindful of panic or depression. Why? Simply because land is stable and, given proper methods of farming, the more you take out of it the more valuable it becomes. It cannot be moved away. It is in truth the very foundation of the nation's material welfare. It would take $24,000,000,000 to buy our farm lands, and their value is real and not watered, save by irrigation.—Isaac F. Marcosson in Munsey's.

The Enigma of the Eel.

Some not very old beliefs include the notion that horse-hair steeped in water turns to eels, that they generate in the gills of other fish, or in the bodies of dead mammals thrown into water, but perhops the most startling, if absurd, theory was advanced by David Cairncross, a working man whose observation lacked the steadying power of scientific training. In a treatise on "The Origin of the Silver Eel," published in or about 1862, he fixed upon the water-beetle as the progenitor of the eel. Another equally absurd belief prevailed that the eels were spontaneously generated from th dew of May. This belief originated in the fact that new-cut turfs folded and placed in such a river as the Severn in the month of May would, on removal from the water, be found to swarm with tiny eels.—The Graphic.

The Origin of Oxygen.

That eminent scientist, the late Lord Kelvin, maintained that all the oxygen in the atmosphere probably originated from the action of sunlight upon plants. When our earth was a globe of hot liquid, it contained no vegetable fuel and probably no free oxygen. But as it cooled off plants appeared on its surface, and these began to evolve oxygen through the medium of the sunbeams. Upon the oxygen thus derived we depend for the maintenance of life by breathing. When we burn coal or other vegetable fuel we use up oxygen, and it is to plants again that we owe the restoration of the oxygen thus lost to the air. If they failed to keep up a sufficient supply the atmosphere would gradually part with its oxygen, and the inhabitants of the earth would disappear in consequence of asphyxiation.

VOILE DE SOIE and Crêpe de Chine Gowns for the Summer Season

BY A. T. ASHMORE.

IN planning for the summer outfit it would seem that it would be far easier to decide upon what gowns were necessary if it were definitely settled where the season was to be spent. Fashionable life at the fashionable watering places demands, for instance, an absolutely different order of gowns from the life at some fashionable summer country home locality, where, in spite of the usual routine of luncheons and dinners, there are many hours and days that really are spent quietly and where only at the end of the week is there any formal entertaining that requires elaborate toilettes.

But the American woman does not spend the summer in any one place; on the contrary, seashore and inland, mountains and plains, and, incidentally, Europe and Aemrica are, as a rule, included in the summer itinerary, requiring, as can readily be understood, an endless variety of gowns for day and evening. To carry out such a schedule implies the possession of such an income that the dress question is considered on quite a different basis from the selection of the customary summer wardrobe. The woman of to-day has no stated season of the year when she selects new gowns; she soon tires of any she buys, and straightway hies herself to lay in a fresh supply, and there are always, all the year round, at the leading establishments smart gowns to be found, even at the between times, when the head of the house is abroad studying the very latest creations of the designers in Europe.

In spite of the great wealth in America and the fact that many American women buy without counting the cost, there are few among the smartest gowned who do not find it essential to select carefully and purchase prudently the summer outfit. They do not wish to be gowned too conspicuously; they insist upon being gowned correctly, pride themselves upon always having just the right gown for each and every occasion, and contend the desired result cannot be obtained by ordering recklessly.

What are the most popular fabrics of the season is always a question of deep interest. The soft, clinging materials are so fascinatingly attractive, so peculiarly well adapted to all this season's models that naturally they challenge attention, but there are also heavier materials more closely woven that are fashionable as well and that cannot be ignored.

Voile de soie and cashmere de soie, chiffon broadcloth, liberty satin, satin charmeuse satin crêpe de Chine—all these and many more are shown as suitable for the summer gowns. Foulard, tussah, royal pongee, rajah, in such an endless selection of color, weave and weight, are shown that it is terribly difficult to select understandingly, and in order to exercise calm judgment there must be called to mind for what purpose the gown is to be worn; then it is far simpler to decide on the material. The afternoon reception gown, suitable for luncheon or card party, is this season elaborate in design, and the transparent materials are the best for it, so that voile de soie is gladly chosen.

Veiling in Varied Tones.

The veiling of one material with another, and one color with another, produces most charming effects and dressmakers vie with one another to be original in this manner. A most charming gown of figured chiffon or crêpe is veiled with a loose tunic coat or drapery of black; a fascinating snuff brown chiffon, with border of yellow roses, is veiled with a loose coat tunic of the more transparent voile de soie of the same shade, and the effect obtained by these two transparent materials, for chiffon is classed among the transparent, is fascinating to a degree.

A more elaborate style of gown or rather a gown for a more formal occasion, a dinner or the theatre, is of liberty satin in a charming shade of gray. This is veiled in voile de soie a shade lighter or darker, the voile put on to form long flat pleats. The effect gained is far softer than if the entire gown were of the satin and besides is more up to date. Just here may a word of comfort be given to the forced-to-be-economical woman with a love for good clothes. Last year's gowns can be most satisfactorily remodelled this year provided they fit and hang well, for they can be literally transformed by being covered with voile de soie, or in some instances made to look like new with the addition of a loose coat or tunic of the thin material.

The liberty satin, crêpe de Chine and the cachemire de soie gowns made on the absolutely simple draped designs are most attractive and becoming, and are conspicuous for their almost exaggerated simplicity in contrast with the over-elaboration, intricate and exaggerated fashions that so challenge attention this season.

A perfect figure has every detail of its perfection exhibited in the draped gown, with long skirt and surplice-draped waist. The girdle of striped silk or satin, with its long ends finished with tassels, is not essential, but is rather a novel touch that some like and some dislike. It is not a gown suitable to every figure, and yet it is astonishing how in the hands of an expert this model can be so carried out that instead of revealing defects it conceals them and makes even a short, thick waist look well. It cannot be turned out to good advantage in any too heavy or thick goods, however, for their folds and draperies are clumsy and ungraceful.

Exquisite Draping Materials.

Cachemire de soie is a most exquisite material that is becoming more and more fashionable of late. It has been made up in three piece costumes, skirt, waist and coat to match, and for that purpose has been proved without a rival for summer wear. It comes in all grades, all designs and colors and the shades of colors are endless. In black it has a sheen and finish that make it appear like the softest satin, but with a body that the softest satin lacks and which makes it most impossible for street wear.

Just as with the cashmere of olden time is it easy to make gowns fit well when made of it, and for the half fitting coats it hangs loose and at the same time follows the lines and not the curves in a most delightfully fashionable manner.

Bands of trimming, folds, rosettes and buckles are all to be noticed in the newest gowns when not made on the plain draped lines just described. Just where shall be placed the band or fold that holds the skirt in around the ankles is most carefully studied by every dressmaker who is successful in her profession, and it is most remarkable what a different effect is at once obtained by an inch or two in the placing. To enable the wearer of the skirt to take a long step, not too long, and at the same time not to look as though she were hobbled, certainly requires artistic (?) talent and rare skill, but the wonderful feat is accomplished sometimes and the fashion still reigns. Unfortunately—or is it fortunately?—there are so many who fail dismally in the attempt that the fashion will undoubtedly come to a violent end before long.

PRACTICAL IDEAS FOR THE HOME DRESSMAKER.

AS the one piece or the two piece gown the more fashionable is a vital question of the moment, and especially for the woman who cannot order recklessly the clothes she wants but who must plan carefully and direct the less expensive dressmaker or seamstress in the way she should go. Both styles are fashionable this season, but when the two piece model is chosen it must be so made that it will look as though it were one piece, even when the skirt is separate from the waist. First must the lining at the waist be most carefully fitted, then must the material be draped, for that is how the waist of to-day is made; then must the skirt be fitted and hung, sewed upon the waist lining, and where it joins the material of the waist there must be folds of the material or a satin or velvet belt be put on to hide the joining. It is quite possible for a clever seamstress to finish the skirt where it joins the waist so neatly that it will look as though there were just the smallest edge of a fold.

Cloth jackets and coats are almost too difficult for home dressmaking, but the rule does not apply to pongee, satin or linen. None of these materials require the pressing and finishing that only the tailor understands how to bestow upon the heavier fabrics, and this season there are so many smart models in outer garments that can be copied that even a small allowance for dress will permit of more than one attractive pongee, linen or even crêpe de Chine gown with coat to match.

The death occurred very suddenly at Frobisher, Sask., of Mrs. W. L. Taylor, the second eldest daughter of Mr. David Forsyth, of lot 5, in the first concession of Douro.

Mr. Taylor left for the West early last spring and was joined three weeks ago at Frobisher by his wife. The late Mrs. Taylor's death was due to heart failure.

To mourn her loss she leaves her husband and two sons her parents, one sister, Miss Ellen, at home, and four brothers, Messrs. Wm. and Thos., of Douro, and David and George, of this city. Mr. Finely James is a nephew of the deceased. The remains will be brought to Peterborough for burial. The date of the funeral will be announced later.

The death occurred last evening about six o'clock, at her late residence, 359 Stewart street, of Miss Alithea Maria Ferguson, eldest daughter of the late Frederick Ferguson, of Peterborough. The late Miss Ferguson was one of the oldest and best known residents of Peterborough and was a lady of highly estimable qualities. Miss Ferguson's mother's maiden name was Mary Elizabeth Hazelwood.

PRACTICAL ASTRONOMY

Will be Special Feature of Royal Astronomical Society Meeting

The next meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society will be held on Tuesday, June 21st, and will be of a somewhat unique nature.

From eight o'clock until nine the meeting will be held in the lecture room of the Collegiate, where several members will give answers to a number of interesting questions. At nine o'clock an adjournment will be made to the lawn to permit all present engaging in practical work with the telescope.

Mr. Collier, the president, has kindly consented to loan his telescope for the occasion.

As practical work with the telescope or the opera glass is generally considered the most interesting branch of the science of astronomy, a large attendance of members and friends is expected. The moon should be very favorable for the occasion, and this one sight through the telescope well repays considerable effort.

We are asked to state that all questions which members desire answered should be handed to the president or secretary before the 18th, to permit of publication.

A BIT OF ADVICE

First--Don't Delay; Second--Don't Experiment

Mrs. W. Huycke, of 311 Louis St., Peterborough, Ont., says:

"Mr. Huycke frequently suffered with backache. At times the pains in the small of the back would become so severe that he was unable to straighten himself up without much suffering. He could not stoop or lift anything of consequence, and his general health had been run down for some time. He had tried a number of different remedies, but didn't find relief until on advice of a friend he procured Booth's Kidney Pills at Wm. Madill's pharmacy and commenced treatment. He soon found relief. The pains left his back and he straightened. He has had no return of the trouble since, and speaks very highly of Booth's Kidney Pills."

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney troubles are but forerunners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

Booth's Kidney Pills cure kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Peterborough residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a Peterborough citizen.

Sold by dealers. Price 50 cents. The R. T. Booth Co., Limited, Fort Erie, Ont., sole Canadian agents.

Hurled From Battlements.

Since 1891 Lord Dunalley, who has just celebrated his sixtieth birthday, has been representative peer for Ireland. His lordship after receiving his education at Harrow and Trinity College, Cambridge, began his career in the army by joining the Rifle Brigade. Succeeding his father in 1885 as the fourth baron, he retired and settled down on the family estates in Tipperary. He has two sons who are in his old regiment. Lord Dunalley's ancestors, the Pritties, come of a fighting stock. The founder of the family, Col. Henry Prittie, did yeoman service in the cause of Charles I., for which he received the castle of Dunalley and estates. Here his son sustained a siege of twenty-one days—after the battle of the Boyne—against the disbanded soldiers of James II. History relates that the besiegers eventually effected an entrance and seized the owner, whom they hurled from the battlements, but by miraculous fortune he escaped unhurt. A raconteur with a host of anecdotes, Lord Dunalley tells the following story: An hotelkeeper near New York City is a Frenchman, and his family knows little more about English than he does. His suburban hotel stands in the centre of a square filled with large trees. When the proprietor wanted to call attention to this advantage he put on his cards, "The most shady hotel around New York." The reputation of the place is beyond reproach, and the proprietor does not know yet why so many persons smile when they [illegible]

The Siamese Topknot.

A Siamese child, whether boy or girl, wears its hair in a little topknot until it has attained the age of eleven or twelve years. On reaching this age the topknot cutting ceremony takes place. The child is dressed in its best, and amid much rejoicing of relatives and friends the topknot is cut, one lock at a time. The head is then completely shaved by the priests. All guests invited to the ceremony bring presents, usually money, which is carefully invested for the child by its parents or guardians. A young prince or princess will sometimes receive as much as $25,000 in presents at his or her topknot cutting ceremony, while a poor child may get $10 or $15. —Wide World Magazine.

A Variation.

"Sir," says the anxious suitor, "your daughter has preferred me to you. I—er—that is—you know—I have proposed to her."

"Proposed to her, have you?" dryly observes the father. "Well, I thought she had learned something by this time. And you ought to hesitate a good deal before engaging yourself to marry her. You know she has been divorced four times."

"Yes, sir. But I—I can assure you, sir, that I can provide her with the alimony she has been accustomed to in case our marriage should be a failure."

A CHANGE -- A REST

Three years ago the 16th of January last Mr. Browett Dr. of Optics of Philadelphia moved his family to Peterborough, located permanently as a citizen and began to establish an Optical business here and since that time he has never spent more than a day out of the city. This seemed neccessary to establish a new business and now for the first time he is spending a few days on a business trip teaching and examining Opticians. Mr. Browett has received a permit to see every detail of the process of the manufacture of lenses and spectacles of the famous Bauch & Lomb Optical Co. in Rochester, N. Y., and will before returning be shown through the immense factory where about 3000 hands are employed. Mr. Browett hopes to return by the 18th, much refreshed by his holidays and with new Ideas and equipment for carrying on the ever business of The Optical Institute. Mr. Browett wishes to thank the citizens of Peterboro' and the people of the vicinity for the patronage which has been given during the past three years and assure them that it shall be his constant endeavors to render the best possible service in the examination of the eyes for glasses and supplying the most modern styles of finest quality and best value.

CAMPBELLFORD GIVES BIG RECEPTION TO MR. R. L. BORDEN ON THE OCCASION OF IMMENSE CONSERVATIVE PICNIC

Opening of Limited Tour of the Province by the Dominion Leader of the Opposition--General Half Holiday Observed by the Town and Music Supplied by Two Bands--Mr. Borden, Hon. Mr. Hanna, Hon. Mr. Doherty and Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., Give Telling Addresses on Questions of National Significance---Quebec Bridge Scandal, Purity in Politics, Public Civil Service and the Ever-increasing Necessity of More Honest Elections Some of the Important Features of Mr. Borden's Masterful Address.

Everything was auspicious.

Overhead the clouds of former days had disappeared, the sun shone out, and Nature seemed in league with the event.

Farmers who had known the toil of the springtime put by their work for the day, and mothers left their kitchens and went with them, the young man took his girl and the hired man was left at home to do the chores.

Old men, who looked back with undimmed mind fifty, sixty, seventy years were there, like the war horse sniffing the battle from afar.

Campbellford dressed up on Tuesday.

It responded to the thrill of the fine June day and woke with the robin.

It looked like a holiday, it was a holiday, and they came from the north and south, from the east and west.

The opening meeting of R. L. Borden, leader of the Conservative Opposition at Ottawa was a splendid event.

In company with a number of Conservatives from Peterborough, headed by Ald. Phelan, vice-president of the Conservative Association, Mr. Borden left for that busy little town on the morning Grand Trunk train. In company with him were Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary; Hon. Charles J. Doherty, member at Ottawa for St. Annes, Montreal, and the indefatigable J. S. Carstairs, Conservative organizer for Ontario, and a corps of newspaper men.

It was a great welcome that greeted him.

"THREE CHEERS FOR BORDEN."

The response was immediate and the station platform and the station yard rang with the reply.

The distinguished visitors were met by Mr. C. L. Owen, M.P.; J. A. Loucks, president of the Conservative Association; John Anderson, [illegible]-president, and T. J. Horkins, secretary-treasurer, and taken to carriages, and a line of march was formed.

There were two bands.

The pipers of Gordon Camp, S.O.S., were there, a breath from a land of the heather, with Archie Pollock leading, and Robert Yeaman at the drum.

The 40th Regimental Band, that had many members away at camp, was not able to be present, as a unit, but under Leader Smith they made a brave showing.

In the procession were our future voters—a long line of lads carrying flags.

Then followed the citizens and yeomanry in carriages.

ALL ALONG LINE.

Mr. Borden received a rousing reception all along the line, and when the skirl of the pipes died away in that mystical wail, so familiar to all lovers of that music, the band took up the story.

Yes, the procession was a long one, the longest ever seen in Campbellford.

NAMES.

Among those who took part in the turn out were Mayor Doxsee, Charles Davidson, David Owens, Alexander Winter, William Thomas, George Thomas, E. Morton, J. W. Cairns, Frank Rook, A. B. Caldwell, Fred Peake, William Smith, Walter Hill, William Hume, Jack Linton and R. A. Linton.

Among the county and vicinity dignitaries present were J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., East Peterborough; James Thompson, M.P.P., East Peterborough, and F. J. Fox, Victoria.

A QUIET HOUR.

The guests then spent the hours intervening between the time of arrival and the meeting renewing old friendships or making new.

MORE NAMES.

From Warkworth came a small army. Here are a few of them: Dr. N. J. Richards, H. J. Walker, A. M. Hamilton, P. S. Ewings, Wm. Wilson, John Leonard, Wm. Love, Michael Lovergan, Nelson Stone, John Kelly, Geo. Hutchinson, James Young, Geo. Shrinkle, Kenneth Booth, W. Hawke, and Frank Meneely.

Keene was represented by the well-known stalwarts John C. Reid, James Henderson, Richard Skinner and Jas. McNeil.

Rev. J. H. Strike and Rev. Mr. Brown were also on hand.

THOSE BEHIND THE EVENT

And while giving names, below are the names of the gentlemen prominent in Conservative life, who made the picnic possible, and to whom much of the credit belongs for the marked success of the evnet:

Grounds Committee—A. H. McKeel, chairman; W. J. Morton, Robt. Linton, Chas. Davidson, John Govan, W. Thomas, H. Reddens, C. Dunk.

Finance Committee—J. A. Stewart, chairman; C. H. Cassan, G. A. Kingston, Campbellford Herald; T. J. Horkins, A. J. Jenkins, M. T. Stephens, C. H. Harris, Jas. Dickson.

Executive Committee—G. A. Payne, chairman; S. J. Moore, C. L. Owen, M. P.; J. A. Loucks, J. W. Cairns, A. B. Colville, Wm. Smith, Geo. Dickson, G. Henderson, W. W. Hill, J. A. Irwin, J. C. Fowlds, Jno. Dickson, Dr. Loucks, Jas. Irwin, Dr. Haig, Dr. Bonnycastle, Wm. Gunning, Fred Peake, Fred Brown, Alex. Hume, John Currie, Gilbert Bedford, jr.; S. J. Fisher, Thos. Varcoe, Isaac Lawson, James Jones, John Sanders, W. J. Armstrong, Samuel Brown, John Arnold, C. E. Bonnycastle, Andrew Hay, John Catton, Geo. Vanvolkenburg, John McKenzie, John Petty, A. L. Boyce, Dr. Richards, J. S. McColl, John Anderson, Stephen Goodrich, Samuel Parks, Dr. Wilson, Jas. Armstrong, Thos. Tweedle, Wilfred Strong, Alex. Hamilton, Robert Snetsinger, Dr. Wade, Geo. Drewry, H. J. Walker, Robt. Cook, Thos. Montgomery, John Sexsmith, M.P.; Jas. Thompson, M.P.P.; Sam Nesbitt, M.P.P.

EASY TIME FOR "COP."

Robert Lynn, Campbellford's brass buttons, or, in other words, the Campbellford policeman, was all dressed up for the occasion. Now, this man Lynn had a very easy time. There was not a single drunk to be seen, not a man under the influence of anything more than enthusiasm. It was red corpuscle enthusiasm, not red eye.

"I'll take a little whiskey and water," said a man well known, as he walked towards the bar in the Windsor House.

"We don't sell liquor here," was the reply. "This is a local option town."

The bar was a has-been and nothing more refreshing than pop sparkled or lemonade was stirred.

There is no hotel problem in the town of Campbellford, and for fifty cents the dinner put up by the kitchen department of the Windsor was as nice as one would want.

Again, Campbellford was as orderly as a church meeting, and the show of female beauty was striking.

THE PICNIC.

Ferris Grove was the site chosen for the picnic.

The Almighty was pleased when He made that nook.

Here runs the Trent, with its song of industry and prophecy of future power. Behind lies a wooded hill, and beneath it a bush of maple and beech.

It was in this bush where the people met.

In the bush was a platform.

Around this platform they gathered in thousands.

But there was one disastrous fault, The platform was not large enough. All the faithful could not get on.

It was not high enough by three feet.

Hundreds could not see.

Now, going to church and not being able to see the parson is bad enough, but attending a political meeting and not being able to catch more than an occasional glimpse of the speakers' faces is discouraging.

Some climbed the trees nearby.

Many used their vehicles or autos for impromptu seats.

And here, with the leaves swaying to the wind beneath a sun-kissed sky, the first picnic of the season was opened under the auspices of the Conservatives.

Mr. Borden and his collegues will long remember it on account of the natural beauty of the scene and the warmth of weather and warmth of welcome.

Ferris Grove, the spot is called, and Ferris Grove is about a mile and a half from the town.

The crowd gathered early.

Another procession was formed up town, and soon the pipes announced its arrival.

There were the usual cheers.

What is a picnic without cheers?

C. L. Owen, M.P. for East Northumberland, opened fire.

A PRAYER ANSWERED.

He confessed that he had been praying for a fine day, and made public the fact that his prayers had been answered. He had also prayed for an immense crowd, and again had received a reply in bulk. During his brief stay in Parliament he had learned to respect his leader very much. Mr. Borden was not only the people's friend, but a friend of the Dominion of Canada. There had been great leaders in the past and Mr. Borden was the great leader who would some day lead them to a great victory.

THE CHAIRMAN TAKES A HAND.

Mr. Loucks then welcomed the leader. Mr. Loucks is a fighter. His address was brief and to the point. He said:—

To R. L. Borden, K.C., M.P.

The Liberal-Conservatives of East Northumberland extend to you and your colleagues a most hearty and cordial welcome on this the first occasion on which the people of this district have had the pleasure of meeting you and holding a reception in your honor.

Your services as the leader of your party, both in Parliament and in the country, have always been highly appreciated by the people of this district, and you have always been true to the great principles of the Liberal Conservative party, and we trust sir, that the day is not far distant when you will be called upon to assume the helm of Government and to guide the destinies of this fair Dominion of ours in which we all, irrespective of race or creed, enjoy the fullest liberty, characteristic of constructive statesmanship and of unfailing courage in the advocacy of the basic principles of the Conservatism, such as you possess must of necessity in the near future secure the approval and commendation of the people of Canada, and we have no doubt that when you assume the reigns of Government you will strive to realize the high ideals which you have always stood for in the past.

Situated as we are in the heart of the Central Ontario power belt, we entertain high hopes of the industrial future of this portion of the Province and trust that the day is near when Campbellford will be the hub of one of the great manufacturing centres of the Dominion, and we take pride in showing you and your colleagues the great progress that has already been made in the development of the splendid water powers of this locality.

In conclusion we again wish to assure you of our unswerving loyalty to you as leader of the Liberal-Conservative party of Canada.

Signed on behalf of the Conservatives of East Northumberland.

J. A. LOUCKS,
President.

MONTREAL WANTS TO KNOW WHAT CAUSED THE DISASTER

Seven More Bodies Are Taken Out of Ruins and Completed List Shows That Thirty-Five Persons Lost Their Lives in the Fire.

Montreal, June 15.—Although a gang of a hundred men worked at The Herald ruins all yesterday, but nine bodies have been recovered; four being Laura Amesse, forewoman; Frank Consitt, printer; P. F. Quintal, printer; Juliette Beaudry, and five which have not yet been identified.

As far as can be ascertained there are twenty-six yet under the wreck. In addition to the names published yesterday morning there are the following victims:

Dorothy Ward, aged 16, 1,435 Simard street.

Mary Ann Murphy, 22 St. Patrick street.

Miss Olive Hart, 4 Conway street.

Reuben Morrison, stereotyper.

Messenger Gundy.

A coroner's inquest will be begun to-day on the bodies of the five whose names are unknown.

Everyone is asking the cause of the disaster, and, as might be expected, the inspectors are coming in for a great deal of criticism. It was only the other day that one official stated that Carsley's store could be turned into a hotel all right, and that the walls are all right, while experts who saw Carsley's front wall being veneered with marble a few years ago say it would be a crime to turn the shell into an hotel.

President Brierly is in receipt of telegrams of condolence from all over the country, and yesterday Sir Wilfrid Laurier and several of his colleagues called and expressed their sympathy.

At the meeting of the Board of Control the members called on Mr. Chausse, the building inspector to give his opinion on the disaster. He was, however, unable to give any definite views as to the cause, and the controllers instructed him to start to work on a complete report of the matter.

A great many stories of heroines are reported, but no tribute can be too high for Laura Amesse, the forewoman in the bindery, who lost her life in the fire. Throughout the horrible period of time from the sudden collapse to the time when the last girl came down the great ladder, she kept her presence of mind. When she had seen the last girl climb out of the window and on to the ladder, she returned into the doomed building to seek others whom she could save. It was then that she met her fate. With the flames already scorching her clothing, she urged the young girls to run to safety on the front ledge of the building. She assured the panic-stricken, she comforted the frightened, and spread an atmosphere of calm where terror reigned.

The other girls called frantically at the last for her to follow them. The flames were licking the flooring of the top flat and enveloping all.

"No, girls," she cried in reply, "there are more at the back of the room and I can't leave them," and shaking the fire that was already burning her dress, she dashed into the flames, oblivious of the fact that the floor on to which she ran had given way, and undoubtedly the brave young woman pitched to her death six storeys below, among the ruined mass of debris and seething fire.

Blew Into Gotham.

New York, June 15.—Fred Owens, a 20-year-old aeronaut of Belleville, N.J., brought business to a virtual standstill in Lower Manhattan yesterday by flying across the Hudson River in a dirigible balloon and then attempting to land his craft in the City Hall Park. His dirigible became unmanagable in the vagrant air current between the City Hall and the County Court House and the framework of the gas bag bumped a chimney in the County Court House, bending the frame and putting the propellor out of business.

Owens concluded his morning flying venture when his airship landed in a shade tree in the Bushwick section of Brooklyn, and relief parties were summoned and ladders were raised to take off the aeronaut.

Is the Will In Coffin?

Kingston, June 15.—An order to exhume the body of the late Joseph George, who died May 3, has been granted by Judge Price, to determine if his will is in the coffin. The will has been missing since his death, but it is known that he made a will in 1906. Mrs. George is anxious, as her husband said she would be well provided for. The estate is worth about $30,000. The heirs and expectant beneficiaries declare that the will has been done away with, and will block administration of the estate as long as they can.

Let Out Before Sentence Expired.

Kingston, June 15.—Word has been received from Deputy Attorney-General Cartwright authorizing Governor Corbett of the jail here to release Daniel Graves of Harrowsmith, who some time ago was sentenced for illegal selling of liquor, and accordingly he was released. His sentence would not expire till July 1.

Aviation Injunctions Dissolved.

New York, June 15.—The United States Court of Appeals late yesterday dissolved the temporary injunction against Glenn H. Curtiss and Louis Paulhan, the French aviator, in the suit for infringements on aeroplane patents, brought against them by the Wright Co., controlled by the Wright Brothers.

To Prevent Removal of Records.

Guthrie, Okla., June 15.—Twelve deputy sheriffs have been sworn in and placed about the state house to guard against the removal of the state records to Oklahoma City, where Governor Haskell has established his headquarters.

LAYMEN ARE OUTVOTED

Clericals Rally to the Support of Rev Dr. Jackson.

Toronto, June 15.—By a vote of 130 to 114 the Toronto Methodist Conference yesterday endorsed the resolution of Rev. W. L. Armstrong, seconded by H. L. Lovering of Coldwater, and the heated debate over Rev. George Jackson's book, "Studies in the Old Testament," was brought to a close. The original resolution of Rev. Dr. Cleaver, seconded by B. E. Bull, asking the general conference to exclude so-called "heretical" doctrines as contained in Mr. Jackson's book, was that overruled by the broader worded Armstrong amendment, with a narrow majority of 14. The laymen's vote was more than two to one against the amendment, but the heavy ministerial vote in its favor saved the day for the adherents of Mr. Jackson. The laymen's vote was: Yeas 16, nays 39. The clerical vote was: Yeas 114, nays 7.

Rev. Dr. Armstrong addressed the conference first. He objected to Dr. Cleaver's resolution because it mentioned the name of a brother and a book. "I also object on account of the manner in which the resolution was presented and debated at this conference by men who wished to see the resolution carried," he said. "I do not wish to open up our colleges or pulpits to heresy, but to be sure that we are definite on fundamental lines, on the essential doctrines of our faith.

"But let us not quibble on fine points of discernment when the essential principles are firmly established. I was educated in an ultra-conservative college and yet I never was taught there to refrain from investigating truth with an open mind. I was orthodox up till yesterday; anyhow, Justice Maclaren says I was."

Justice Maclaren: "Don't backslide now."

Dr. Armstrong: "I won't. I have read Dr. Jackson's book without being shocked. It contains as fine con[illegible] paragraphs as were ever uttered in this conference. What is the teaching of the book? I turn to the opinion of Rev. W. T. Davison of Richmond College, England, one of the highest authorities on the Old Testament. He says the addresses are valuable as putting in readable form the gains to faith from studying the methods of modern criticism. Dr. Jackson dwells upon the constructive, not the destructive, element of modern criticism. I am willing, and we all ought to be, to be bound by the essential doctrines of our church, or step out. But as to the settings of truth wherever found, we ought to demand liberty.

Gen. French at the Falls.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 15.—Gen. French, accompanied by Sir H. M. Pellatt, Gen. Lake, Gen. Henderson, Colonels S. B. Lessard and Heward, Major Watt and F. Baird, arrived at Niagara Falls yesterday. After luncheon at the Clifton House, the distinguished soldier visited the different points of interest and took a trip over the Gorge Belt Line, returning to Niagara after dinner last evening.

YOUTH IS STABBED

Quarrel at Oshawa Will Have Fatal Ending.

Oshawa, June 15.—His life hanging by a slender thread, John McAdam, a young man employed in the Roman Catholic convent here, made an ante-mortem statement last night to Magistrate Murton, in which he charged Ben Sheridan, his brother-in-law, well-known locally as a featherweight wrestler, with having stabbed him. Sheridan has disappeared and Chief of Police Alf. Hinds is scouring the country for him. It is thought Sheridan may have started in the direction of Toronto.

The ante-mortem statement of McAdam says:

"I, John McAdam, make the following statement, knowing that I am in peril of my life, from wounds received this day, and believing that I have no chance of recovery.

"I affirm that Sheridan put me out of his house on Saturday last. I worked at the convent gardens, and told him that if he came there I would put him out. He came at six o'clock last night and he struck me with a knife or something sharp which he drew from his pocket. I think I struck him first.

"His brother, William Sheridan, separated us. I felt blood running down my arm, below the armpit. Then I fainted."

Billy Sheridan has considerable reputation as a lightweight wrestler and has appeared in several bouts in Toronto. Ben Sheridan, while employed with his brother at Williams' piano factory, has been doing occasional work at the convent.

McAdams was carried into the convent. An autoist who happened along was sent post-haste for medical aid. He also notified the chief constable and within twenty minutes of the tragedy, Chief Hinds and a party were on the search for Sheridan, but up to midnight without success.

Dr. J. B. Ford, one of the physicians called, said at midnight that the chances of the wounded man's recovery were very slender. The point of the weapon used, apparently a jack-knife, had been deflected after touching the ribs and had penetrated close to the heart.

"He has a chance and that's all," said Dr. Ford. "His pulse is very weak and it is doubtful whether he will live through the night."

McAdams is about 28 years of age and has no relatives here. The Sheridans have been here about a year. Tey are a Scotch family and both young men have borne a good reputation, and have many friends, particularly among followers of athletics.

World's Conference Opens.

Edinburgh, Scotland, June 15.—The world's missionary conference, a representative gathering of Protestant churches, opened yesterday under the presidency of Lord Balfour of Burleigh. There are 1,200 accredited delegates and 2,000 other representatives of churches and missions present. All civilized races are represented.

Yesterday's session was held in the assembly hall of the United Free Church.

LAND SYSTEM IS WRONG; BISHOP ON BRITISH POLITICS

House of Lords Needs Reforming Says Bishop Mills in His Charge to the Synod of the Diocese of Ontario—Bossism in Labor Unions Gets a Roast.

Kingston, June 16.—Bishop Mills delivered his charge Tuesday afternoon at the forty-sixth session of the synod of the diocese of Ontario, dealing with British politics made this reference:

"Half of the House takes an active interest in the affairs of the nation and is composed of the very best type of English life, men of honor, highly intellectual and highly educated, whom England could not do without. The House of Lords, however, should be remodelled; as at present constituted it is independent of, and in no way responsible to, the people.

That the Lords should hold one-fifth of the land area of the United Kingdom, or nearly 17,000,000 acres, which neither they nor their forefathers ever purchased, or ever earned, and pay practically no taxes, and refuse to pay, is a condition that may well cause—as it does—dissatisfaction, and calls loudly for a remedy. This state of things is largely responsible for the degeneracy and slum life of the cities of England.

The House of Commons, however, while nominally representing the people, as a matter of fact, does not always do so. In England, as here, men are chosen for candidates by conventions which have been packed and manipulated.

Dealing with capital and labor, the bishop said: Capital and labor, in this, as in almost every country, is maintaining an armed neutrality, and this neutrality, unfortunately, is constantly being broken. Our sympathies, naturally, go out to the laboring classes, and would always remain with them if it were not that they sometimes allow themselves to be made mere tools in the hands of men who have engineered themselves into the positions of heads of unions, and as such—even for the gratification of a whim, or to get notoriety, or to show their importance and authority. The arbitrary and unreasonable character of the rules of some labor unions are such as to alienate the sympathies of all thinking men. The very rights they pretend to uphold they will not allow to those who do not belong to the union. If a man does not conscientiously see his way to join the union they will not allow him to work; he and his family may starve. Now, the underlying principle of such a course is robbery, and the carrying of it out would be murder.

Niagara Holds Carnival.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 15.—Niagara's first international carnival was carried to a successful conclusion last night, after attracting 75,000 visitors to the city. Special trains were run on almost all lines.

The morning was occupied by a mammoth military and fraternal parade. Picked corps of Canadian militia from Camp Niagara paraded on the American side under arms with United States soldiers. Major Carpenter, R.C.R., was in command. The usual carnival features were introduced, making the day the greatest celebration in the history of the Niagara frontier.

Sorry, No Harm Meant.

Berlin, June 15.—The Vatican has replied to the protest of the Prussian Government against the encyclical issued by the Pope on the occasion of the tercentennial of the canonization of St. Charles Borromeo. The reply disavows any intention of offending German Protestants, and says that the encyclical is withdrawn so far as Germany is concerned.

Formed "Imperial Mission."

London, June 15.—The Imperial Pioneers are to be organized on a permanent basis. At a meeting at the United Empire Club a council was elected representing Britain, Canada, Australasia and South Africa, to have the new organization, which is called the Imperial Mission. A campaign has been arranged for this summer and autumn.

Will Heed the Warning.

Ottawa, June 15.—As a result of The Montreal Herald tragedy, the building inspector here will examine all water towers on Ottawa buildings, but it is thought they are all well constructed and supported sufficiently.

Baden-Powell to Arrive August 1.

Ottawa, June 15.—Gen. Baden-Powell, the distinguished soldier, is expected in Canada in August next to inspect the boy scouts. On the even of his departure for England, Earl Grey named Capt. R. J. Birdwhistle, secretary of the Dominion Rifle Association, to be general secretary for the Dominion of Canada branch of Gen. Baden-Powell's boy scouts. This work has been performed for some time past by Lord Lanesborough, military secretary of His Excellency. It is reported that interest in the movement is becoming more general and Dominion and provincial councils are being appointed to look after the work.

Sifton Vigorously Opposed.

Edmonton, Alta., June 15.—Vermilion Conservatives nominated John Clarke, a prosperous farmer of that district, to contest the riding against Premier Sifton on June 29.

The convention was largely attended and a campaign is being organized in the district, with the assistance of Edmonton Conservatives, who were well represented at the convention on Monday night. The Conservatives state they will put up a strong fight.

THE BIG PICNIC

At Campbellford yesterday Mr. R. L. Borden and his colleagues were given a magnificent reception. The issues of the hour were taken up and strongly dealt with. The picnic was a great success and those under whose auspices it was held, are to be congratulated.

The day, fine weather, the man and the people all met, and how could it be anything but a success.

O. S. AND I. D.

The T.A.S. Society is a strong organization, and a second lodge was formed here in Peterborough a few days ago. The Knights of Columbus are growing. The Masons are hoary with age, and the I.O.O.F. emblem is seen all over America.

The O.S. & I.D. is a strong organization, and nearly all the members are in excellent standing.

Reference is made to the Order of Outside Saints and Inside Devils. There is a member in the block, and perhaps one in the home. As Outside Saints they know the role well. They are excessively polite, and maintain a fine demeanor under very trying circumstances. They are marked for their suave and polished ways. If he is a man, he is known as a jovial fellow, and when it comes his turn to treat, he is always there with the price.

He is often seen working for the benefit of his fellow men, at the lodge or in the union, and in the church his voice is not silent. He is very gallant. Presto, change!

He enters his home, and tears the mask aside. His coffee is poor, the toast is cold or burned, the butter is bad, and the whole meal is rotten. The children are noisy and the wife extravagant. However, she darns the socks, does the washing, lugs the tubs upstairs and down, brings up the coal, empties the ashes, empties the garbage, and sweeps the walk.

"Shut your mouth," He is only talking to his wife.

"If you kids don't stop making such a noise I'll hit you a bat on the jaw," He is merely addressing the children.

Supper over, he puts on his hat and coat and goes out to spend the evening, and the house is free to breathe once more.

No murderer of life, but of love, is he. He doesn't kill or maim bodies, but he bruises feelings, and wounds hearts, is a first-rate Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, and a sterling member of the O.S. & I.D.

And is she a female member of this order? A friend calls.

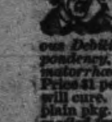
Could any language be more fine? Could any voice be more gentle? "Isn't she just lovely?" "She is indeed." It is the voice of the callers after they depart.

And the lovely one goes to the kitchen and spanks one of the youngsters for making such a noise when she has company, and reprimands the maid for not keeping them quiet. She handles the cash in that house, for her husband is but an automatic machine and he delivers his pay to her.

Her voice is the voice of a dictator when no one from outside is near, and all step lively when she speaks, and many times the youngsters go to bed hungry and supperless for some childish offence. "I'm so glad to see you."

In her heart she is sorry they have called, and when they go the neighbor knows their history. Yes, the order of O.S. & I.D. is flourishing, and will not die so long as the race lasts.

One of the striking points in the Liberal Conservative platform is the reform of the method of getting entrance to the Civil Service. This should be secured by examinations in all departments. No pull, just brains and ability should count. Men who could not make salt for their porridge are getting hard cash for warming soft seats, or writing in some big book, or dusting off some bench, or sweeping some floor, or perhaps they merely look wise, bow and open and shut some big door. There are plenty of these fellows at Ottawa.



Wood's Phosphodine, The Great English Remedy. Tones and invigorates the whole nervous system, makes new Blood in old Veins. SKEWERS.
Ottawa Journal.

The wooden skewers in roasts of meat, put there to bind it together, in the course of a year costs New York $100,000. That is, the city pays that sum yearly for the best meat and gets wooden skewers instead. As New York is about forty times the size of Ottawa, it stands to reason that Ottawa yearly pays $2,500 of good money intended to purchase meat, for these pine slivers.

THE JOY RIDER.
Galt Reformer.

A Pennsylvania magistrate fines scorching automobilists on the basis of their license numbers; thus if the unfortunate man has a machine numbered 5678, his fine is made to correspond, or $56.78. How delightfully simple! But how unlucky for the fellows with the big numbers.

EMPEROR WILLIAM.
Cable Despatch.

"I often read the Bible. It is a pleasure to read it every night. A Bible lies on a table at my bedside. I cannot understand how so many people exist who do not attend to God's Word. It is the source from which I draw strength and light."

The Emperor is also represented as saying that he liked giving Bibles to Catholics. The essential difference between them and Protestants was that the latter had only one mediator between God and themselves, while the Catholics had many mediators.

BAILIEBORO

Special to the Review.

Bailieboro, June 13.—Having survived the exciting passage of Halley's comet, and being almost fully recovered from the ill-effects arising therefrom, our inhabitants have again settled down to their usual routine of life in peace and happiness without fear of brushing against our travelling friend for another three score and fifteen years.

Mr. and Mrs Samuel Herriott, of Toronto, have been renewing old acquaintances in this section during the past week.

The representatives of the Dominion Lightning Rod Company, of Dundas, Ont., have been very busy in this section for some time wiring barns and houses.

The annual Sunday school excursion held in connection with the Bewdley Baptist church was held on Friday, June 10th. The steamboat "Otonabee" conveyed the large crowd of merry-makers to Peterborough, where the day was spent to the best advantage by all.

It is reported that work on the new wharf, which is to be built at the eastern end of concession A, Monaghan South, will [illegible] near future. We all look forward to his extensive public work, which has been so energetically pushed by the good Tories of this settlement.

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

The Trades and Labor Council will meet on Thursday night next, in the Catholic Order of Foresters Hall, Hunter street, over Lynch's drug store. As business of importance will come up for discussion a large attendance is requested.

24th Field Battery

All members of the above-named corps, and those wishing to enlist in same, are requested to assemble at the Armories on Tuesday evening, 14th inst, at 7.30 o'clock, sharp.

Gun drill.

THE INDIAN'S PASSING

FEW POOR THOUSANDS ARE ALL THAT ARE LEFT.

The Wilds of the Northwest and British Columbia Make Up a Large Part of the Aboriginal Population —Reserves Are Usually Much Larger Than Their Inhabitants Would Justify—Victims of Tuberculosis.

Three centuries ago the Indian population of Canada, though never dense, was considerable enough to present a very real hindrance in the settlement of the country by Europeans, writes Emily P. Weaver in London Graphic. What the troops of savages lacked in numbers they made up in extraordinary mobility, and in ferocity weakened by no sentiment of pity even for the most helpless of non-combatants. Thus to the pioneers it seemed that their name was "Legion." Yet neither their fighting qualities nor their almost unexampled powers of endurance could save them from the fate that awaits those unable to readjust themselves to new conditions. The white man's firearms and "fire-water" hastened the destruction begun by their own fearful feuds, and to-day there are in the Dominion only 111,043 Indians.

Nevertheless, taking the Canadian Indians as a whole, their numbers are not now decreasing. The latest census shows some excess of births over deaths, and a somewhat larger general increase accounted for in part by immigration, and additions to the tribes by marriages. On the other hand, besides the Indians so-called, there are in Canada many half-breeds. There are also others, of mixed blood, who have been absorbed in the white population.

The few poor thousands of Indians, representing the savage hordes of old time are divided into a multiplicity of tribes speaking different languages, such as the Micmacs of the east, the Six Nation Indians of Ontario (descended from the redoubtable Iroquois, who proved such a scourge to the early French settlers) and the Crees and Blackfoot Indians of the western plains.

As might be expected, the vast wild province of British Columbia contains more than a fifth of the total Indian population of the Dominion, but (what at first sight is more surprising) the old long-settled province of Ontario contains nearly as many. The explanation is that immediately after the American Revolution large "reserves" were set apart in the newly organized province (then called Upper Canada) for the Indians who had proved loyal. They were not permitted to alienate these lands, or there is little doubt that they would have been despoiled of them long ago, for they have never been a provident people.

The reserves are often of great extent. The Six Nation Reserve on the Grand River, near Brantford (with a population of 4,275 persons), consists of about 444,000 acres, whilst some of the reserves in Saskatchewan and Alberta, set apart for comparatively small bands, comprise from fifty to a hundred square miles. The Government has generally respected the claim of the Indians to the soil, and it has been customary, as a preliminary to opening a district to settlement, for the authorities to make treaties with the Indians, to set apart reserves for them, and to give them compensation in the shape of annuities, rations, grants for education, etc. Quite recently many bands in the west have thus entered "into treaty," and now scarcely one-fifth of the total Indian population (and these chiefly in the extreme north) retain their old status.

Whether under treaty or not, the Indians to some extent receive from Government a kind of paternal care as "the wards of the nation," and are subject to various special laws, such as that, for instance, which absolutely prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquor to an Indian. Doubtless some of the race find these benevolently intended restrictions galling. A few of the more able and industrious, by fulfilling certain conditions, gain their enfranchisement as ordinary citizens, but the agents who have the oversight of the reserves describe the Indians as generally lacking in ambition.

As of old, the intermittent activities of hunting and fishing are more attractive to them than steady labor, though in the more settled districts they are obliged to turn to other occupations (such as farming, lumbering, making tubs and baskets, and fancy articles for sale to tourists), and the agents report a gradual improvement in their methods of work and mode of life. In the west, the red men still depend for their livelihood mainly upon hunting, fishing and trapping, but instead of wearing the furs of the animals they kill, and sheltering themselves in tents of buffalo skins, they dress in manufactured goods far less warm and durable, and make their tents of cotton, too thin to keep out either cold or damp.

Tuberculosis is very prevalent amongst them, and in some tribes the death-rate from this cause is extraordinarily high, but where they live under fairly favorable conditions they show no signs of dying out.

The more civilized Indians have lost the picturesque (and terrible) characteristics of their ancestors, who turned the early history of Canada into pages of wild romance and blood-curdling tragedy. Chiefs in bearskins, braves in war-paint, tomahawks, peace-pipes, and belts of wampum have been swept from the scene. In their place we have soberly clad farmers, respectable housewives, little wooden houses, churches, schools, and on some reserves even agricultural societies and temperance leagues. Only now and then (as, for instance, on market day in Halifax, when one stands before a group of lank-haired basket-sellers, crouched on the ground with an air of stolid indifference to any possible purchaser) does one realize that even yet the Indian is not quite one with the white communities which till his old hunting grounds.

The Vatican has protested against Spain's new edict of toleration to non-Catholic societies.

Traffic Facilities Improved.

Winnipeg, June 15.—Remarkable activity prevails on the Canadian railroads. Some of the chief officials of the companies say that not only has the passenger traffic taken a tremendous leap forward, but also that the freight traffic was working employes to the limit at all points.

In answer to the [illegible] as to whether the traffic was greater this year than in the same period last year, the reply was "I should say so." When the harvesting is over and the wheat goes east, the carriage facilities of the companies are expected to be taxed to almost their full capacity, and with a view to seeing that if possible no delay will occur, several hundred new cars will be requisitioned. All railway men expect a bumper crop, and they are, metaphorically speaking, starting to roll up their sleeves to deal with its transportation.

The Mystery of The Yellow Room

By GASTON LEROUX

COPYRIGHT, 1908, BY BRENTANO'S

It was at the Bar cafe that I became intimately acquainted with him. Criminal lawyers and journalists are not enemies; the former need advertisement, the latter information. We chatted together, and I soon warmed toward him—his intelligence was so keen and so original, and he had a quality of thought such as I have never found in any other person.

Nearly two years passed in this way, and the better I knew him the more I learned to love him, for in spite of his careless extravagance I had discovered in him what was, considering his age, an extraordinary seriousness of mind. Accustomed as I was to seeing him gay, and, indeed, often too gay, I would many times find him plunged in the deepest melancholy. I tried then to question him as to the cause of this change of humor, but each time he laughed and made me no answer. One day, having questioned him about his parents, of whom he never spoke, he left me, pretending not to have heard what I said.

While things were in this state between us the famous case of "the yellow room" took place. It was this case which was to rank him as the leading newspaper reporter and to obtain for him the reputation of being the greatest detective in the world.

Rouletabille entered my room on the morning of the 26th of October, 1892. He was looking redder than usual, and his eyes were bulging out of his head, as the phrase is, and altogether he appeared to be in a state of extreme excitement. He waved the Matin with a trembling hand and cried:

"Well, my dear Sainclair, have you read it?"

"The Glandier crime?"

"Yes; 'the yellow room!' What do you think of it?"

"I think that it must have been the devil or 'the Bete du Bon Dieu' that committed the crime."

"Be serious!"

"Well, I don't much believe in murderers who make their escape through walls of solid brick. I think Daddy Jacques did wrong to leave behind him the weapon with which the crime was committed, and, as he occupied the attic immediately above Mlle. Stangerson's room, the builder's job ordered by the examining magistrate will give us the key of the enigma, and it will not be long before we learn by what natural trap or by what secret door the old fellow was able to slip in and out and return immediately to the laboratory to M. Stangerson without his absence being noticed. That, of course, is only an hypothesis."

Rouletabille sat down in an armchair, lit his pipe, which he was never without, smoked for a few minutes in silence—no doubt to calm the excitement which visibly dominated him—and then replied:

"No trap will be found, and the mystery of the yellow room will become more and more mysterious. That's why it interests me. The examining magistrate is right. Nothing stranger than this crime has ever been known."

"Have you any idea of the way by which the murderer escaped?" I asked.

"None," replied Rouletabille, "none, for the present. But I have an idea as to the revolver. The murderer did not use it."

"Good heavens! By whom, then, was it used?"

"Why, by Mlle. Stangerson."

"I don't understand, or, rather, I have never understood," I said.

Rouletabille shrugged his shoulders.

"Is there nothing in this article in the Matin by which you were particularly struck?"

"Nothing. I have found the whole of the story it tells equally strange."

"Well, but—the locked door—with the key on the inside?"

"That's the only perfectly natural thing in the whole article."

"Really! And the bolt?"

"The bolt?"

"Yes, the bolt, also inside the room, a still further protection against entry. Mlle. Stangerson took quite extraordinary precautions. It is clear to me that she feared some one. That was why she took such precautions—even Daddy Jacques' revolver—without telling him of it. No doubt she didn't wish to alarm anybody and, least of all, her father. What she dreaded took place, and she defended herself. There was a struggle, and she used the revolver skillfully enough to wound the assassin in the hand, which explains the impression on the wall and on the door of the large, blood stained hand of the man who was searching for a means of exit from the chamber. But she didn't fire soon enough to avoid the terrible blow on the right temple."

"Then the wound on the temple was not done with the revolver?"

"The paper doesn't say it was, and I don't think it was, because logically it appears to me that the revolver was used by Mlle. Stangerson against the assassin. Now, what weapon did the murderer use? The blow on the temple seems to show that the murderer wished to stun Mlle. Stangerson after he had unsuccessfully tried to strangle her. He must have known that the attic was inhabited by Daddy Jacques and that was one of the reasons, I think, why he must have used a quiet weapon—a life preserver or a hammer."

"All that doesn't explain how the murderer got out of the yellow room," I observed.

"Evidently," replied Rouletabille, rising, "and that is what has to be explained. I am going to the Chateau du Glandier and have come to see whether you will go with me."

"I?"

"Yes, my boy, I want you. The Epoque has definitely intrusted this case to me, and I must clear it up as quickly as possible."

"But in what way can I be of any use to you?"

"M. Robert Darzac is at the Chateau du Glandier."

"That's true. His despair must be boundless."

"I must have a talk with him."

I knew M. Robert Darzac from having been of great service to him in a civil action while I was acting as secretary to Maitre Barbet Delatour. M. Robert Darzac, who was at that time about forty years of age, was a professor of physics at the Sorbonne. He was intimately acquainted with the Stangersons and after an assiduous seven years' courtship of the daughter had been on the point of marrying her. In spite of the fact that she had become, as the phrase goes, "a person of a certain age," she was still remarkably good looking.

While I was dressing I called out to Rouletabille, who was impatiently moving about my sitting room:

"Have you any idea as to the murderer's station in life?"

"Yes," he replied. "I think if he isn't a man in society, he is at least a man belonging to the upper class. But that, again, is only an impression."

"What has led you to form it?"

"Well, the greasy cap, the common handkerchief and the marks of the rough boots on the floor," he replied.

"I understand," I said. "Murderers don't leave traces behind them which tell the truth."

"We shall make something out of you yet, my dear Sainclair," concluded Rouletabille.

CHAPTER III.

"A Man Has Passed Like a Shadow Through the Blinds."

HALF an hour later Rouletabille and I were on the platform of the Orleans station, awaiting the departure of the train which was to take us to Epinay-sur-Orge.

On the platform we found M. de Marquet and his registrar, who represented the judicial court of Corbeil. M. de Marquet had spent the night in Paris, assisting in the final rehearsal at the Scala of a little play of which he was the unknown author, signing himself simply "Castigat Ridendo."

M. Marquet was beginning to be a "noble old gentleman." Generally he was extremely polite and full of gay humor and in all his life had had but one passion—that of dramatic art.

Because of the mystery which shrouded it the case of the yellow room was certain to fascinate so theatrical a mind.

At the moment of meeting him I heard M. de Marquet say to the registrar with a sigh:

"I hope, my dear M. Maleine, this builder with his pickax will not destroy so fine a mystery."

"Have no fear," replied M. Maleine. "His pickax may demolish the pavilion perhaps, but it will leave our case intact. I have sounded the walls and examined the ceiling and floor, and I know all about it. I am not to be deceived."

Having thus reassured his chief, M. Maleine, with a discreet movement of the head, drew M. de Marquet's attention to us. The face of that gentleman clouded, and as he saw Rouletabille approaching, hat in hand, he sprang into one of the empty carriages, saying half aloud to his registrar as he did so, "Above all, no journalists!"

M. Maleine replied in the same tone, "I understand," and then tried to prevent Rouletabille from entering the same compartment with the examining magistrate.

"Excuse me, gentlemen, this compartment is reserved."

"I am a journalist, monsieur, engaged on the Epoque," said my young friend, with a great show of gesture and politeness, "and I have a word or two to say to M. de Marquet."

"Monsieur is very much engaged with the inquiry he has in hand."

"Ah! His inquiry, pray believe me, is absolutely a matter of indifference to me. I am no scavenger of odds and ends," he went on, with infinite contempt in his lower lip; "I am a theatrical reporter, and this evening I shall have to give a little account of the play at the Scala."

"Get in, sir, please," said the registrar.

Rouletabille was already in the compartment. I went in after him and seated myself by his side. The registrar followed and closed the carriage door.

M. de Marquet looked at him.

"Ah, sir," Rouletabille began, "you must not be angry with M. Maleine. It is not with M. de Marquet that I desire to have the honor of speaking, but with M. 'Castigat Ridendo.' Permit me to congratulate you—personally, as well as the writer for the Epoque." And Rouletabille, having first introduced me, introduced himself.

M. de Marquet, with a nervous gesture, caressed his beard into a point.

"The work of the dramatic author may interfere," he said, after a slight hesitation, "with that of the magistrate, especially in a province where one's labors are little more than routine."

"Oh, you may rely on my discretion!" cried Rouletabille.

The train was in motion.

"We have started!" said the examining magistrate, surprised at seeing us still in the carriage.

"Yes, monsieur, truth has started," said Rouletabille, smiling amiably, "on its way to the Chateau du Glandier. A fine case, M. de Marquet, a fine case!"

"An obscure, incredible, unfathomable, inexplicable affair, and there is only one thing I fear, M. Rouletabille, that the journalists will be trying to explain it."

My friend felt this a rap on his knuckles.

"Yes," he said simply, "that is to be feared. They meddle in everything. As for my interest, monsieur, I only referred to it by mere chance—the mere chance of finding myself in the same train with you and in the same compartment of the same carriage."

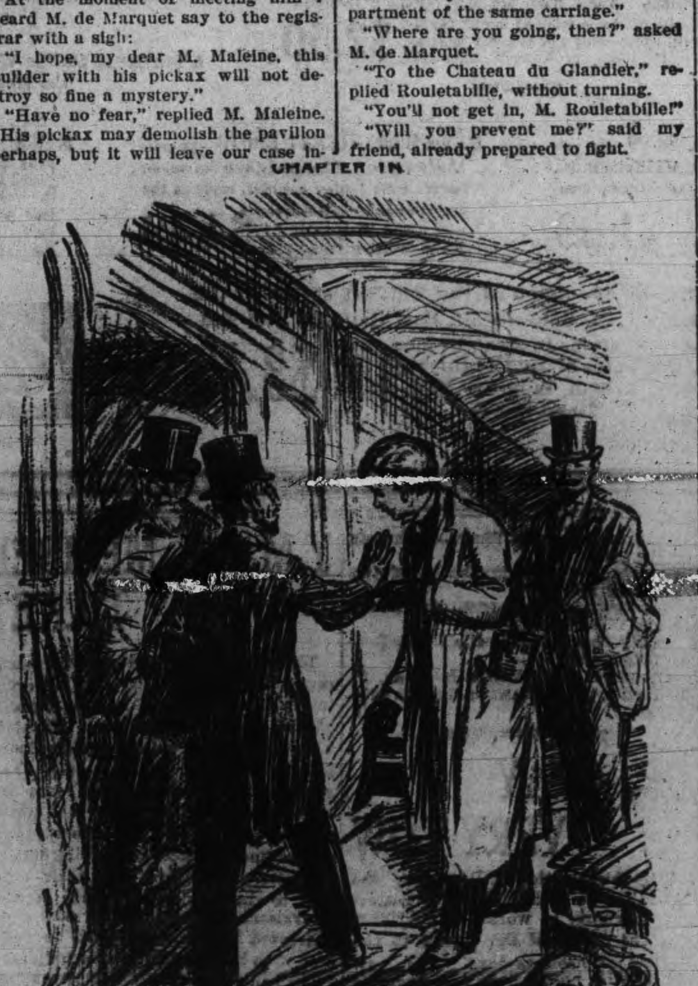
"Where are you going, then?" asked M. de Marquet.

"To the Chateau du Glandier," replied Rouletabille, without turning.

"You'll not get in, M. Rouletabille!"

"Will you prevent me?" said my friend, already prepared to fight.

CHAPTER III.



"EXCUSE ME, GENTLEMEN—THIS COMPARTMENT IS RESERVED."

"Not I! I like the press and journalists too well to be in any way disagreeable to them, but M. Stangerson has given orders for his door to be closed against everybody, and it is well guarded. Not a journalist was able to pass through the gate of the Glandier yesterday."

M. de Marquet compressed his lips and seemed ready to relapse into obstinate silence. He only relaxed a little when Rouletabille no longer left him in ignorance of the fact that we were going to the Glandier for the purpose of shaking hands with an "old and intimate friend," M. Robert Darzac—a man whom Rouletabille had perhaps seen once in his life.

"Poor Robert!" continued the young reporter, "this dreadful affair may be his death—he is so deeply in love with Mlle. Stangerson. It is to be hoped that Mlle. Stangerson's life will be saved."

"Let us hope so. Her father told me yesterday that if she does not recover it will not be long before he joins her in the grave. What an incalculable loss to science his death would be!"

"The wound on her temple is serious, is it not?"

"Evidently; but by a wonderful chance it has not proved mortal. The blow was given with great force."

"Then it was not with the revolver she was wounded," said Rouletabille, glancing at me in triumph.

M. de Marquet appeared greatly embarrassed.

"I didn't say anything, I don't want to say anything, I will not say anything," he said. And he turned toward his registrar as if he no longer knew us.

But Rouletabille was not to be so easily shaken off. He moved nearer to the examining magistrate and, drawing a copy of the Matin from his pocket, he showed it to him and said:

"There is one thing, monsieur, which I may inquire of you without committing an indiscretion. You have, of course, seen the account given in the Matin? It is absurd, is it not?"

"Not in the slightest, monsieur."

"What! The yellow room has but one barred window, the bars of which have not been moved, and only one door, which had to be broken open, and the assassin was not found!"

"That's so, monsieur; that's so. That's how the matter stands."

Rouletabille said no more, but plunged into thought. A quarter of an hour thus passed.

Coming back to himself again, he said, addressing the magistrate:

"How did Mlle. Stangerson wear her hair on that evening?"

"I don't know," replied M. de Marquet.

"That's a very important point," said Rouletabille. "Her hair was done up in bands, wasn't it? I feel sure that on that evening, the evening of the crime, she had her hair arranged in bands."

"Then you are mistaken, M. Rouletabille," replied the magistrate. "Mlle. Stangerson that evening had her hair drawn up in a knot on the top of her head, her usual way of arranging it, her forehead completely uncovered. I can assure you, for we have carefully examined the wound. There was no blood on the hair, and the arrangement of it has not been disturbed since the crime was committed."

"You are sure? You are sure that on the night of the crime she had not her hair in bands?"

"Quite sure," the magistrate continued, smiling, "because I remember the doctor saying to me while he was examining the wound: 'It is a great pity Mlle. Stangerson was in the habit of drawing her hair back from her forehead. If she had worn it in bands the blow she received on the temple would have been weakened.' It seems strange to me that you should attach so much importance to this point."

"Oh, if she had not her hair in bands I give it up," said Rouletabille, with a despairing gesture.

"And was the wound on her temple a bad one?" he asked presently.

"Terrible."

"With what weapon was it made?"

"That is a secret of the investigation."

"Have you found the weapon—whatever it was?"

The magistrate did not answer.

"And the wound in the throat?"

Here the examining magistrate readily confirmed the decision of the doctor that, if the murderer had pressed her throat a few seconds longer, Mlle. Stangerson would have died of strangulation.

"The affair as reported in the Matin," said Rouletabille eagerly, "seems to me more and more inexplicable. Can you tell me, monsieur, how many openings there are in the pavilion? I mean doors and windows."

"There are five," replied Monsieur de Marquet, after having coughed once [illegible] no longer resisting the desire he felt to talk of the whole of the incredible mystery of the affair he was investigating. "There are five, of which the door of the vestibule is the only entrance to the pavilion—a door always automatically closed, which cannot be opened, either from the outer or inside, except with the two special keys which are never out of the possession of either Daddy Jacques or M. Stangerson. Mlle. Stangerson had no need for me, since Daddy Jacques lodged in the pavilion and because, during the daytime, she never left her father. When they, all four, rushed into the yellow room, after breaking open the door of the laboratory, the door in the vestibule remained closed as usual and of the two keys for opening it Daddy Jacques had one in his pocket and M. Stangerson the other. As to the windows of the pavilion, there are four, the one window of the yellow room and those of the laboratory looking out on to the country, the window in the vestibule looking into the park."

"It is by that window that he escaped from the pavilion!" cried Rouletabille.

"How do you know that?"

"How? Oh, the thing is simple enough! As soon as he found he could not escape by the door of the pavilion his only way out was by the window in the vestibule, unless he could pass through a grated window. The window of the yellow room is secured by iron bars, because it looks out upon the open country; the two windows of the laboratory have to be protected in like manner for the same reason. As the murderer got away I conceive that he found a window that was not barred—that of the vestibule, which opens on to the park—that is to say, into the interior of the estate. There's not much magic in all that."

"Yes," said M. de Marquet, "but what you have not guessed is that this single window in the vestibule, though it has no iron bars, has solid iron blinds. Now, these iron blinds have remained fastened by their iron latch, and yet we have proof that the murderer made his escape from the pavilion by that window! Traces of blood on the inside wall and on the blinds as well as on the floor, and footmarks, of which I have taken the measurements, attest the fact that the murderer made his escape that way. But, then, how did he do it, seeing that the blinds remained fastened on the inside? He passed through them like a shadow. But what is more bewildering than all, is that it is impossible to form any idea as to how the murderer got out of the yellow room or how he got across the laboratory to reach the vestibule!"

"Could that window have been closed and refastened after the flight of the assassin?" asked Rouletabille.

"That is what occurred to me for a moment, but it would imply an accomplice or accomplices, and I don't see"—

After a short silence he added:

"Ah, if Mlle. Stangerson were only well enough today to allow of her being questioned!"

Rouletabille, following up his thought, asked:

"And the attic? There must be some opening to that?"

He came to Peterborough in 1849 with his first wife, who was a German lady. After a short residence in town he removed to his home on the Gravel road, North Monaghan, and lived there until last December, when he moved to the city. His wife having died in 1880, he married Miss Greenhow, who survives him. Funeral of Patrick Hogan

The funeral of the late Patrick Hogan took place on Friday, June 3rd, from his late home, lot 9, 7th concession of Douro, to St. Joseph's church, where solemn Requiem Mass was sung by Father McFadden, and thence to the cemetery. The pallbearers were three brothers, Frank, Edward and Albert and his two uncles, P. Hogan, of Douro, and J. Brick, of Ennismore.

The large funeral cortege bespoke the esteem in which the deceased was held. He was beloved and respected by all for his many estimable qualities, and his sudden death cast a gloom over the entire community.

His ever genial presence shall long be missed among the public but longer still among his own beloved, where he was known as a dutiful son and loving brother.

TWELVE BURNED TO DEATH AT NIAGARA

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 15.—A terrible holocaust of human life occurred at Falls View early this morning. Nearly 150 Hungarian laborers employed in the Ontario Power Works, have been housed in a long wooden shack, situated behind the Falls View office, where they slept in bunks huddled together.

This morning at two o'clock the shack was discovered to be on fire, and before the sleeping occupants could be got out twelve of them were burned to death. Three others, a man, a woman and a child, badly burned, were removed to the hospital.

BRILLIANT LAWN FETE UNDER AUSPICES OF ALL SAINTS'

The beautiful grounds surrounding the home of Mrs. A. L. Davis, Blemont avenue, was the scene last night of a brilliant fete, given under the auspicies of All Saints' church. As early as 8 o'clock there was a large crowd on hand, and the demands for ice cream and lemonade were only filled through the untiring efforts of the young ladies, who, in their pretty gowns, were instrumental in making the entertainment a complete success.

The 57th Regiment band was on hand and discoursed popular music in their very fine style. May pole dances were given by the younger members of the church, and they made a very pretty scene, the red and blue ribbons of the May pole contrasting very prettily against the white dresses of the girls.

The booths were in charge of the following ladies:—

Tea booth—Mrs. Pearce, Mrs. Brewer and Mrs. Chas. Sisson.

Candy booth—Mollie Blois and Bessie Brightman.

Ice cream tent—Misses L. Rush, A. Melleville, Ruth Dawson and twenty others.

DR. GRAY VERY LOW

That the condition of Dr. Gray, who was taken to Nicholls Hospital yesterday morning, is worse, if anything, was the report of Dr. Young to the Review at noon to-day. The patient is still unconscious and there is but a slim chance for his recovery.

Our idea of nerve is that possessed by the man who would ask to borrow an automobile.

When two very young men meet one of them is apt to say to the other: "How are you, old man?" But old men always call each other "boys."

Y.M.C.A. MEMBERSHIP TICKETS ARE NOW $5.00

There was a very enthusiastic meeting of the Board of Directors last evening in the local Y.M.C.A. The reports of the several committees indicated very plainly that things are in a flourishing condition. This is the first summer for a number of years in which the association has had a full staff of officers, and the effect is that all the lines of work are making steady progress. The board gave their consent to the making of several needed alterations in the building, and also consented to allow the staff to proceed with brightening up the building.

The general secretary was instructed to draw up a resolution to forward to Mr. E. R. Wood, formerly a resident of this city, congratulating him on the successful termination of the recent financial campaign held in connection with the Toronto association.

The Membership Committee asked permission of the Board to reduce the membership fee from $6 to $5, to take effect at once. This was agreed to, and now the committee are out after members on this new basis. It was also agreed that there should be a summer membership fee to cover the months of June, July, August and September, admitting to all the privileges of the association for $2. This is to enable the men who are in the city only during the summer to enjoy the privileges while there.

Mr. Louis Mendel has several pictures on exhibition that are attracting much attention. One in H. S. STORIES AS TO CAUSE CONFLICT

A small blaze that started in the editorial room of the Examiner gave the firemen an early morning Marathon this morning.

Mr. Norman Creeper, a member of the Examiner night gang, smelled the smoke, and, rushing down stairs, heroically smashed the glass in the front door, and through this opening Mr. Creeper crept out. Some say that it was only for the purpose of letting out the smoke that he smashed the glass, but the general opinion is favorable to the other theory.

Cigarette stubs are said to have been the cause of the infant blaze. The big smoke of the Examiner staff emphatically denies this, and says he distinctly remembers walking over to the Hunter street bridge before he went home, and dropping the butt of the last Egyptian rag he smoked into the river.

The end of the desk fronting onto the gap that divided the reporters from the city editor is extensively charred, the wall has been given a black eye at the point of hte fire, and the copy chute has been melted to such an extent that communication is cut off with the news room. However, the paper will contain as much matter to-night as usual.

THE MULHERN--BURRITT NUPTIALS

At two o'clock this afternoon in St. John's church, with Rev. Canon Davidson officiating, the marriage of Miss Frances D. Burritt, eldest daughter of Mr. D. H Burritt, to Mr. Alexander H. Mulhern, the eldest son of Mr. Henry A. Mulhern, manager of the Central Milling Co., was solemnized. The maid of honor was Miss Muriel Burritt, sister of the bride, and the bridesmaids were Miss Irene Perks, Ilene Fair and Geraldine King. The groom was supported by Mr. Hague Sawers.

The bridal party entered the beautifully decorated church to the strains of the wedding march played by Mr. R. J. Devey. The bride was given away by her father. WEDDING BELLS

PATTERSON—SHEARER.

A happy event took place yesterday afternoon at 343 McDonnel street, when Miss Nettie Shearer and Mr. Norman Patterson, both of Otonabee, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. E A. Pearson.

At 3.30 o'clock the bride entered the perlor leaning on the arm of her brother-in-law, Mr. John G. Hardill, to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Madge Shaw, cousin of the bride. She looked charming in a dress of white etiste with trimmings of baby Irish lace. The ceremony was performed under a beautiful bridal arch of white roses and lillies of the valley.

Miss Maud Easson, a cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid and was prettily attired in a gown of pink silk.

The groom was supported by his brother. Mr. Norman Patterson.

Little Margaret Shearer, dressed in pink silk, and carrying a large bouquet of pink and white roses, made a very pretty flower girl.

After the ceremony the guests partook of a very dainty luncheon. Mr. Thomas Hooper catered.

Bishop In a Donkey Cart.

One of the best stories told regarding Bishop Barry, whose ... was announced recently, relates how on one occasion he had a good ... to travel in order to keep an appointment at Brentford, but for some time he failed to find a vehicle to convey him to the place of meeting. Then a costermonger appeared in sight, and, learning of the bishop's difficulty, modestly offered him a lift. With equal modesty the prelate accepted, and the sight of a past Primate of Australia riding in the humblest vehicle known filled many persons with astonishment as the barrow and its strangely-contrasted occupants neared its destination. One of the bishop's first tasks was publicly to express his thanks to the costermonger for enabling him to fulfill his engagement.

Small Boat Overwhelmed.

A very sad drowning accident occurred the other morning at Scalloway. A small open boat returning from the haddock fishing was passing at what was thought to be a safe distance from the Brethren Reef, when she was suddenly overwhelmed by an enormous sea, and sank almost immediately. Of the four men in the boat two were drowned; the others managed to hold on to an oar and a buoy until rescued.

SPORTLETS

There is discord in the ranks of the Pittsburg champions, so a report says. The story is that Hans Wagner and Miller are sore on Jack Flynn, and have tried to make his life at first bag as unpleasant as possible by wide throws and remarks. Wagner and Miller want Bud Thorpe retained on the team and both have openly accused Clarke of having favored Flynn because he and his first sacker are members of the same lodge.

Bob Fitzsimmons and Tommy Burns have left Australia en route for the Jeffries-Johnson battle ground. Other attractions on board are Bill Lang, Boer Unholz and Hugh D. McIntosh.

Thomas Sharkey, the ex-sailor and pugilist, has championship ambitions and feeling that something may happen to Johnson before the fight, he has come out with the statement that he and a friend and $25,000 will be on hand to fill the breach, if necessary.

In Jacksonville, Fla., there is a band which goes under the name of the Jeffries Band. The organization boasts of three Jeffries and four Johnsons as members.

Tommy Leach, Fred Clarke and Hans Wagner have been playing together for thirteen years.

A WONDERFUL CAPTAIN.

Collingwood Had Misfortune Always to Follow Someone.

Collingwood's fame is great and lasting, but in the imagination of his fellow-countrymen he remains a somewhat shadowy figure among the more tangible heroes of his time, a man of splendid achievement and of undimmed reputation, but one who never moves alone, or first, across the stage, says Henry Newbolt in The London Graphic. This was his destiny from the beginning; wherever he went in life he found a greater man ahead of him.

There is something strangely ominous in the regularity with which he was sent by fate to sail in Nelson's wake. As a lieutenant he succeeded him first in the Lowestoffe and then in the Bristol; as a commander he followed him in the Badger, and as a post-captain in the Hinchinbroog. He was with him under Hughes in the West Indies, and gave him invaluable backing through the troubles over the Navigation Laws; seconded him in his magnificent disobedience at St. Vincent; carried out his plan for the Trafalgar attack; succeeded him in the Mediterranean command, and there found death, after a wearier struggle, but in the same obedience to the love of duty.

It is true that of this extraordinary record part only was the work of accident; part may have been due to the insight of the authorities, and the most memorable items were the result of Collingwood's own genius for loyalty. But the result has been that the public has hitherto been content to find the biography of Collingwood in the Life of Nelson, and has taken little pains to form a clear picture of the man himself, apart from his memorable services and his almost more memorable friendship. Another contributing cause was, no doubt, the fact that Collingwood was actually less visible to his contemporaries than any prominent Englishman of his time. To the people of these islands he was a name, a force, a safeguard, but hardly a living and conversible being—a historical personage who happened to be still alive, but of course out of reach.

For long and continuous sea service his life has no parallel; out of fifty years he spent less than six on shore; from 1793 to his death in 1810 he had but one year at home. In those seventeen years of war he fought in three great battles—the First of June, St. Vincent and Trafalgar—but the rest of the time was passed in the harder service of blockade, the strain of which may be faintly imagined from the fact that at one time he kept the sea for twenty-two months without so much as once letting go an anchor. As he himself wrote when watching off Cadiz in 1806, "A battle is really nothing to the fatigue and anxiety of such a life."

Fortunately, though materials seem to be lacking for a detailed life of Collingwood, it is possible to find him in his letters, which are excellent reading. "I know not where he got his style," said an eminent diplomatist, "but he writes better than any of us." Perhaps that is true of most sailors: they have leisure and loneliness, and minds less crammed with journalistic phrases.

It is not, however, so much the style as the substance of Collingwood's letters that will give the reader the sense of intimacy; even when "the English admiral wishes health and peace" to His Highness the Bey of Tunis, he is less interesting than when he sends a sovereign to his old gardener Scott, to comfort him "in these hard times," or gives directions for the education of his beloved daughters. "How do the dear girls go on? I would have them taught geometry, which is of all sciences in the world the most entertaining." His taste was all for science. "I would have my girls gain such knowledge of the works of the creation, that they may have a fixed idea of the nature of such a world. Whenever they have that," he adds, "nothing on this side of the moon will give them much uneasiness of mind."

His sense of humor is intermittent, but lively: in this vein he loves especially to play with Bounce, the dog (in prose and verse), and admirably relieves the solemnity which naturally accompanied his elevation to the peerage. "The editors of the Naval Chronicle have written to me for the history of my life and progress. . . . So I have employed —— to write a history for me. For my birth and parentage he has selected two or three chapters of Bamfylde Moore Carew; for my service in the West Indies and on the Spanish Main he has the history of the Buccaneers; and for my shipwreck he has copied a great deal out of Robinson Crusoe: all of which, with a few anecdotes from the lives of the admirals, a little distorted, will make, I am inclined to think, a very respectable piece of biography."

The words which immediately follow these give a curious touch of reality. "I have just heard that the Brest fleet is at sea, and coming this way. If they do, I have force enough to beat them all, and it would be a lucky hour." Another vivid stroke, in his account of Lord Howe's victory, is [illegible] nasts." "We received all their broadsides two or three times before we fired a gun. It was then near ten o'clock. I observed to the admiral that about that time our wives were going to church, but that I thought the peal we should ring about the Frenchmen's ears would outdo their parish bells."

Motoring Through the Air.

Barney Oldfield's recent 27-second mile feat recalls to mind the feat of the intrepid motorist, Mr. Coles, who some time ago gave a thrilling performance at the London Alhambra. A platform constructed some feet from the stage, and supported by strong baulks of timber, was approached by a steep chute on one side and steps on the other. Driving the car up the chute, Mr. Coles brought it to a dead stop in a space not an inch longer than the actual length of the car, and then sent it down two flights of stairs, afterwards pulling the car up in its own length. There was no ridge or edge of any kind to the side of the stairs, and a mistake of a quarter of an inch would probably have resulted in a fatal smash-up.

Go South Is New Cry.

Washington, June 15.—With "Go south, young men and immigrants," as his keynote, Representative Ramsdell of Louisiana yesterday addressed the House as a sort of advance agent for the south land in general and Louisiana in particular.

He based his remarks on the exodus of many of "our best citizens into the British possessions north of the U.S., and the rapid congestion of our cities caused by the growing unpopularity of life on the farm, and by the large influx of foreign immigrants, many of whom settle in cities." As a remedy for all these problems, he suggested to the House that the persons concerned should be induced to come to the south.

Has Got the Fortune.

Toronto, June 15.—A letter received in this city from David Burn (nee Kidd) announces that he has received the million-dollar fortune for his own use and the additional $425,000 to establish a home in Toronto to assist fallen girls. The letter is written from Queensland, Australia.

It will be remembered that the recipient, a local evangelist, while in Chicago befriended an unfortunate woman whose father turned out to be an Australian millionaire, who was so grateful that he willed the fortune as above indicated. One condition was that Mr. Kidd change his name to Burn, his own name.

Mr. Burn expects to be home in October.

Made Record Run.

Sarnia, June 15.—The steamer Hamonic, flagship of the Northern Navigation Co., arrived here yesterday morning and reports having broken all records for the run across Lake Superior between Sault Ste. Marie and Port Arthur. The Hamonic was several hours late leaving Sault Ste. Marie, and it was necessary to arrive in Port Arthur at seven o'clock next morning to make train connections. In order to do this, the 270 miles had to be covered in 16 hours, an average of almost 17 1-2 miles per hour. This was done. Her record of 16 hours is 25 minutes better than that made by one of the C.P.R. Clyde built steamers.

Tragedy of a Governess.

New York, June 15.—The body of Miss Minnie Wentz, governess in the family of E. E. Whitman of this city, who mysteriously disappeared last Thursday, was found in a house on Lexington avenue yesterday. There was a pistol wound in the forehead and a revolver lay beside the body in the house cellar.

Washington, June 15.—Various eastern railroads, including the Boston & Maine, and also the Canadian Pacific, have agreed to postpone the date of a proposed increase of ten per cent. in lumber rates from June 15 to August 1, in order to give the Interstate Commerce Commission an opportunity to investigate the proposed increases.

Straw Hat Delayed.

Ottawa, June 15.—The soldiers at the Niagara camp will not have their straw hats this year. At the Militia Department it is stated that the ship bearing the hats from Mexico to Canada has met with an accident and will not arrive in time.

Old-Age Pensions.

Paris, June 15.—The Government has decided that it will be impossible to apply the workmen's old-age pension law, which will cost the Treasury more than $25,000,000 annually, until the last quarter of 1911.

The Pullman Car Co. were refused an injunction to prevent the lowering of sleeping car rates.

A Sensational Shooting.

Woodstock, Ont., June 15.—A sensational shooting affray took place at the Buckingham Hotel last night, when Frank Scott, a former wine clerk in the house, opened fire on Mrs. McBride, daughter of H. A. Willis, proprietor of the hotel. Of the three shots that were fired from a 32-calibre repeater, only one took effect. Mrs. McBride was hit in the arm and a serious wound inflicted. She was, however, not fatally shot. The affair took place in the proprietor's private apartments.

Scott was at the races in Toronto and returned here a few days ago. For some days past he has been on a spree. Scott and Mrs. McBride had a violent quarrel last night, and it was as a climax to this that he drew a revolver and shot her. It was probably owing to his unsteady physical condition from his prolonged drunk that he failed to kill her. Scott was arrested a few minutes after the shooting.

Mrs. McBride is well known in the city, having lived here all her life. A peculiar feature of her marriage, several years ago, was that a few days after her marriage to McBride they separated, and she returning to her home here. Her husband is believed to be in Toronto.

Music Loving Spiders.

It has been asserted that spiders possess a sensitiveness to musical sounds. Some species seem to respond to the notes of the piano, the harp, the flute, and so on, in a manner suggestive of their ability to recognize these sounds or the harmonic vibrations on which they are based. But Professor Lecaillon of Paris, who has made a special study of the instincts and the supposed "psychism" of spiders, thinks that the apparent sensitiveness of these insects to music has been misunderstood. It is thought that when musical instruments are played near their nests the spiders simply feel the vibrations through their webs or otherwise without recognizing the musical notes as sounds. The effect upon them is similar to that of the buzzing of an entrapped fly.—Harper's Weekly.

Ancient Mirrors.

A French investigator has lately interested the French Academy of Sciences in his researches concerning the glass mirrors which were used in ancient times in Egypt and in Thrace. They were backed with a highly polished metal, the nature of which has been in question. It has now been ascertained that the metal was almost pure lead, and it is believed that the method of manufacture was to pour the molten lead on the concave surface of disks cut from balloons of blown glass. In consequence of their shape the mirrors minimized the images of objects looked at in them.

Statistics prove indisputably that the increased use of such a pure and wholesome beverage as Regal Lager ensures a decrease in any community's record of intemperance. That alone suggests the truth that Regal is NOT an intoxicant.—Adv.

MR. ARCHBOLD, AS A COUNTRY STORE CLERK. MR VREELAND DRIVING A GROCER'S WAGON. JOHN D. ARCHBOLD (PHOTO BY DAVIS & EICKMEYER). H. H. VREELAND. CHARLES P. STEINMETZ (PHOTO BY DAVIS & EICKMEYER). CHARLES P. STEINMETZ LOOKING FOR WORK.

POVERTY is a prison while you are in it, and a blessing—disguised—after you have escaped from it. Given a choice most of us would prefer to be born with a "golden spoon." Nevertheless the trite fact that the men of achievement began poor remains one of the truest of the copybook sayings, and one which history is constantly repeating. Self-made men are as common in New York city to-day as in the time of the first Astor, and for the most part they recall with pride what they endured at the outset of a successful career. It is the fault of the reader if the story proves unprofitable.

A clerkship in a country store, the smaller and more remote the store the better, has been a very common stepping stone among successful merchants. One who reads the biographies of the great merchant princes of the country is almost convinced that a man is greatly handicapped who has not one day swept out one of these modest establishments. Mr. John Archbold, of Standard Oil fame, is a conspicuous example of this numerous company. Born of Scotch parents in Steubenville, Ohio, about sixty-six years ago, young Archbold found himself while a mere boy face to face with a very practical question. He had received some schooling in Titusville, Pa. Without capital or friends in the great outside world who might assist him his opportunities were naturally limited. From the very first his ambition was to enter trade. His work in the country store was at first of the humblest nature, as that of boys in country stores is likely to be. His genius even in such narrow boundaries soon asserted itself and he was rapidly advanced.

Meanwhile his Scotch thrift had led him to amass from his limited income a small working capital. When oil was struck in this region young Archbold invested his savings in the oil fields and made money from the first. His capital and his influence grew rapidly. The grocery store was abandoned.

When the Rockefellers came to absorb the small dealers throughout Pennsylvania Mr. Archbold's interests were large enough to attract their attention, while his record recommended him as a man worth having among their forces. Mr. Archbold's rise within the great Trust has been phenomenal. To-day his great wealth and influence in many lines of activity and his many benefactions to charity and education have made his name familiar the world over.

Vreeland a Grocer's Boy.

Mr. Herbert Harold Vreeland, president of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, a congeries of companies that he was largely instrumental in uniting and converting to the most modern system of electric traction, is fond of telling how he rose from the ranks. He was the son of a preacher—poor, of course—in the Mohawk Valley, and the education he was to get from schools was practically over at thirteen, when he started driving a grocer's wagon. His first railroad job was loading gravel on construction trains of the Lake Shore Railroad. Switch tender and tie inspector were subsequent employments; then at eighteen he entered the service of the Long Island Railroad and passed through every grade of the transportation department to freight and passenger conductor.

The New York and Northern Railroad offered him better chances of advancement, if not more wages, and he went with that company as conductor. Before he resigned to connect himself with the street railway system of the metropolis Mr. Vreeland had advanced to be general manager of the New York and Northern. This was in 1893, and about that time Mr. Vreeland met Mr. William C. Whitney.

The association of these men was profitable to both, but, as Mr. Vreeland says, particularly to himself, for no one could know Mr. Whitney and remain provincial. Broadest, most far-reaching plans were his province, and he could impress them on people forcibly. In the younger railroad man he found welcome attributes—the power of strong common sense and an unswerving will. That he was far from being a satellite of anybody, however, was quickly and easily proved by Mr. Vreeland. Because he came up through every grade he knows what he is doing when he makes rules for discipline and system. Slack handed people, inefficient employes and a wide range of uncertain characters cannot fool a man who has been "through it all" before them.

Steinmetz's Beginning.

In the electrical world to-day there is no more vital force, no inventive genius more universally admired than Charles P. Steinmetz. As the head and universal genius of the General Electric Company, with more than eighteen thousand trained men working out his ideas, his influence can scarcely be estimated. Other men have longer lists of patents to their credit, but no one has his finger in so many electrical pies. His rise from the lowest ranks of electrical workers has been phenomenal.

Born in Breslau, Germany, in 1866, Steinmetz emigrated early to America. On landing in New York he crossed the Brooklyn Bridge, sought a cheap lodging house and then started out without friends or money to find work. After days of search Steinmetz entered the General Electric Company. His first position was little above that of a common laborer. Four years later he was the head of the experimental laboratory, with a salary he was permitted to name himself.

A few years later, when the present company was incorporated, with all its enormous interests, the directors announced that they considered Steinmetz their most valuable asset. In addition to his bewildering round of duties Steinmetz finds time to lecture in Union College, as well as to write a number of books which are considered authoritative in the world of electricity.

Shoeless Hudson Maxim.

Very significant facts which point to a boyhood of pathetic struggle are those which Hudson Maxim gives about his early career. He was nine years of age before he could read or write, and he was fifteen before he had a pair of shoes on his feet. When it is remembered that these early days were passed in Maine, where the winter climate is rigorous, one has a modern instance of the survival of the fittest. Scarcely fifteen years after the acquirement of the first pair of shoes the young man was offering samples of smokeless powder to his government.

The first money he earned was by teaching a school the bad boys of which had whipped their previous teachers. When Maxim applied for the post the trustees passed his claim to knowledge in the three R's, but asked him:—

"Can you wrestle?"

When the answer was in the affirmative they engaged him, and their choice turned out happily. There were not any boys big enough or bad enough to throw out of a job a youth who needed the wages so badly as Maxim did. He started in to teach himself along with the other scholars, for he says:—

"I had ideas in my head, and in order to give birth to them I felt deeply the necessity of education and discipline."

From Maine to Massachusetts and from the school desk to the printer's form. At Pittsfield, in 1883, he was printing and publishing subscription books. All this time, though, he felt like a round peg in a square hole; he had a bent toward the mechanical services, and he read, experimented and attended lectures, so that in two or three years he had patented several inventions along the lines of ordnance and explosives. He was the first maker of smokeless powder in this country and the first to submit samples to our government.

Eight years ago he sold to the United States the formula of Maximite, which was the first high explosive to be fired through heavy armor plate. Stabillite, a smokeless powder, and Motonite, a new self-combustive material, followed. The boy who wouldn't be thrown out of a job grew into the man who adds to his other capacities the genius of versatility. He has been able to retain pre-eminence among changing conditions.

"Bill" Corey, of Homestead.

From the great army of men enlisted in the steel industries about Pittsburg a surprising number have risen from the ranks to positions of great wealth and influence. Twenty-five years ago there was nothing to distinguish William E. Corey—"Bill" Corey, as he was known—from thousands of other workers in the Homestead plant. He received $1 a day for his services and he was obliged to work very hard for it. He was the son of a hard working coal dealer and was obliged to shift for himself very early in his career.

From the first, however, he had ambitions above his work, and for several years found time and energy to attend night school. Here he studied chemistry and laid the foundations for his rapid advancement. His talents were soon recognized and he was promoted to be a foreman. He had the reputation of getting more out of his men than any other foreman in the works. Later his work attracted the attention of Andrew Carnegie and he was rapidly advanced. His position to-day at the head of the Steel Trust is one of the most responsible and exacting as well as lucrative in the entire industrial world.

Schwab's $1 a Day.

A dollar a day was also the first wage received by Charles M. Schwab from a steel company. It was for driving stakes, and he was then a strong youth of nineteen. He had earned money before then working for neighboring farmers at his home in Lovette, in the Alleghany Mountains, and driving a coach which carried the mails to and from Cresson, Pa.

His earlier days then were those of a hardy, intelligent country boy. In his family surroundings there was plainness without poverty. He went to school—good schools, he has said—and at sixteen he was graduated from St. Francis' College. From these schools young Schwab attained quite as much as could have been expected, but no more. There were books to be read, and he read them; but his tastes were not those of a student of books. In him there was an element of dash, vigor and enterprise which was at variance with scholarly ways.

In close alliance with the impetuosity of his temperament was another strong characteristic which quickly showed itself. This was the disposition to study and the power to rapidly master the means of developing a large manufacturing industry. Already he saw what the steel future was likely to be, and he intended somehow to ally himself with it. The best means of doing this, he decided, was to become a civil engineer.

To Captain Jones, one of the superintendents in the Edgar Thomson Steel Works of the Carnegie company, he confided his ambition. The result was the dollar a day referred to. It was a most modest beginning, but in a year he was Captain Jones' chief assistant, in seven years he was chief of the engineer's department, and under his direction the famous plant at Homestead was built. In 1892 he was superintendent of the Homestead works—a mighty stride to have been made in a little more than ten years.

While he was making it—and, in fact, dating from almost the first day of his menial employment with the steel company—the strongest point of his character began to manifest itself. This was his marvellous capacity for winning the confidence of the men who came in contact with him. His way of meeting people was hearty and inspiring. His aims were open and he usually succeeded in getting others to hope for success for him. Meantime he never swerved from his ambition; he had determined to perfect himself as a producer of steel, and his ambition grew as he was compelled to measure himself with other men.

Everybody knows how the country boy succeeded—how he became president of the Carnegie company in 1897 and the first president of the merged corporations, the United States Steel Corporation, in 1901. He is now president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and worth it is probable he does not know himself how many millions, as he is as active in philanthropy as in business.

Blacksmith Preacher.

The blacksmith's forge has graduated more than one man known to fame, but it is scarcely the schooling one would expect to develop a clergyman of the highest intellectual attainments. Dr. Robert Collyer, a name to be reckoned with in any history of the intellectual life of the country, worked for years as a blacksmith.

Many persons of wealth have worked at the forge for amusement or exercise, and there is the famous precedent of several kings of France; but with young Collyer a living had to be earned and his physical strength determined his work.

His parents, natives of Yorkshire, England, had sent him to school, but he was obliged to leave when he was only eight years old. After that he found time to attend night school for two winters, but here his formal academic education ceased. The young blacksmith came to America in 1850, when he became a local preacher in the Methodist Church. Something of the energy and directness of his early occupation crept into his style and method and he soon attracted attention. After several years spent in Philadelphia the young preacher went to Chicago, later to return at the height of his popularity to settle permanently in New York.

From Printer to College President.

Among college presidents or professors the self-made man, in the literal meaning of the phrase, is necessarily very rare. It will come as a surprise to New Yorkers to hear that President John Houston Finley, of the College of the City of New York, may be included in this classification. The long training necessitating college, university and post-graduate courses forms a wellnigh hopeless barrier for the poor or even moderately prosperous boy. Finley was born on a remote farm near Ridge Coff, Ill., about fifty years ago.

He was brought up on the farm, only enjoying such limited educational advantages as the local public school allowed. On entering the high school he managed to support himself with great effort, working in his spare hours at anything which promised an immediate return. Knox College, at Galesburg, was his goal, but at that time seemed unattainable. His principal income during this period was his wages as a printer. He kept at his task, however, and in the last year of the college course he became the principal of his old high school. From Knox College he proceeded to Johns Hopkins University, and seven years later, in 1892, he was called to the presidency of Knox College. Later he left Knox to take the chair of politics, which had been created for him, at Princeton. His selection for the presidency of the College of the City of New York quickly followed.

Wonder at Ryan's Career.

Fortune is the middle name of Thomas F. Ryan, and it has served him well. Orphaned at the age of five, brought up by a grandmother, with little chance for schooling, he left his meagre inheritance, an unproductive farm on the eastern slope of the Blue Mountains, in Virginia, and wellnigh penniless sought employment in Baltimore. From door to door he went, rebuffed everywhere, but still persistent, until Mr. John S. Barry, a dry goods commissioner, heard the boy's story and gave him work. Modest beginnings were these indeed; so modest that they may be called none at all.

The business training gained under Mr. Barry and the knowledge attaching to it were invaluable to young Ryan. He assimilated it quickly, all the more that his employer, recognizing his clerk's capacity, delighted in guiding his development. He did not urge him to remain in Baltimore when, foreseeing a larger opportunity in New York city, Mr. Ryan removed there in 1870.

Four years later saw him a member of the Stock Exchange, and the older members were blind indeed who did not see in him a vigorous newcomer. The operations on 'Change offered few features with which he was not familiar. Such others as turned up from time to time he mastered without an effort, for all their details came to him as if he had been through similar crises before.

In his first year on 'Change Mr. Ryan showed no characteristic more marked than this of perpetual readiness, almost impossible to be surprised, and it had a foundation in the iron firmness, the unswerving courage, with which he was prepared to grapple and overcome the perils and emergencies of the street.

For ten years he continued in the brokerage business, until a meeting between him and Mr. W. C. Whitney widened his field. This was in 1886, when both gentlemen were engaged in consolidating the various street railways of New York city. From this association came Mr. Whitney's celebrated dictum, which may serve as a biography of T. F. Ryan:—

"He's the most adroit, the surest and most noiseless man I've ever known."

Very few New Yorkers outside of those who pay particular attention to corporation interests and securities know anything about Mr. Ryan. Society knows him not at all; quietly—"noiselessly," to adopt Mr. Whitney's word—he has built himself a gigantic fortune in the metropolis, and there he lives freer from social cares than when he is visiting Oak Ridge, the place he built on the site of his birthplace in Virginia. That is what he likes—to be let alone. It was a characteristic in his early modest days in Baltimore, and his habits have not changed.

Loree's Birth and Rise.

Following a recent rumor of the retirement of E. H. Harriman from the active control of his great railroad interests the wiseacres of Wall street generally agreed that his mantle would fall upon the shoulders of Leonor F. Loree. The two men are close friends and have been intimately associated in many great undertakings. Outside of the world of finance and railroads Mr. Loree is not well known. His position as president of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad and his influence in trusts and corporations too numerous to mention here make him, however, one of the most powerful figures in the street.

Mr. Loree's first work in the railroad business was as chainman in a civil engineer corps, when he struggled over the mountains of Pennsylvania. He was advanced, however, until he became foreman of a gang.

When the news of the Johnstown flood was flashed to the railroad authorities Loree, by a lucky chance, was but a few miles from the scene. He was put in charge of the work of establishing communication with the stricken valley. Bridges had to be built, new roadbeds formed and track laid, with the relief trains waiting impatiently behind him and the world counting the hours. Loree has ever since been known as "the man who made good at Johnstown."

In an incredibly short time trains were running into the city. It is said that throughout this period he spent every hour of daylight on the work, every hour of the night in planning the work, while on Sunday he attended to his correspondence. Still comparatively a young man—he is but fifty-four years old—Mr. Loree is destined to be one of the most inconspicuous railroad men of his time.

Many of the guests of the Hoffman House will recall, some twenty years back, a bright, obliging hall boy named Regan. He had already served a brief apprenticeship in his chosen profession in a small hotel down on Long Island, and if he brought to his work limited experience he had an unbounded ambition. He did not long remain a hall boy, but was advanced to a position in the then famous barroom of the hotel. He rose rapidly from one position to another in this department until he was placed in full charge. To-day James B. Regan attributes his great success in hotel management at the Knickerbocker and elsewhere to the fact that he served in every position in a hotel from the bottom up. He is to-day but forty-seven years of age, all of which have been spent in and about New York.

383 GEORGE ST., PETERBOROUGH.

A LUCID, CONVINCING ADDRESS ON VALUE OF UNDER-DRAINAGE

Prof. W. H. Day of O.A.C. Guelph, Spoke Before Zion Farmers' Club—Splendid Results From Drainage Shown by Heavy Crop Yields—An Excellent Investment for Agriculturist.

A subject of outstanding interest and importance with all progressive farmers, was very ably dealt with at a special meeting of the Zion Farmers' Club, held at Zion Hall on Friday evening, when Prof. W. H. Day, professor of physics at Guelph, spoke on "Underdrainage."

Mr. Henry Stubbs, president of the club, occupied the chair, [illegible] liminary to Prof. Day's address brief and interesting speeches were made by Mr. Wainwright, manager of the Peterborough branch of the Bank of Ottawa, and Mr. H. C. Duff.

Mr. Duff called special attention to the annual meeting of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute at Mr. H. C. Garbutt's farm, Smith, on June 17, when "Underdrainage" will again be the feature topic.

UNDERDRAINAGE.

Prof. Day said this interest in the subject of drainage dated back to the old homestead, where they had a field which, before it was drained, never grew anything but hay or oats. Since the field was drained it had never been sowed later than April but once, and April to June was a clear gain of six weeks. Now it would grow any kind of a crop, and was the second dryest field on the farm.

Seven years ago the speaker was appointed assistant in the department of physics in Guelph. When he took up the work he hadn't thought of drainage very seriously, but when he became interested in his special instruction he became convinced of its vital benefit.

The department of physics at the college at Guelph had been authorized by the Minister of Agriculture to take surveys on farms where drainage was needed.

The task of carrying on these surveys became so heavy that it was impossible for the department to do one-third of the surveying they were called upon to do.

The different farmers who had had their property surveyed were communicated with as to the results from the laying of the drains on their farms. As concrete evidence of the highly profitable results of the drain[illegible] Prof. Day cited numer[illegible]dents in which the names of farmers and the places of residence were given, showing conclusively the immense benefit in the way of large profits that were the direct result of intelligent drainage.

The crops on the lands that were drained had yielded much in excess of what they had when the lands were no tdrained.

The policy of draining all the farm land was not suggested, but there were parts of all farms in every community that required drainage.

As the speaker was coming through the township on the way to the hall he noticed fields that were yielding practically nothing could be made productive and remunerative to the farmer. The investment in drainage was most emphatically justified by the splendid results.

Convincing proof of the value of drainage was shown when Prof. Day produced samples of different crops of grain which were labelled and attached to large cards and could be viewed to full advantage by the audience. On drained land the yield for acre of barley, oats, wheat, rye, buckwheat and other grains was generally speaking, on an easy average twice as heavy on drained land as on undrained lands. The straw was also much bigger.

The average increase per acre in money on actual returns to the department of physics was $21.65.

Drainage on a high calculation would be $25 an acre and when the drainage system was constructed it was there for all time.

Money could be obtained through the township council by any farmer who wanted to borrow it for drainage purposes. The councils knew the results would fully justify the loan and would prove excellent security, so to speak.

To the speaker's mind there was no investment equal to drainage. The dairy cow had been called the mortgage lifter, but there was nothing like tile drainage in that capacity.

In the first place drainage removed the surplus water in the spring. But it was what followed, the air coming into the soil to feed the roots, that was the chief source of benefit because roots had to have air to nourish them. And in the open soil that was drained there was more moisture in the soil in dry weather than there was in the undrained soil.

The third point was that there was more root space which allowed the roots to spread out and down and in a drought a deep root could draw up the moisture out of the soil.

A drained soil was from five to ten degrees warmer in the spring than on undrained soil and it was impossible for a seed to gerimate to advantage without a warm soil.

A well germinated seed and a thrifty plant were necessary to healthy plant life.

When one had decided to drain, the first essential was to determine the fall of the land and in many cases drains had been placed on the wrong fall.

Mr. Duff, at the meeting of the Farmers' Institute on the 17th would give practical information as to the proper methods and system of homemade drainage.

The digging of the trench was the great trouble in the work of underdrainage. The plough could be used with excellent results and the method was well explained in Belletin No. 175.

The ditching machine was the important factor, however, in drainage construction. This was going to solve the labor problem so far as tile drainage was concerned, provided an expert handler could be secured to operate it by contract.

This method would be superior to the co-operative system, and would, the speaker believed, eventually revolutionize drainage.

As to the depth, eighteen inches or two feet would be a proper depth at which to lay the tile, if a greater depth could not be reached, but three feet was the ideal depth.

In lighter soils the drain might be put four to six rods apart, but they should be closer in heavy soil, two rods in many cases being desirable.

In putting in the tile the work should be made permanent, and the tile should be placed as true and as continuous as possible. And no man could dig as straight and satisfactory a drain as a ditching machine.

Care had to be exercised that there was no sag, for an inch of sag took an inch of effectiveness from the drain.

The terms in connection with drainage surveys were: The farmer paid travelling expenses of the man who took the survey, boarded him and took him from and back to the station. The travelling expenses were light, as the surveyor on government work paid a fare of one cent a mile.

CAMPBELLFORD GIVES RECEPTION

THE BOUQUET.

Also what picnic is complete without the pretty young girl, the bouquet and the kiss.

Little Margaret Dickson, daughter of George Dickson, of the Dickson Bridge Works, was the one to offer the bouquets and to receive the imprint from the future Premier of the Dominion.

The leader was splendidly received.

Mr. Borden wasted no time, and beyond expressing his gratification at such a splendid reception, wasted no time in preliminaries. He referred in kindly words to the late Edward Cochrane and said that his place had been worthily filled by Mr. Owen. Speaking of the recent election Mr. Borden pointed out clearly that the men sitting on the treasury benches were in office by a majority of the popular vote of only some ten or fifteen thousand. This was a very meagre majority when the influence of the administration and funds was considered. The Conservatives had no reason to be discouraged. Laurier had been returned to power on the cry, "Let Laurier finish his work." The speaker then reviewed the work, branching out first with that very live and scandelous event the building of the Quebec bridge. He said in part.

QUEBEC BRIDGE.

"The construction of a bridge across the St. Lawrence at Quebec has been recognized by both parties for many years as a national undertaking. Sir Charles Tupper took that position in 1896 and the attitude of the Conservative party with regard to this great national work has never since varied. How has the present administration realized its responsibilities in the construction of so great a national work? Do not forget that the construction of this bridge was and is a gigantic undertaking. When completed it will be the greatest bridge in the world. Its construction involves engineering problems that hitherto have never been attempted. The undertaking of this great work was promoted by a company constituted of certain estimable gentlemen in Quebec engaged in professional and mercantile pursuits few, if any, of whom had any knowledge or experience which would inspire confidence in their management of so tremendous an enterprise. The nominal capital stock of this company was $1,000,000, but until the end of 1903 only $65,000 was actually paid up. A very considerable portion of this sum was employed in paying fees to the directors, who practically constituted the company. According to the answer of the Government based upon the statement of the company itself the directors have received in fees $49,601; of which $24,250 went to Mr. Parent, the president. The secretary received $16,890 and the engineer $45,150, making a total of $111,641; and the greater part of this was paid while the actual paid-up capital of the company amounted to only $65,000. The company had a promise of the following subsidies;—From the Province of Quebec, $250,000; from the city of Quebec, $300,000; and from the Dominion of Canada $1,000,000. In the closing days of the session of 1903 the Government introduced and rushed through Parliament a measure by which Canada guaranteed the bonds of this company for $6,678,200. The act made it essential that the company should increase its paid-up capital stock by $200,000. There was a good deal of juggling with regard to this and it is doubtful, to say the least, whether this condition was ever complied with. Parliament certainly then understood that as the country was committing itself to so enormous an aid towards the enterprise the Government would accept every responsibility as to the character and efficiency of the construction. The Government itself had entertained this view because before submitting the measure to Parliament they had passed an Order-in-Council on 21st July, 1903, authorizing the proper officials to obtain the best expert advice in respect to the plans upon which the bridge was being constructed. This had been done at the request of Mr. Schrieber, chief engineer of the Departmet of Railways and Canals, who was unwilling to accept personally so tremendous an engineering responsibility as was involved in this undertaking. Objections to this was made by Mr. Cooper, the consulting engineer of the Quebec Bridge Co., who considered that such a course would constitute a reflection upon him and would interfere with his authority and status. The Government weakly receded from its wise determination to secure further expert advice. Thery claim that this change of attitude was assented to and approved by Mr. Schrieber, but I am not aware that any written opinion or report of Mr. Schrieber to that effect has ever been produced. The report of the Royal Commission, which investigated the whole matter, makes it perfectly clear that if the Government had not been so weak and foolish as to listen to Mr. Cooper's objection the fundamental defects in the plans would have been discovered and and more than six millions would have been saved to the people of this country. It must also be borne in mind that an able engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Mr. Douglas had carefully considered the plans of the bridge when first submitted to the Department of Railways and Canals and had pronounced them unsafe. Early in August, 1907, alarming conditions made themselves manifest in the work of construction. There was no one capable of comprehending their significance. One sentence from the report of the Royal Commission upon the disaster may be quoted: "On that day (27th August) the greatest bridge in the world was being built without there being a single man within reach who, by experience, knowledge and ability was competent to deal with the crisis." What was the result? On the 29th of August, 1907, the superstructure of the bridge fell and carried with it to the bottom some eighty lives, lost through most deplorable negligence and incompetence. The piers remained intact and uninjured, but it now transpires that they are too light and one of them must be rebuilt so as to bear the weight of the new superstructure, which will be nearly twice as strong and heavy as that which fell. In other words the original piers were quite sufficient for a bridge destined to fall, but entirely inadequate for a bridge intended to stand. Then consider for a moment the outcome. The government has introduced and passed through Parliament a measure by which it has taken over the entire undertaking, thus adopting the course after a loss of $6,000,000 that should have been taken at first. It has, however, treated the Quebec Bridge Co. most generously. It has paid the shareholders the total amount of their paid up stock, together with a bonus of ten per cent. and interest on the money from the time it was paid in. The comapny was so weak financially that it was unable to pay interest on its indebtedness to its bankers. This interest was added to the principal at quarterly periods, and the Government in taking over the undertaking generously paid out for the Company more than $75,000 for interest on overdue interest. The President of the Company evidently devoted more attention to directors' fees than to interest charges. So that the government have treated the shareholders of the Quebec Bridge Co. very handsomely. But in what position does the government find itself in endeavoring to recover the whole, or some part of the $6,000,000 which has been lost? It was supposed that the contract had been made with that enormously wealthy and powerful corporation, the Phoenix Bridge Co., that recourse could be had against that company for the defective plans and that a very considerable proportion of the loss to the country could in this way be made good. But the Minister of Railways has very frankly explained that no such desirable condition prevails. The Quebec Bridge Co. entered into a contract not with the great Phoenix Bridge Co., which naturally desired to avoid any responsibility in connection with so great an undertaking, but made its contract with a company apparently incorporated for the purpose, having a capital of only $50,000. Look over the record of any government in the world and find if you can any example of such utter folly. The Government of Canada was pledged to this work as a national undertaking; it provided in the first place a subsidy of $1,000,000, and afterwards it guaranteed the bonds of the company for nearly $7,000,000. Yet the Bridge Co., with its capital stock of $65,000, was permitted to manage the construction of this work without supervision or control; the plans of the greatest bridge in the world were left to the uncontrolled discretion of the Company and its engineer for fear of wounding Mr. Cooper's feelings, and the Company was permitted to make this contract involving many millions of dollars, with the result that the country has absolutely no recourse against any person or any corporation for the $6,000,000 worth of property which has been destroyed. It is true that the Quebec Bridge Co. did obtain a bond for $100,000 from some guarantee company as an absurdly small security for the performance of work involving more than $6,000,000. It transpires, however, that this amount, relatively trifling to the loss, is not likely to be recovered. The guarantee bond required a certain notice to be given by the Quebec Bridge Co. within a certain period. Between the Company and the Government it appears that the giving of this notice was overlooked and the guarantee company refuses payment on that ground.

The bridge is an essential part of the Transcontinental Railway, which cannot be successfully operated as a through line to the Maritime Provinces until the St. Lawrence is spanned. It is not pretended that the bridge can be completed in less than four years, which will probably extended to six. What will be done with freight on the Transcontal Railway in the meantime?

Six million dollars of the people's money lies at the bottom of the St. Lawrence. The Minister of Railways and Canals has intimated in Parliament that the cost of completion will amount to not less than eleven million dollars. Recent press reports, to which some importance may be attached, indicate that the amount will be nearly fourteen million dollars. The total cost, if this estimate is well founded, will thus amount to no less than twenty million dollars. The present government has established many brilliant records in connection with the construction of this bridge.

Men who carried on business in such a reckless and absurd manner, declared Mr. Borden, should be turned out of office.

A TREMENDOUS PRICE.

The Transcontinental would cost $225,000,000, but the road could not fill its purpose on a through line till this bridge was built.

The Conservatives had been doing their best fighting an uphill fight against wrong doing in high places. While they had not been as successful as they would have wished, they were worthy of the gratitude and consideration in their fight against a majority prompt and ready to carry out the will of the Government.

A NEEDED REFORM.

One of the planks of the Liberal-Conservatives first inaugurated by them at Halifax, and mentioned by the speaker first at Halifax, was a reform in the civil service. Men should be appointed as they are appointed in England, not by pull, but through competitive examination only.

After this protest of the Conservatives the very next session the Liberal Government brought in a bill governing what is known as the inside civil list, or with the employees at Ottawa. This is all very well as far as it goes, but the Government will be compelled to alter the civil service. The idea that pull is necessary for a position is so deep-rooted in the minds of the Liberals, that prospective civil servants at Ottawa yet ask, even after passing their examinations, "What member had I better see to get in."

PUBLIC EXPENDITURE.

When the Liberals had come into power they had promised a reduction in expenditure, but of course they had not kept their promise. However, the speaker declared that a growing country didn't want a reduction in expenditure, but what it wanted, and was entitled to, was to receive for every dollar spent, a dollar's value.

This was a policy that Mr. Hanna was successfully carrying out.

The Conservative party of Canada stood for more decent elections, and wanted to see the contests fought fairly and squarely. They believed that every time the opponents departed from the law they should be punished.

NO CAUSE FOR DISCOURAGEMENT

There was no need for despair in the Conservative ranks. The party had a good cause, and the opponents' cause was one that led itself to attack in the highest degree.

In closing, Mr. Borden promised to return. He was charmed with Campbellford, and marvelled at its natural resources found on all sides. The silver and gold of the distant mines might be alluring, but the district where he stood had resources more enduring and permanent than all these, they were resources that would last forever.

MEMBER FOR EAST PETERBORO.

When the applause ceased J. A. Sexsmith the Dominion member for East Peterborough, received an ovation. In appearance not unlike Roswell Gamey, the man from Manitoulin, and not unlike him in fire and vigor of speech, he won instant attention.

Mr. Sexsmith's address was very brief.

He eulogized Mr. Borden as a leader, as a man who had done much to faithfully serve his country. The picnic was the first political one that he had ever attended, and he felt very pleased to be able to attend.

A GIFTED SPEAKER.

Ex-Judge Doherty, [illegible] said that the [illegible] of Mr. Borden stood for the re-establishment of higher ideals and honesty in public life. This was the reason why some Conservatives were in public life to-day. They wished to revive and re-establish a conception of public honor that is rapidly dying away in high places. It is what the people of Canada want and what they have a right to expect from its Government.

Our fair Dominion should have its leaders preserve its high ideals, the ideals of honor handed down to us by forbears that made our history glorious, by forbears transplanted from the British Isles, and from sons of the great men of France.

A PROUD MOMENT.

Coming from another province, the speaker said he had no higher ambition than to stand with Mr. Borden in the ranks of the Conservative party and assist in the rehabilitation and construction of a proper standard of political morals in Canada.

He was proud to stand on the platform of common Canadianism to do this, but he didn't wish it to be understood that he was capable of sounding the mind and mysteries of the men who at present controlled the destinies of the country. The Liberals did not say that there was no need of house cleaning in their departments, and admitted they were wrong in spots. This was after the Globe, the Montreal Herald and Ottawa Free Press had formed a chorus crying "clean up." The speaker, innocent, believed Sir Wilfrid that modern Hercules, as he pulled himself together for the task of cleaning out the Auguean stables, conscious of neglect for whose neglect he was responsible. It was a splendid spectacle to see him gather himself together for this task. But it was a spectacle, nothing more.

A COMMISSION.

A commission was appointed, graft in the Marine Department uncovered, and Canada scandalized.

The speaker made enquiries and this modern Hercules smiled and replied, "to the pure all things are pure," and expressed surprise that these Auguean stables did not smell good to the enquirer, for they did to him.

But the smell grew so rank that finally the little offenders were punished, though the big offenders went free.

Men who should have gone to the penitentiary went free, and the grafters transferred their business to another department, for to the pure all things are pure.

AN ELEPHANT.

Yes, this Hercules, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, labored, labored and brought forth, not a mouse, but an elephant, not a white elephant, either the affair was too dirty for that, but an elephant to be carried on the shoulders of the people of Canada.

WON'T TRUST THE PEOPLE.

A party that is in power and will not trust the people with a knowledge of how it administers its affairs should not be trusted by the people.

In happy picture of future Conservative success, when Mr. Borden would one day be Premier of the Dominion and right the many grievances now existant, Mr. Doherty closed his address.

THE PROVINCIAL SECRETARY.

Hon. W. J. Hanna received a very warm welcome. He briefly reviewed Mr. Borden's career during the past ten years and predicted the day would come when he would become Premier of the Dominion.

The Ontario Government was being run by men with common sense principles. They did not claim to be perfect, but they kept their promises.

They had put the bucket shops out of business and had lowered the price of school books. As an illustration Mr. Hanna gave the arithmetic book which sold formerly at 40c. now going at 9c.

The Conservative administration was not as Hon. Geo. W. Ross and his party would have the electors believe when in office, heaven born. They were men running the Government on business principles and during their years of office no charge had been laid against them.

Mr. Hanna referred humorously to the buried ballot boxes in connection with the great Liberal scandal of some years ago.

He closed with a reference to his prison work which was listened to with much interest.

AN M. P. AND AN M.P.P.

The hour was late and the day very warm and very tactfully J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., representative of East Peterborough, and James Thompson, M.P.P. for the same riding, when called upon, spoke very briefly.

TO THE VERY END.

A CHANGE -- A REST

Three years ago the 16th of January last Mr. Browett Dr. of Optics of Philadelphia moved his family to Peterborough, located permanently as a citizen and began to establish an Optical business here and since that time he has never spent more than a day out of the city. This seemed neccessary to establish a new business and now for the first time he is spending a few days on a business trip teaching and examining Opticians. Mr. Browett has received a permit to see every detail of the process of the manufacture of lenses and spectacles of the famous Bauch & Lomb Optical Co. in Rochester, N. Y., and will before returning be shown through the immense factory where about 2000 hands are employed. Mr. Browett hopes to return by the 18th., much refreshed by his holidays and with new Ideas and equipment for carrying on the ever business of The Optical Institute. Mr. Browett wishes to thank the citizens of Peterboro' and the people of the vicinity for the patronage which has been given during the past three years and assure them that it shall be his constant endeavors to render the best possible service in the examination of the eyes for glasses and supplying the most modern styles of finest quality and best value.

TORONTO CONSERVATIVES GIVE LEADER BIG OVATION

Second Rally of the Big Ontario Tour is Taken up With an Arraignment of the Government's Extravagant Expenditure.

Toronto, June 16.—Considering the fact that it was a working day, and that Long Branch is nine miles from the centre of the city, the political picnic under the auspices of the Conservative Associations of the Fifth and Sixth Wards was very well attended, about 1,500 being present.

It was the occasion of R. L. Borden's second address in his present tour. A discussion of Canada's naval policy was the chief item. Mr. Borden has departed from the usual custom of political speakers, and instead of trying to cover a multiplicity of subjects, he will devote in each address an outline of some particular subject, supplementing it with a few remarks upon several subjects of interest.

Owing to the dual nature of the gathering, Dr. R. B. Orr, president of Ward Six Association, and J. R. L. Starr, president of Ward Five Association, presided together. On the platform with Mr. Borden were: Hon. C. J. Doherty, M.P.; Hon. A. J. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer; Hon. J. J. Foy, Attorney-General; Hon. J. O. Reaume, Minister of Public Works; E. B. Osler, M.P.; R. Blain, M.P.; Dr. Forbes Godfrey, M.P.P.; W. K. McNaught, M.P.P.; S. Charters, M.P.P.; Geo. M. Perley, M.P.; A. A. Aubin, M.P.; Dr. R. J. Wilson; Claude Macdonnel, M.P.; Hon. Thos. Crawford, and a thoroughly representative gathering from the ridings in and around Toronto. A brass band helped to enliven the proceedings.

Mr. Borden was well received. He first attacked the Government's expenditures, especially in regard to public works.

"I do not pretend to say that they should cut off the expenditures. A Government must be liberal with the public revenues. But what has become of the $367,000,000 excess of revenue in the last ten years, and $78,000,000 added to the public debt," he asked. "Look about you in the Province of Ontario, in Quebec, in the Maritime Provinces, in the west, and tell me, if you can, where in the name of all that is reasonable, all that money has gone to. Before 1896 the Government maintained the public works in a reasonably good condition."

After a reference to the Quebec bridge scandal, Mr. Borden explained at some length the attitude of the party on the question of a Canadian navy.

Queen Will Be Regent.

London, June 16.—Premier Asquith introduced in the House of Commons last night a bill appointing Queen Mary regent in the event of the demise of King George during the minority of the Duke of Cornwall.

MANY LIVES LOST BY FLOODS IN EUROPEAN COUNTRIES

Cologne, Germany, June 16.—Stories of death and sufferings of the survivors are brought by refugees from the flooded valley of the Ahr. The waters are rapidly subsiding, but while at their height they wrought frightful damage. Several villages on the banks of the River Ahr were literally washed away. Houses collapsing, buried their occupants beneath the flood. So strong was the current that it swept away locomotives and steam road rollers as a child might scatter its toys.

In some instances, where the villagers, driven from their homes by the vagrant waters, lacked time to reach the hill tops, they climbed into the branches of trees, only to be drowned as the rising waters, tore the trees up by their roots and bore them away.

Near the mouth of the Ahr River a rescuing party recovered the bodies of a woman and an infant. The little one was tightly clasped in the mother's arms.

Thirty-Five Lives Lost.

Belgrade, Servia, June 16.—Floods following torrential rains, have caused havoc in the valley of the Morava River. Thirty-five lives have been lost. The towns of Chupari, Jagodina and Svilainattz have been inundated. Water to a depth of from seven to ten feet has filled the streets. Many houses undermined have collapsed.

Immense Damage In Switzerland.

Berne, Switzerland, June 16.—Inundation caused by swollen streams in the eastern and central districts of Switzerland have caused immense damage. A landslide at Altorf buried a factory building, killing a woman and ten children, employes.

Belgium Also Suffers.

Brussels, Belgium, June 16.—Unprecedented rains throughout Belgium have been followed in the low-lying districts by flood conditions, creating heavy losses. Bridges have been carried away and stock drowned.

The village of Moos has been devastated by the vagrant waters.

Floods In Armenia.

Constantinople, June 16.—Despatches received here say that terrible floods have swept over the Province of Erzeroum, Turkish Armenia. Half of the town of Bassankalek has been wrecked, hundreds of persons being drowned. The flood resulted from heavy rains.

Cut Off by Floods.

Munich, Bavaria June 16—Oberammergau, the scene of the passion play, is to-day cut off from railway communication with outside points by the floods. Of the 600 strangers in the place 300 are Americans. It is believed that these are in no danger, as the hotels are on high ground. The lower streets are filled with water.

The meteorological observatories in the higher Alps announce that the snow is melting rapidly, and that greater floods are expected.

Floods In Austria-Hungary.

Vienna, June 16.—Floods caused by the rain have done serious damage in many parts of the monarchy. The Northern Tyrol Railway has suffered greatly and all traffic over this road in Vorarlberg, has been suspended owing to the destruction of bridges and embankments. Many lives have been lost.

HENRI BOURASSA REPLIES TO CRITICS

Montreal, June 16.—The opponents of Henri Bourassa have accused that gentleman of shedding too bitter tears over Goldwin Smith, who, they claim, had always been an enemy of the French race and the Roman Catholic religion. The Nationalist leader replies to his critics in Le Devoir.

It is true, Mr. Bourassa says, that Goldwin Smith accompanied some Canadians to New York in 1893, on an annexation joint, but the Oxford professor broke up the conference when the American end of the junta wanted to put up a lot of money to buy up the Canadians en bloc. Mr. Bourassa relates that one of the Canadians present, who was later on a provincial Minister and afterwards a member of the Laurier Government said, "The old fool. We might have taken the money anyway."

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

ROYAL EDWARD BREAKS RECORD

Quebec, June 16.—Two hours have been clipped from the Canadian trans-Atlantic record from dock to dock.

The Canadian Northern's new triple-screw turbine steamer Royal Edward, which left Bristol at 8 p.m. on Thursday last, docked here yesterday at 3:30 p.m., beating the best previous performances of any Canadian steamer by two hours. It was confidently expected here that she would dock at noon, as a wireless despatch received yesterday morning from Capt. Roberts, her commander, reported the passing of Father Point at 6.10 a.m.

Shortly after passing Father Point the Royal Edward encountered dangerous fog banks and was compelled to proceed from that point on at reduced speed, otherwise a more spectacular reduction of the record would have been effected.

Aviator's Lucky Escape.

New York, June 16.—Capt. Baldwin fell with his aeroplane 75 feet while he was practicing yesterday in Mineola, L.I., but, though his machine was badly smashed, he was not injured.

ATTACK ON ROOSEVELT SQUELCHED

London, June 16.—A scathing denunciation of former President Roosevelt, because of his Guildhall speech, was stopped in the House of Commons yesterday by Speaker Lowther. Sir Henry Dalziel, in debating the appropriation for the Foreign Office, condemned Earl Grey's approval of the Roosevelt utterances, and was denouncing Roosevelt personally, when the Speaker interfered.

"Mr. Roosevelt's salary is not paid by the Foreign Office and his statement has no part in this debate," ruled the presiding officer, and Dalziel quit.

Como, June 15.—The American government has now taken a hand respecting the murder of Mrs. Porter Charlton, whose body was found in a trunk at the bottom of Lake Como. The victim of this cruel crime was stabbed and evidently placed in the trunk while still alive. A Russian is held on suspicion, but protests his innocence.

FOURTEEN DIE BY FIRE IN AUSTRIAN LODGINGS AT FALLS

Twelve Workmen on the Canadian Power Plant Are Found Burned to a Crisp After Fire—Woman and Baby Taken Out Alive, But Die Later.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 16.—Fourteen Austrians, twelve of them workmen on the Canadian Power Development, one woman and a child, were burned to death and one other foreigner fatally injured, early yesterday morning in a fire which destroyed some shacks at Fallsview, Ont.

It is not known positively how the blaze started. The men were trapped in their rooms and suffocated before help could arrive.

It appears the foreigners, known at the power works by checks and numbers, had been celebrating after the big carnival Tuesday that opened the Niagara tourist season. They had a keg of beer among them, and it is believed many of them were intoxicated and in such a state of stupor they were unable to escape when the fire broke out. The origin of the flame is still a mystery, but it was at 12.45 that the firemen turned out.

When the department arrived at the scene of the tragedy, which is just outside the city limits of Niagara Falls, Ont., and beyond the fire protection system's hydrants, the three shacks in which the foreigners lived were all practically destroyed. The Austrians could not speak English, but the survivors succeeded, by using signals, in indicating that some of their number had not escaped.

The firemen made a search and recovered 12 charred bodies. They also found three persons—a man, a woman and a child—living, but terribly burned. There were removed to the General Hospital, but no hope was held out for their recovery. They lived in a shack apart from the one in which the dozen succumbed.

Both Mrs. Janic and child died in hospital yesterday afternoon from the effects of their burns, making the total number of deaths fourteen.

According to one theory the 12 who were burned died because the stairway they were descending in a panic gave way. It is said this theory is borne out by the fact that the bodies were all found huddled together in a heap.

The conditions under which the Austrians lived are almost sure to come in for condemnation if an inquest is held. It is said 150 persons lived in two moderate-sized buildings, packed in like bees in a honey box. The third shack, it appears, was vacant.

The buildings were one and a half storeys high, and had been standing ever since work was first started in power development at the Falls on the Canadian side.

DEATH OF CANON GRIBBLE'S WIFE

St. Catharines, June 16.—Julia, wife of Rev. Canon Gribble, died yesterday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Powell, Port Dalhousie. She was 82 years of age and leaves three sons, George of Toronto, Francis of Saskatchewan, Arthur of Belleville, and two daughters, Mrs. Powell, Port Dalhousie, and Mrs. Brand of Bombay, India.

Power Employe Electrocuted.

Cobalt, June 16.—John W. Richmond, aged 40, employed by the Cobalt Power Co., was electrocuted in the power house yesterday morning.

Richmond went into the basement to leave a pail of water and crawled under the safety screen and came in contact with the power wire carrying several thousand volts.

PUT POISON IN DINNER

Brockville, June 16.—Charles Landon, a tinsmith, in the employ of Sheridan and Power for twelve years, is in jail on remand, charged with attempting to poison Sheridan, the senior member of the firm.

Sheridan had been in the habit of bringing his dinner to the shop. He detected a peculiar taste in the tea on three different occasions, and each time investigated the source of the milk supply, which was found O.K. His suspicions then became aroused, and, filling his tea can with water, the same peculiar acid taste was noticeable.

Finally a trap was laid for Landon. A constable was placed in hiding in the shop, and Landon, being alone, was noticed to remove the cover from Sheridan's lunch basket, open the can and drop in a powder or some other substance.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

J. A. Beales was found shot to death on his doorstep in the Blue Hill district of Saskatchewan.

The forest fires in northern Ontario have destroyed a school, a mill and several settlers' dwellings.

William Lawlor, an employe of the Inland Navigation Co. from Hamilton, disappeared at Montreal.

Joseph Hemenack was killed and William Kelly fatally injured by a fall of coal in a mine at Coleman.

L. J. Atwater, manager for Patriarche & Co. at Buffalo, was indicted on a charge of keeping a bucket shop.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy and a party of C.P.R. directors are going to inspect the Dominion Atlantic Railway in Nova Scotia, of which the C.P.R. recently secured control.

MIXED MARRIAGES WERE CONDEMNED

Kingston, June 16.—Addressing the large number of Orangemen who took part in the annual church parade of the Grand Lodge of "Prentice Boys," Rev. F. Fitzgerald took occasion on Tuesday night to point out the evils of "mixed marriages."

Such alliances between members of antagonistic faiths, according to the preacher, are almost sure to turn out badly. Wherefore he besought his young hearers to keep company only with Protestant young women and to avoid intimacies with those who are not of their faith.

WARNING TO CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

Foreign Countries Are Crying For the Gospel.

Edinburgh, June 16.—The delegates to the World's Missionary Conference, which organized Tuesday, got down to the real work of the international meeting yesterday.

A warning to the Christian churches of the world that a decisive hour for missions had come, was given in the report of the commission on carrying the gospel to all the non-Christian world. The commission says that opportunities which have been neglected in the past are the reproach of the church. It urges that an international committee be formed, and that a great movement to carry Christianity into every region with increased force be undertaken.

The advance of Islam in equatorial Africa presents the question, the report says, whether the dark continent shall become Mohammedan or Christian. India and the Mohammedan world as a whole, particularly Turkey and Persia, are pointed out as other large fields for effort.
